One Safe As Supersonic Bomber Crashes In Utah

THEY'LL HAVE TO CORRECT THE SUN — Marvin W. Brigham, county director of public works, and Leslie Wider (foreground), county building maintenance supervisor, check what's to be done to make Courthouse Square sundial tell the right time when Daylight Saving Time starts tomorrow. Wider's answer: rotate the base enough to make the shadow of the pointer fall one hour-figure later. He plans to do it Monday.

Wind Drags Chute In Mud Killing Pilot

Captain Survives Hamilton Training Plane Smashup

One of the two Hamilton Air Force Base jet fighter pilots who crashed while on a routine training mission yesterday was pronounced dead on arrival at the base hospital less than an hour after he was fished from the mud flats of San Pablo Bay.

He was 1st Lt. Bernell A. Mason, 25, of Aurora, Tex. Strong winds drug his parachute into the mud.

The flier who parachuted from the F104B, with Mason was Capt. Orland Wayne Jensen, 39, of 195 Alameda de la Loma, Novato. Jensen parachuted to safety from a similar plane last Nov. 10. He was hospitalized at the base, suffering from mild shock.

The crash was caused by a flameout of the engine, a base spokesman said.

STUDENT PILOT

Mason was a student pilot in the two-man plane which was returning to the base for a landing after a 35-minute flight. The plane crashed five miles east of the field near the mouth of Petaluma Creek.

A witness, Lt. Col. Robert H. Benesh of Larson Air Force Base, Wash., said both fliers ejected from the plane at an altitude of 2,000 feet Jensen was picked up from the mud by a base helicopter piloted by Capt. Henry Fogg. A Coast Guard helicopter from San Francisco International Airport picked up Mason moments later.

Benesh was the pilot of a C47 transport plane which was preparing to land with a load of Air Force ROTC students from Washington. He said he and his passengers were watching the jet fighter when both men ejected.

"Their chutes opened almost simultaneously," Benesh said. They came down like two peas in a pod."

CHUTE COLLAPSES

He said one of the parachutes collapsed on landing but the other failed to collapse and billowed in the strong wind, dragging one of the men through the mud at a speed of about 10 knots.

Mason, who was being dragged by his chute, appeared to be unconscious, Benesh said.

First word of the crash was flashed to the base operations tower by Benesh who orbited his plane over the scene of the accident until the helicopters arrived.

Jensen climbed aboard the helicopter under his own power, Capt. Fogg said. An unidentified paramedic aboard the coast guard helicopter attempted artificial respiration on Mason but the pilot never regained consciousness.

Jensen was the pilot of another F104B which crashed in the bay about a mile south of the base runway last Nov. 10. He bailed out, and was rescued from the water by a SA16 Albatross of the now deactivated 41st Air Rescue Sqdn.

Rhee Agrees To Relinquish Some Power

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — President Syngman Rhee agreed today to yield some of his strongman power and reform his badly shaken government.

A cabinet minister said the 85-year-old Rhee would bring back the premier-cabinet system of government he once scrapped.

At the same time, Lee Kipoong, Rhee's hand-picked heir, was reported resigning the vice presidency he was to have taken over Aug. 15.

RESIGNS IN PROTEST

Earlier, lame duck Vice President John M. Chang, head of the opposition Democrat party, resigned in protest against Rhee's government.

The swift developments left Korea's political scene in confusion in the midst of the crisis created by bloody antigovernment outburst. Police shot and killed at least 128 demonstrators and wounded nearly 800 last Tuesday.

The rioters were protesting the mid-March landslide election won by Rhee and Lee was rigged.

Since Tuesday's blood-bath the heavily armed police and troops patrolling the main centers have held their fire.

Today 3,000 students marched through the streets of Inchon demanding that Rhee and Lee resign. The students paraded for more than four hours and threw rocks at police stations and the local offices of the Liberal party. Police made no effort to halt the demonstration.

MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT

The announcement of Rhee's decision to change the government came from Home Minister Hong Chin-ki who said the government would submit the required constitutional changes to the National Assembly soon. There was still much speculation on just how much power Rhee would be willing to relinquish.

South Korea formerly had a cabinet system of government but abolished it. Since then the nation has followed the American pattern putting executive powers in the hands of an elected president who picks his own cabinet.

NO BERLIN CRISIS SEEN BY DE GAULLE

French Leader Says Big Four Must Work To Relax Tensions; Aid Poorer Nations

COMBINED AP AND UPI

WASHINGTON—Charles de Gaulle said today he sees no chance of solving the Berlin problem at next month's summit meeting—but that he does not believe Nikita Khrushchev will force a new crisis on the issue.

The French president told a massive news conference at the National Press Club that the Big Four leaders "above all" must grapple at Paris with the "crucial point" of relaxing general East-West tensions.

"If we make some progress in this matter . . . gradually solutions to the problems that divide the world will begin to appear," he said "solutions which no one (has) thought of proposing under the present circumstances."

PRE-SUMMIT TALKS

The 69-year-old French leader, here for pre-summit talks with President Eisenhower, said this applied to disarmament, German problems, aid to underdeveloped countries and many other matters.

De Gaulle said he considered it possible "from a practical point of view" to make a start on control of nuclear weapons and bases at the summit meeting in Paris May 14 of himself, Eisenhower, Khrushchev and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

As far as Berlin is concerned, I do not see now a possible solution," the French leader declared. "But I envisage a common control of nuclear weapons which should start by the control of planes, missiles and bases."

'MAJOR CRISIS'

De Gaulle replied indirectly when asked whether he believed Khrushchev "will precipitate a major crisis over Berlin at the summit" if the Western leaders reject his demand that they get out of the city.

"I cannot foresee nor take responsibility for the tactics displayed by the president of the presidium of the Soviet Union," de Gaulle said. "But it seems to me that had the Soviet Union wanted to keep on the pressure and the threat looming over the west because of Berlin, it would have done so, and the Soviet Union did not."

De Gaulle also called on the United States, Russia and the other great powers to launch a cooperative economic program for the benefit of underdeveloped countries of Africa

$10 Million Craft Falls Near Lake

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (UPI) — One crewman of a B-58 Hustler, missing since yesterday, was rescued today from the cold water of Great Salt Lake but the fate of two companions aboard the supersonic bomber remained unknown.

The Air Force believed the $10 million plane, capable of speeds twice that of sound, had crashed in the shallow waters in the north end of Great Salt Lake or in the sagebrush-dotted desert bordering the inland sea.

The known survivor was Kenneth G. Timpson, 29, Fort Worth, Tex., a flight test engineer of the all-civilian crew.

Missing were pilot Ray Edwin Tenhoff, 38, and Walter Simon, 32, navigator-bombardier.

HIT BY COLD

Timpson, suffering a little from a night in the open, said he was ordered to bail out at 4 p.m. yesterday when the plane was flying about 500 miles per hour at an altitude of 17,000 feet over the lake.

The craft had just completed a practice bombing run in the Wendover area and was to make a radar bombing approach at a Salt Lake City simulated target.

Timpson said he never saw either Simons or Tenhoff after leaving the plane. The engineer parachuted into 10 feet of water, inflated his life raft, and paddled one mile to shore at Little Valley, an abandoned construction camp used for the recently completed dirt fill causeway built across the lake by Southern Pacific Railroad.

Timpson fashioned a lean-to where he spent the night. This morning he trudged until he found a sheep camp where sheepherder Chris Choulos took Timpson to the railway flag stop of Saline where they flagged a passing freight train.

MEDICAL EXAM

The train brought Timpson to Ogden where a hasty medical examination pronounced him uninjured. He was then brought to Hill Air Force Base for questioning by Air Force investigators.

Three helicopters from the base were assigned to search for the missing plane. It was raining heavily throughout Salt Lake Valley and helicopter crewmen reported visibility was badly impaired.

The plane, built for the Air Force by Convair, apparently was on an acceptance flight prior to its actual delivery to the Air Force. It had taken off from the Convair plant at Fort Worth where it had been built.

The pilot had last radioed the control tower at Salt Lake City at 2:55 p.m. yesterday that he was returning to Fort Worth.

Air Pollution Board Gets Efficiency Study

Supervisor William Gnoss of Novato said today that he has received a copy of an efficiency report on smog control ordered by Bay Area Air Pollution Control District directors of whom he is one, and chairman last year.

"I haven't had time to read it yet," said Gnoss, "but we felt that the situation required inquiry and that we might get more action through such a survey."

Although the report recommends more technical personnel, Gnoss said that directors have not hitherto felt that any more people were needed.

The report was critical of the operating personnel as indulging too much in efforts at public relations, and by implication not enough in smog control itself. It also said a salary survey should be made as wages seemed high.

The report was prepared by the firm of Ernst & Ernst, accountants and business management, at the suggestion of Benjamin Linsky, control officer—but Linsky was told in the findings that his main job should be that of district management.

To this Linsky has responded that his public relations efforts have caused industry to be more cooperative in trying to bring smog under control. He also says with regard to the charge of too-high pay that he has been able to hire competent technicians only by offering salaries that are "competitive" with other potential employers.

Gnoss returned to Novato late last night after attending board hearings on regulation of industrial plants and large incinerators. It expects to adopt draft regulations with tougher requirements May 4, planning for full enforcement by the end of this year.

More Rainfall Seen For Marin

Light rains fell intermittently on Marin last night and today, with prospects that measurable amounts would fall during the weekend.

Sausalito, Marin City, Mill Valley and other points in south and middle areas reported showers in varying degrees last night. A chilly 39 degrees was recorded in Woodacre. Further cool weather was expected through the weekend.

Snow was falling today in the Sierras.

It's That Time Again; Change Your Sundials

By RANDALL GOULD

It won't help a bit to look at your sundial tomorrow morning (unless you reset it as in the picture above). If you want the right time of day it will be better to dial RO 7-8900.

Another good system would be to set your watch AHEAD one hour just before you doze off tonight.

Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., at any rate, is taking due precautions to see that the voice with the word on what time it is doesn't flub her assignment tomorrow just because Daylight Saving Time will once more be in effect.

Sun time and man's time will undergo their annual divergence not only in Marin County but in about half the rest of the United States. Elgin National Watch Co.'s publicity people have figured that at least 91,275,000 persons will lose an hour of sleep tonight.

That goes on the assumption that all those people are going to know the right time of day tomorrow morning and additionally are going to get up at their regular hour, none of which is necessarily so.

But people who do their regular sleeping tonight will confront a horrible dilemma tomorrow night, either going to sleep early by the clock or to skip that hour of sleep Monday morning.

Of course they can go to the office an hour late Monday, but that isn't recommended in most instances.

The phone people expect that the time-telling voice of Mrs. Berrien Moore Jr. is going to be called on for information tomorrow a vast number of times more than the usual average, figured at 1,779 calls daily in San Rafael alone.

That won't worry Mrs. Moore a bit. She will be in Atlanta, Ga., as usual. Her voice is taperecorded Talk with her all you like.

Lots of people say "Thank you" when Mrs. Moore tells them the time, not just in Marin County but all over. The courtesy doesn't do a bit of harm but it doesn't do Mrs. Moore any good.

She had her voice recorded on one tape counting to 12 for the hours, and on another tape she counted to 59 for the minutes. On a third is her voice introducing her time-talk with the words "The time is . . ."

These three tapes are fixed on individual revolving drums and all over America mechanics are busy seeing to it that from midnight on, the tapes will talk on a Daylight Saving Time basis.

Fifty-nine Northern California communities get Mrs. Moore's voice with an average of 193,000 requests most days; a whole lot more the first day the time has changed, and then again when it changes back.

Your sundial won't be reliable again till the last Sunday in September.

Hub Mayor Signs Pact For Firehouse

Mayor Arthur W. Smith of San Anselmo announced today that he has signed lease agreements for construction of its projected No. 2 firehouse on a lease-purchase plan.

"It's all up to the San Anselmo Fire Station Building Corp. to go ahead as quickly as possible now,' said Smith. "Things should move from now on."

The way was cleared for Smith's action when Judge Thomas F. Keating handed down a ruling Thursday affirming the legality of the plan. Smith had formerly declined to sign in order to bring the issue before the court in an agreed test case.

By terms of the plan, city property on Butterfield road at Arroyo avenue will be leased to the building corporation on condition that a firehouse will be built there and leased back on a fair rental basis for not less than 50 years, with 20-year option for the city to purchase no earlier than 1973.

Gremlins Blamed For Raid Signals

Those eerie wails from air raid sirens in various Marin County areas yesterday afternoon were not due to air raids.

Gremlins known as short circuits apparently were to blame. The sirens sounded without human aid, the sheriff's office said.

ANOTHER REPRIEVE?

Jurist's Retirement Plans Give Chessman New Hope

As a faint glint of hope appeared for Caryl Chessman today from Sacramento, San Quentin Prison official machinery turned in preparation for gas chamber execution of the convict-author May 2.

The hope came through announcement that Justice Homer R. Spence—one of the four state supreme court judges who voted against commutation to life imprisonment for Chessman early this year—will retire June 1.

It was suggested in Sacramento that Gov. Edmund G. Brown might grant another reprieve, for perhaps 30 days, till appointment of a successor to Spence who might join three other justices inclined toward mercy and thus give the governor the legal sanction he requires for executive clemency.

Prison officials meanwhile announced rules for the ninth scheduled execution date, including slight change in previous arrangements projected.

Associated Warden Walter D. Achuff pointed out that radiotelephone equipped cars, to be used by some news media because of shortage of the prison's phone facilities, will be kept behind a barrier near the community hall instead of at the inspectoscope gate as previously planned.

This is farther to the eastward, consequently a little farther from the execution chamber, but it affords a clear view uninterrupted by any nearby buildings, Achuff said.

Attendance at the spectators' area outside the "green room" will be limited to 60 outside people, additional to the necessary officials.

George T. Davis announced that he was still one of Chessman's attorneys despite a recent letter from Chessman asking him to withdraw. He showed another letter from Chessman confirming that Davis remains an attorney of record along with Rosalie Asher and A. L. Wirin.

I-J SCHOOL SERIES TO START MONDAY

One week each year, many people, who mostly take schools for granted, give them a little extra thought and attention.

That's during Public Schools Week, which starts Monday.

While schools are in the limelight, the Independent-Journal, starting Monday, will present a series of articles on school unification in Marin County: what has been proposed, what the advantages and objections are to the various plans, what may be expected to happen.

Watch for this series, by reporter Donald G Davis, starting Monday in the Independent-Journal.

Water Contract Talk Planned

North Marin Water District officials will travel to Santa Rosa Monday to discuss final negotiation of a contract that may supply the Novato area with Russian River water.

Jerome B. Gilbert, chief engineer and general manager, said it was decided at a meeting last night to iron out the final contract negotiations with representatives of Petaluma and Sonoma County. The contract would provide for 10,000 acre-feet of Sonoma County water to be piped to North Marin.

CONCERN EXPRESSED

Consumer Counsel Eyeing Drug Advertising Dispute

The state's newly appointed consumer counsel, watch dog on the side of the buyer, has indicated she will step into the case of the Drake Pharmacy, San Anselmo, vs. other Marin drug stores.

An exclusive story in the Independent-Journal April 7 told of pressure being brought by other druggists to stop price advertising of prescription drugs as being "unethical and undignified."

An I-J editorial in the same issue suggested that the consumer counsel represent the buyers interest in any state hearing on the subject.

The California State Pharmaceutical Assn. may push for an amendment to laws which would have the effect of outlawing price advertising of prescription drugs.

Mrs. Helen Ewing Nelson of Mill Valley, the state consumer counsel, wrote the Independent-Journal today that she is "concerned about the situation described in your recent editorial. . . .

"I will be wanting all the facts in the case."

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Meadow Club Party In Sidewalk Cafe

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

The Meadow Club has been transformed into a French sidewalk cafe for tonight's annual spring formal dinner dance at the club. Jack Fairhurst designed the cover for the invitations which show a French cafe with the Eiffel Tower in the background. The verse inside reads: "The sidewalk cafe is a dead giveaway to the theme of our Spring formal dance. Won't you come to the fling and greet Marin's spring, no need to go over to France."

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McCullach, co-chairmen, are being assisted by Messrs. and Mesdames Fairhurst, Robert Grady, Benton Coit, Jack Lee and Harding McPhun. Seated with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grady (she is the club's social chairman) will be the Henry Skinners, LeRoy Pages, Rudy Langs, William Zimmermans, Charles Trosts, Robert Walkers and Floyd Gilmans.

HAWAII seems to be the popular vacation locale right now. Mr. and Mrs. Roger Darrow of Ross with her sister, Miss Claire Byers of San Jose, are flying to the islands on Monday. They'll be quartered at the Royal Hawaiian for three weeks or more. Mr. and Mrs. Russell Scott of San Rafael are now enjoying a holiday in the islands. Also over there are the William Grants of San Rafael. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Castro Jr. of San Rafael left today for the island paradise.

ITALIAN was the theme for the dinner party the George Schirmers gave a week ago tonight at their Kent Woodlands home. Menu, table service and decorations carried out the theme. Dr. and Mrs. S. Nicholas Jacobs came over from San Francisco for the party. Others present were Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Halley, Frank Paganini, Leon Smith and Robert Byard.

A BON VOYAGE EVENT was the champagne cocktail party hosted Saturday night by Mr. and Mrs. Donald N. Fox of Larkspur for their neighbors in Hillview, Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Bowman, who left on Thursday to fly to Europe. A handsome scroll made by Dr. Michael Looper and, signed by all the guests, holding currency of all the countries the Bowmans will visit was presented to them. Guests were Dr. and Mrs. Looper, Messrs. and Mesdames Kenneth Hansen, Abe Kupperberg, John Corriea, Aaron Shenson, William Hawk and Jerome Cohn.

ENTERTAINING on Easter Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Philip T. Smith of Mill Valley. Present in addition to their daughter, Stephanie, and son, Philip M. Smith, and wife up from Stanford were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Deedy of Ross and their six children, Mesdames Stewart Bostwick and S. C. DeGuerre of Mill Valley with the latter's houseguest, Mrs. Francis Hummer of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Arthur Garland of San Francisco.

MRS. E. J. WALTERS of Strawberry Point, will tour Europe with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. B. Robson of San Francisco, visiting France, Germany, Switzerland, and England. They leave May 1 New York to Paris, via Air France jet and will travel through the vineyard countries, and English countryside by rented car. From London over the Polar route they'll return on June 10. The Walters' daughter, Lisa, will stay with Mrs. Walters' grandmother, Mrs. A. D. McCoy of San Francisco.

NEW RESIDENTS of Marin are Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Sullivan. They have taken a home at 245 Center street in San Rafael until the house they are building in the Reedlands is completed. The Sullivans, who will soon be joined by their daughter, Mary, now on a trip around the world, formerly resided in Boston, Mass., and Detroit, Mich. They are neighbors of Miss Edythe Foster, whom they met through an introduction by an eastern relative.

A UNIVERSITY OF OREGON student, Janet Tait, will spend the summer in Europe. On June 22 she will leave by plane for Oslo, Norway, where she will visit with Bibbi Lie. The latter as an exchange student, studied a year at San Rafael High School, and made her home with Janet and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tait of Loch Lomond, Janet, a second year student at the University will spend several weeks with Bibbi, who is now attending the University of Copenhagen, and then make a tour of the continent. She will return home on Sept. 11.

COMPLETELY surprised was Mrs. Martin J. Livingston of Mill Valley after Wednesday's Symphony Guild preview at the Meadow Club.

At the luncheon following the preview she was the guest of Mrs. Arnold J. Oehler at a table composed of Mill Valley women. These included Mesdames Edward Kemp, John Nason, Chester I. Dennis, Albert Von Der Werth, William Benetley, Elvira Becker, Richard Stanton, Paul Kleinsmith and Wayne Speckmann.

What Mrs. Livingston did not know was that most of them, members of board of the Mill Valley concert series founded by her late husband, the noted concert pianist Maxim Schapiro, were going on to a tea in her honor at the Mill Valley home of Mrs. Douglas Cummings.

The former Jane Eddy Schapiro had been active on the board during the 11 years of the series and took over her late husband's work in 1959, the last year of the series. Continuing his work also on the Alaskan series he founded and traveling in Europe and Japan, she did not return to Mill Valley until February this year. She was married in December in Honolulu to Martin J. Livingston of Sausalito.

Having wanted for a long time to express their appreciation for her leadership, all those who had worked on the concert series boards for the last three years planned the surprise tea under the direction of Mrs. Oehler.

Luncheon over, Mrs. Ochler suggested to Mrs. Livingston that they drop by the Mill Valley Episcopal Church's antiques show in Sausalito, saying she wanted to stop a few minutes to see someone in Mill Valley.

When they stepped into the Cummings' home, assembled to cry "surprise!" were Mesdames Dennis, Bentley, Kemp, Nason, Stanton, Becker and Von der Werth, with Mesdames George Whitsett, Martin Goldschmidt, Eugene McGeorge, F. J. Connelly, Joseph Brewster and Benjamin Young.

Coming in later were Mesdames Delmar Clinton, Harold Jolley and Ehrling Carlsen.

Proving quite a conversation piece was a group of tiny marquisite lapel pins worn by Mrs. Oehler. She had bought them—a zebra, a giraffe, an impala and an elephant — at Nairobi during her African safari.

A rabbit pinata was the feature of the Easter party hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Jampolsky at their Hill Haven home last Sunday.

The Jampolskys invited 30 adults and 24 children to an Easter egg hunt and continental breakfast, followed by the breaking of the pinata which was full of all sorts of goodies.

Attending were the families of Dr. and Mrs. Arthur Jampolsky of Mill Valley, Dr. and Mrs. Bruce Manheim of Little Reed Heights, and the Victor Banks, Rolf Beeres, Michel Abramsons, David Rings, John Saias, William Johnstones, Robert Williams and Fred Dupuis all of Hill Haven. From San Francisco came Dr. Marjorie Folinsbee, Dr. and Mrs. Irving Phillips, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Greenberg and Miss Gabe Estes accompanied by Carl Blatz. Mr. and Mrs. Lee Brand arrived from Carmel for the party. Mrs. Brand is Mrs. Jampolsky's sister.

State's Drivers Pay Better Attention To New Law

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California drivers apparently are paying more attention to the state's new 65 mile-an-hour speed limit than they did to the old law.

Highway Patrol arrests for speeding started dropping last July, shortly after the Legislature adopted the new limit.

Even though the 65-mile law wasn't effective until Jan. 1, the decline in arrests continued through the balance of the year and into 1960.

So far this year, the Patrol has issued 58,590 speeding citations, a drop of almost 29 percent under the number issued during the same period last year.

Patrol spokesmen theorized motorists are paying more attention to the new law because they know it is inflexible. Under the old law, a driver could undertake to prove he wasn't being careless when he exceeded 55 miles an hour.

Other statistics reported by the Patrol in its quarterly bulletin today show all other arrests also have declined this year except those for drunk driving.

Celebrating the one-year anniversary of their F101 Voodoo jet at Hamilton Air Force Base yesterday are three members of the 84th Fighter-Interceptor Squadron. From left, cutting and sampling a birthday cake in the cockpit of the mach-busting jet, are Lt. Col. George W. Milholland, commander of the 84th; Capt. William C. Langhofer, and S/Sgt. Henry C. Hall School Dedication Scheduled

Larkspur School District will dedicate Henry C. Hall School, its third elementary school, at 2 p.m. next Saturday.

The dedication program will be held in the multi-use room of the school at 200 Doherty drive, Larkspur.

Henry C. Hall School opened last November with classes from kindergarten through the eighth grade. The school was named in honor of the late district superintendent and principal of the Larkspur-Corte Madera School, who died in 1927.

Principal speaker at the dedication will be Jack Mengel, a member of the district board of trustees and former chairman of the bond committee whose successful campaign helped make the school possible.

Dr. Henry C. Hall Jr., professor of education at the University of San Francisco and a son of the late educator, also will speak and make a presentation to the school.

Supt. Vaughn D. Seidel will preside at the ceremonies and welcome guests. These will include former school board members, city and county officials, Parent-Teacher Assn. officers, John Lyon Reid and partners, school architects; W. J. Kubon Co., general contractors, and members of the Hall family.

Also taking part in the program will be John R. Cunningham, chairman of the trustees; Mrs. Doris Barck, board clerk, and trustees M. K. Taylor and John Boyd.

The Larkspur School District Band will provide music. Rev. James J. Healy of St. Patrick's Church, Larkspur, will give the invocation, and Rev. Wayne Hansen, Redwood Presbyterian Church, Larkspur, the benediction.

The school P-TA will serve refresments after the program and the school will be open for inspection.

Sausalito Unit Asks Waiver On Parking

The Sausalito Recreation Commission will recommend to the city's planning commission that it waive all or most of the offstreet parking requirements for a new parish hall to be built by Christ Church, Episcopal.

This decision was made at a committee meeting of the commission Thursday night with members of the church building committee.

The move is to keep as much of the present playground as possible for a recreation area when the parish hall is built in the area of the present city-leased tennis court. Building will probably not get under way earlier than fall, Col. Henry G. Douglas of the church building committee said.

The recreation commission will hold an adjourned meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday at the city hall.

Awards Presented To Boys' Choir

The annual awards breakfast for members of the Boys Choir of Mill Valley Episcopal Church was made extra festive this year with Easter egg tree decorations.

Mrs. Tom Chesnut, Mrs. Robert Stott, Mrs. Horatio Ham and Mrs. Ivan Hayes were responsible for decorations for the Easter Sunday breakfast.

Boys who had been choir members for five years, Robby Robins, Creighton Wyatt and Cedric Collett, received Bible awards.

Prayer books are given to Brian Collett, Bob Wall and Gary McCallum for four years. Silver crosses went to Bill Phelps and Craig Jolly for three years service.

Rev. D. Murray Hammond and choirmaster Barry Mineah presented the awards.

Tickets now are available for the choir's "Music in May" concert May 14 at the Tamalpais High School auditorium.

Cancer Fund Event Slated For Monday

Mrs. Robertson Ward, county chairman of the Cancer Crusade, said today that Marin residents are expected to give $30,000 toward fighting the disease in a fund-raising event next Monday.

"How can we expect residents to give this much?' she asked. "It is an unprecedented amount."

"Because," she said, "the crusade is especially meaningful this year.

"First, trends show that the outlook is good. When the Marin unit of the American Cancer Society was organized in the spring of 1947 with Mrs. Harry N. Hensler of Ross as chairman, $4,000 was raised. Ten years later more than $21,000 was raised.

GROWING

"In the past two years the collections have continued to increase.

"Now, nearly everyone has a relative, business associate or friends who is suffering or has died from cancer. National figures show that cancer will strike two families in every three.

"In Marin last year 357 persons died of cancer, and there are more than 1,000 Marin residents now being treated for cancer, well above the expectation—based on population.

TRAGEDY

"Like all statistics these figures cannot possibly convey the amount of suffering and personal tragedy involved in each individual case.

But Mrs. Ward added that early detection and treatment of the disease is saving lives. While that is good news, she said, additional money is needed for research and study to make further progress in the field of fighting cancer.

Sergeants 45 Miles Ahead Of Dr. Moore

ELKO, Nev. (AP)—Two British sergeants striding across the United States were expected to pass through this northeastern Nevada cowtown today—still about 45 miles ahead of their countrywoman, Dr. Barbara Moore.

The sergeants, Patrick Moloney and Mervyn Evans, bedded down last night at Carlin, 22 miles west of here on U.S. Highway 40.

Dr. Moore reached Battle Mountain, 45 miles west of Carlin.

The determined, 56-year-old vegetarian has vowed to overtake the sergeants before they reach Salt Lake City. They insist it is not a race and that she is welcome to amble by them anytime—if she can.

She said in Battle Mountain last evening that she strongly suspects the sergeants have been snitching rides with their jeep escort. This comment came after they expressed disbelief that she had covered 109 miles in 17 hours Tuesday in northwestern Nevada.

"I don't have any way of proving it," she said, "but now I'm close enough to watch them. People are driving back to tell me what they're doing."

The sergeants left San Francisco April 12 on the trek to New York. Dr. Moore followed them the next day. It is about 3,200 miles between the two big cities. The sergeants hope to make it in 70 days or less. The record is 79.

Novato Club Plays Host To Rotarians

More than 200 Rotarians from Mill Valley, Sausalito, San Anselmo and San Rafael were guests of Novato Rotarians at an exhibition of stunt flying and a luncheon Thursday at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Speaking to the representatives of all Marin County Rotary Clubs at the base officers' club was Robert Hoover, World War II pilot now with the customer relations department of North American Aviation, Inc.

EXHIBITION

Preceding the luncheon meeting, Hoover treated the guests to an exhibition of daredevil flying over the base runway in an F86 jet borrowed from the California National Guard for the occasion.

Also a former test pilot with North American, Hoover spoke on defense problems in general and specifically on the value of the latest aircraft being built by his company — the B70 bomber.

PERFORMANCE

The B70 is capable of flying at three times the speed of sound at an altitude of 80,000 feet, Hoover said, and its adoption by this country would make all potential enemy aircraft obsolete overnight.

Introducing guests at the meeting was Donald F. Donohue, Novato Rotary president. Representing Col. George F. Ceuleers, commander of the base who was away on Air Force business, was Col. Benjamin B. Cassiday Jr., deputy commander.

Actor To Appear At Jewish Center

Actor Howard DaSilva will appear at the Marin Jewish Community Center in San Rafael, May 12 in a one-man show.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL

There's A Lesson In City Elections – Every Vote Counts

There is a lesson in the recent city elections in Marin County. It isn't a lesson for the candidates, although they undoubtedly looked at the returns with varying reactions, some rueful, others relieved.

The lesson is there for the voters, or more specifically, the eligible voters who "didn't bothers to vote because what does one more vote more or less mean."

One vote more or less meant a great deal in a number of the city elections. In San Anselmo, for example, one vote more for one candidate and one vote less for another would have changed the results. Instead of one candidate losing and one winning, the result would have been tied. Only two votes separated the winners and the losers.

The importance of taking the responsibility of voting seriously was demonstrated in Larkspur where the voters who had bothered to cast absentee ballots because they would not be near the polls on election day, decided the issue. In fact they reversed the results.

In that city only eight votes separated three candidates; two of them were elected, one lost. The absentee votes made the decision, electing the man who was lowest after the regular ballot count and unseating the woman candidate who apparently had won a council chair.

Although these two were the most dramatic of the close city elections, only 20 votes separated a winner and a loser in Belvedere, 29 votes in Mill Valley and 46 in Sausalito.

We are now approaching the important primary election June 7 in which, among other things, we will select Marin's nominees for our State Senator, State Assemblyman and Congressman. In addition there will be presidential preferencial vote and three statewide issues. Yet even now it is too late for persons not yet registered to do so. They will not be able to participate in our republican form of government at this election.

With each vote obviously meaning so much, we urge every eligible voter to get himself registered as soon as possible, before Sept. 15 or you won't be able to vote in the general election either. And we urge every registered voter to study the candidates and issues so as to be able to cast an informed vote on June 7.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

NOTHING TO LIVE FOR?

A murderer made a strange request just after he was sentenced to life imprisonment for killing a store clerk in a holdup that netted only $80.

"A life sentence is not merciful," the 28-year-old criminal pleaded. "I'd rather die. I have nothing to live for. I am all alone."

The judge refused to impose the death penalty.

Those who think they "have nothing to live for" lead incomplete, desolate, even desperate lives. In disregarding God and others, they inevitably end up living with their miserable selves. For some this can be a fate worse than death.

None of us can rightfully say that we have "nothing to live for." Every human being has a role to play on the stage of life that is important in God's sight, however insignificant it may seem. It is far more than merely seeking self. Our very nature yearns to reach out in love to the Creator and to all our fellowmen. Those who live up to this noble ideal never have any regrets. They find the longest life is too short.

"Walk in love, as Christ also loved us and delivered Himself up for us."
(Ephesians 5:2)

Imbue me with such a love for you and others, O Lord, that life will be the foretaste of heaven.

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Primary Campaigns Start To Move; Wilson Has Tough, Unique Plan

By CHAPIN A. DAY

The campaigns for party nomination in the June 7 primaries are really starting to roll.

As is to be expected, with five candidates seeking two party nominations, the battle for the State Assembly is shaping up the fastest and the hottest.

Republican William T. Bagley of San Rafael has been concentrating his efforts in Sonoma County because he's little known in the north of the two-county district.

Bagley has his organization well under way in both counties. Marin County campaign chairman is Thomas W. Peryam, recently retired Marin County agricultural commissioner. M. J. Lamperti of San Rafael is heading the Marin Democratic Committee For Bagley. Sonoma County Chairman for Bagley is Santa Rosa attorney Marshall H. Comstock.

Bagley's Republican opponent, Sonoma Supervisor Leigh Shoemaker, has been strangely silent. We've heard little from him, not even the name of his campaign chairman, although he has appeared at several candidates' nights before Marin organizations.

Democratic hopeful Joseph G. Wilson of San Rafael is putting together an unusual and interesting campaign to get his name known throughout the two counties. The plan is to hold a series of "Joe Wilson Days" in 20 towns and communities throughout the district.

It will work like this. Starting early in May each day for 20 consecutive days, except Sundays, a different Marin or Sonoma town will be selected for "Joe Wilson Day." Using newspaper advertising, radio, quarter cards, bumper strips and about everything else possible, the selected community, 10 in Marin and 10 in Sonoma, will be saturated with notice of Joe's visit. Then he'll set up shop in some store window or an equally conspicuous place, with necessary campaign banners, slogans, and propaganda.

William R. Davis, San Anselmo gasoline dealer, is Wilson's Marin County chairman, and Lewis H. DeCastle, Santa Rosa attorney, is handling his Sonoma campaign. We don't know who his doctor is.

One of Wilson's opponents, Petaluman Everett A. Matzen named John S. Watson of Petaluma, chairman of the State Board of Agriculture, his general chairman. Clyde Nelson, a Petaluma attorney, is his finance chairman. But thus far we haven't see much evidence of his campaign in Marin County, where his chairman is not yet named.

The third Democrat, Mrs. Helen Putnam, hasn't even let us know who her workers are nor have we even heard from her since she announced her candidacy.

THE CONGRESSIONAL campaign organization is much easier to report.

Incumbent Clement W. Miller has two chairmen in his battle for re-election. Still back in Washington, the Democrat got in an opening speech here during a flying visit to Pt. Reyes a week ago. But he's leaving his campaign planning in the hands of co-chairmen Mrs. Nancy Swadesh of Mill Valley and Tom Bair of Arcada, Humboldt County.

His opponent, for the second time, is Republican Fred G. Dupuis of Tiburon. He has announced that Robert L. Bishop of Santa Rosa, former member of the State Highway Commission, will head his campaign. Bishop plans bipartisan committees throughout the seven counties of the district, but he hasn't said yet who will head the campaign in Marin.

STATE SENATOR John F. McCarthy, Republican, has an old team of Raymond Shone, campaign chairman, and Warren McGuire, finance chairman, working for him again this year as he seeks election for the fourth time. But he has brought in a young livewire, Mrs. Mary Ellen Irwin, to manage the campaign.

One of his Democratic opponents, Charles M. Geller of San Anselmo, has a temporary chairman in Ed McCarthy of San Anselmo, but will have a permanent one later. Norman Campbell, is Geller's treasurer.

The other Democrat, Max Miller of San Rafael, has been so busy with business he hasn't "had time yet to appoint a campaign manager," but he'll "start getting into high gear in the next two weeks.."

In any event, it looks like a remarkably fine primary campaign season.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

San Rafael Can't Govern Itself

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

This is with reference to the proposed annexation to San Rafael of the Nunes Ranch area and Terra Linda which was reported in the Independent-Journal on April 19.

It is frightening to me as a resident of Terra Linda and a citizen of Marin to watch the tenacles of a neighboring city reach out and attempt to consume a community. No action of the city of San Rafael, up to the present time, indicates that it is capable of coping with the problems that exist within its city limits.

There are two specific points. By way of example: first, the inability of the city government to solve the horrendous traffic problem on Fourth street during the last 10 years. Secondly, the lack of planning for the recreational needs of San Rafael now.

Two years ago the Wise report to the planning commission of San Rafael indicated the immediate need of the city for 80 acres of land for recreational use while at that time there were only 50 acres of land available and most of it was poorly used for recreational needs.

Now in our country it is desirable for everything that is little to grow bigger, and while this seems to be a reasonable goal for any governmental body, I personally feel that San Rafael will be harming itself by assuming responsibility for areas that it is incapable of governing and it will also hurt the citizens of the present city of San Rafael in that energy, time and money will be used to solve problems of newly developing areas while those who reside in the town at present will suffer from continued second rate government.

I therefore urge all present citizens of San Rafael to seriously consider the risks to them, if their city government continues its apparent plan to absorb all areas it can reach with is long arm of annexation in this irresponsible manner.

M. J. FRANZBLAU, M.D.
Terra Linda.

Clem Miller For More Everything

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

Hurray for Mr. Carrow! Let him proclaim, in his attempted defense of Clem Miller's record, that the forthcoming campaign should be fought on the strength of basic issues. And let every Republican in this Congressional district stand up and say: Yes, Mr. Carrow, this is what we want, because IF we can fight this election on the issues as they truly exist we will beat you hands down.

We know what Clem Miller is FOR. We know that he is FOR something for everyone, that he wants MORE of everything for his constituents that will produce a vote. We know that he, like all of us, wants more schools, more roads, more hospitals, more care for the aged. We are also quite sure that to obtain pie in the sky Clem Miller also wants more taxes, more debts, more federal government, more regimentation, more restrictions for John Q. Citizen.

We, as Republicans, want to know what Clem Miller BELIEVES. We want to know what he will answer when Messrs Dupuis, Bagley, et al, step forward and proclaim to the electorate these, the basic principles of Republicanism:

Faith and trust in the individual as being best able to seek his own destiny—and therefore the resistance to governmental intrusion into the private lives of American citizens; the right to protection of savings and therefore the importance of balanced budgets and a reduced national debt; the obligation of all men to work when work is available, rather than to seek the deluding aid of the federal government and therefore the preservation of an economic climate in which work—and hard work — is encouraged; the right of all men to invest in the American economy and to expect commensurate gain; equal educational and economic opportunities; strong local governments; preservation of FREEDOM.

These, Mr. Carrow, are what we as Republicans believe. These are the principles upon which our nation was founded, and these are the principles by which it shall be preserved.

WILLIAM M. SPENCER, Jr.

REMEMBER WHEN

10 YEARS AGO

After 28 years of service as Belvedere police chief, Oliver J. Oldfield resigned, saying that the job should be given to a younger man. Mayor Ray Millzner asked him to continue until a successor could be found.

George R. Wheeler's photo in the I-J showing volunteers pushing a loaded box away from a burning Marin County Storage Co. warehouse was judged best Associated Press picture of the month.

20 YEARS AGO

The newly formed San Rafael Young Democrats acted as host to a meeting of the California Young Democrat Northern Executive Committee, the first time San Rafael had ever had such a meeting.

Gasoline cost half a cent more per gallon in Marin County than in San Francisco, according to a communication to the supervisors from Joseph W. Glaser of San Anselmo, who asked that something be done about it.

TRY AND STOP ME

BENNETT CERF

A great big he-man from the West wrote a great big novel which he submitted to a New York publisher with this note attached: "I don't want any of your typical Eastern discourtesy and carelessness. Read this manuscript carefully. It's great. And if you're too stupid to appreciate its possibilities, don't send me one of your insulting printed rejection forms. I want a personal letter telling me why!"

In due course the Westerner got his manuscript back with this letter from the publishing house: "We are overcome with the opportunity of corresponding with a wonderful author of your calibre. Our editorial staff was so carried away by your novel it took some of them a week to get back to the office. But what would happen if we published your masterpiece? We would be establishing a standard we obviously never again could attain. Rather than reach the pinnacle, therefore, only to plunge later into the abyss, we are humbly standing aside to let a competitor triumph with your magnificent novel which we are returning under separate cover, collect."

Spring Afternoons Find Boss 'Called To The City' And Things

These balmy spring afternoons make a man lazy.

Even the courthouse and city halls, which bustle with activity in the brisk morning hours, seem to slow down to a crawl after the noon siesta.

Many of the employees are hard at work, but here and there you find that "the boss has gone to the City for the afternoon." No, they can't be reached by phone. Maybe by loudspeaker?

POLICE OFFICER Earl Christensen got a lucky break this week. His day off fell on Wednesday, and he took off for Candlestick Park. Too anxious to get inside, he forgot where he parked his car. After the game he spent an hour in the shivering dark, until all the cars thinned out and he finally found it.

He was too proud to go to police for help.

BACK IN THE courthouse, young deputies of the D.A.'s office had a rough week. Roy and Harry, caught parked in the wrong slot on the courthouse lot, got tickets from the sheriff. They each forfeited $1 bail in traffic court.

A third deputy Bruce, worked all day prosecuting speeders, and those driving with suspended or expired licenses. At the end of a long day, he pulls out his wallet and happens to check his own driver's license. It expired last January.

MOST DRIVERS fight and plead for the right to keep their driver's licenses. But one salesman appeared before Judge Leonard A. Thomas the other day with a new twist. He said:

"After careful consideration, I feel it unwise to drive any more," and he voluntarily turned in his license.

Anything can happen on a balmy afternoon.

A MAN WALKED in to see Recreation Director Joe Rodota at Albert Field a couple days ago, looking for one of the summer jobs.

"May I see Mr. Park," he asked politely. Supervisor Art Morris identified himself and suggested he see Mr. Rodota. "No," said the gent, "I was specifically told to report to Albert Park for an interview. I'd like to see Mr. Park."

It took several minutes to assure him that he was at Albert Park, but the man to see is Mr. Rodota or Mr. Morris.

EVEN THE mailman gets fancy ideas these days.

Did you ever notice the postman riding a small scooter up and down the sidewalks of a nearby subdivision, happily popping mail into boxes?

Riding in the street would have meant too long a reach.

IF YOU believe in horoscopes, here's a small tip.

The Santa Rosa carpenter who held up a Cotati bank on Good Friday, apparently used the horoscope book. Marin officers found one in his car. They turned to the appropriate page which said in effect:

Today is a good day financially if you work it right.

The result of his day's work: He lost his freedom, his false teeth, and $14,396.01 stuffed in a paper bag. The extra penny was apparently what he had before he went to the bank.

RICHARD ARGENTO, 12, of Fairfax is a real sport fisherman. He caught a two-pound bass at Smith Lake, brought it home and put it in the water in the kitchen sink.

When mother said it would have to be killed, Richard said, "Oh no, you can't do that." Mama had to drive him back at night to the lake, where Richard waded into the mud to give the bass an easy launching back into the pond.

BEFORE YOU GO to sleep, don't forget to turn your clock one hour ahead. Or you may miss church tomorrow.

Gen. De Gaulle Is More Than Just A Great Leader; He Is A Genius

WASHINGTON — Having been one of his American admirers since June of 1940, when he raised his flag in Britain and summoned the French to go on with the war, I cannot pretend to write dispassionately about Gen. de Gaulle.

But now that he is back in Washington in triumph, I have been asking myself what is the secret of this famous man?

The secret is that he is more than a great man. He is a great man in the sense that he has taken a great part in historic events. But there were other great men in the war days. In addition to being an historic man, he is also, which is rarer than greatness, a genius. This is the special quality which he, and I think only he, shares with Churchill.

HIS GENIUS consists in the capacity to see beneath the surface of events, to see through the obvious and conventional and stereotyped appearance of events to the significant realities, to the obscured facts and forces which will prevail.

This gift, which is more than leadership as such, is second sight into the nature of history. It brings with it the gift of prophesying what is going to happen because to the seeing eye it is already there.

The ability to see truly the significant reality carries with it the ability to convey what his vision brings him. Men like Churchill and de Gaulle do not sign ghost-written books and they do not read ghost-written speeches. For the vision is their own and they alone can communicate it.

THUS, in the bitter days of 1940 when France had fallen and Britain stood alone, it called for a great man, for a brave man, for a resolute and faithful man, to go into exile and from there to organize the French resistance. But it took genius to see how this noble but desperate venture would end, and to see that France, defeated, demoralized and prostrate, remained one of the great powers, to see that in the end she would be — as is now the fact — among the principal shapers of the settlement with Germany.

Thinking of all that has happened in these 20 years, it occurred to me to see whether or not my memory was deceiving me. Was it true, as ever since I have believed, that in the darkest days of the most desperate of modern wars, Gen. de Gaulle had communicated his vision of an enduring and an undefeated France?

I FIND that about three weeks after the fall of France, I had learned enough to be able to write that "in the misfortune of France it should be our fierce pride to be the last to forget the greatness of France. We must wish to be the first to remember . . . that France is indispensible, as indispensible, to the maturity of Western civilization as Hellas was to its birth—and as imperishable."

I learned to say that only from Gen. de Gaulle.

ALMANAC

Today is Saturday, April 23, the 114th day of the year, with 252 more in 1960.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1879, President-elect and Mrs. George Washington moved into the first presidential mansion at the corner of Franklin and Cherry streets in New York City.

In 1791, James Buchanan, 15th President of the United States, was born in Franklin County, Pa.

In 1792, "La Marseillaise," the French national anthem, was written by Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle.

In 1898, the government asked for 125,000 volunteers to assist in the war against Spain.

In 1932, the Prince of Wales presided at the opening of the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon, England.

A thought for today: William Shakespeare, in King Richard III, said: "Talkers are no good doers."

Bucs Close In On Giants As Friend Off To Fast Start

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

This definitely is a new season for Bob Friend, the Pittsburgh Pirates's right-handed ace who wasn't last year.

He put away his second straight complete game victory last night as the Pirates beat the Milwaukee Braves 6-2 and jumped into second place in the National League race.

A year ago Friend lost his first seven and didn't win one until his 11th start. He didn't manage two complete-game victories in a row until his 29th start.

It was the third straight victory and fifth in six games for the Bucs, moving them within a half-game of front-running San Francisco. The Giants took a 10-8 win at Chicago while the St. Louis Cardinals dropped Los Angeles out of a share of first to third place by beating the Dodgers 11-7. Philadelphia whipped Cincinnati 10-7.

In the American League, unbeaten Detroit won its third, breaking a first place tie with Chicago by handing the White Sox their first defeat 6-5. New York beat Baltimore 5-0 as Whitey Ford and Ralph Terry combined for an eight-hit shutout. Kansas City rapped winless Cleveland 4-1, and Boston defeated Washington 5-4 in 11 innings.

Friend, who shut out Cincinnati on four hits Sunday, has allowed only one scoring inning in his last 18. The Braves ended his scoreless string at 11 innings when Billy Bruton tripled, and scored on an infield out, and Hank Aaron followed with his third home run for a 2-2 tie in the third.

The Bucs, who chased Juan Pizarro with two runs in the first, then cracked the tie and hung the defeat on reliever Joey Jay (0-1) in the third when he hit Don Hoak with a pitch and Hal Smith followed with a triple. Pittsburgh scored three more in the fourth, all with two out, on Bob Clemente's two-run homer and Smith's double.

GIANTS EXPLODE

San Francisco walloped five home runs against the Cubs, but it was Willie Mays' double in a two-run eighth that clinched it for the Giants. Jim Davenport walloped two homers for the Giants. Willie McCovey, ex-Cub Dale Long, who got off a three-run shot as a pinch-hitter and Ed Bressoud hit the others.

Sam Jones gave up a pair of Cub homers, by Frank Thomas and George Altman. Billy Loes (2-0) won it in relief with a save by Johnny Antonelli. Don Elston (1-2) lost it.

The Cards scored five in the first, three on Stan Musial's double, against loser Sandy Koufax (0-1). But it was Daryl Spencer's two-run double off reliever Roger Craig in the fourth that won it. Spencer also homered for the Cards, who had 15 hits and nine walks. John Roseboro, Gil Hodges and Wally Moon hit home runs among the Dodgers' 14 hits. Marshall Bridges won it in relief, but needed Lindy McDaniel's help in the eighth.

Rob Roberts needed Ruben Gomez' relief after giving up home runs by Frank Robinson and Eddie Kasko, but won his first for the Phils. Jim Coker's two-run triple in the fifth put it away. Roy McMillan also homered for the Reds. It was his fourth—tops in the majors.

Rod-Gun Club To Discuss Bay Closure

President Peter Bertoni has called a special meeting of the Marin Rod and Gun Club Monday night to discuss the proposed closure of valuable recreational waters near Hamilton Air Force Base.

The meeting will be held at the MRGC clubhouse at Point San Quentin starting at 7:30 o'clock.

The local sportsmen's club is protesting a request by Hamilton Air Force Base to close a large area of fishing, boating and duck hunting area immediately behind its practice rifle range. Sportsmen using the area, the Air Force has explained, are in danger of being hit by bullets from the range.

Bertoni said Monday night's special meeting has been called to sound out the MRGC members and other interested parties on their reaction to the Air Force's proposals. The general public is invited.

Bertoni said the MRGC board of direcotrs has been trying to arrange a compromise suitable to all concerned.

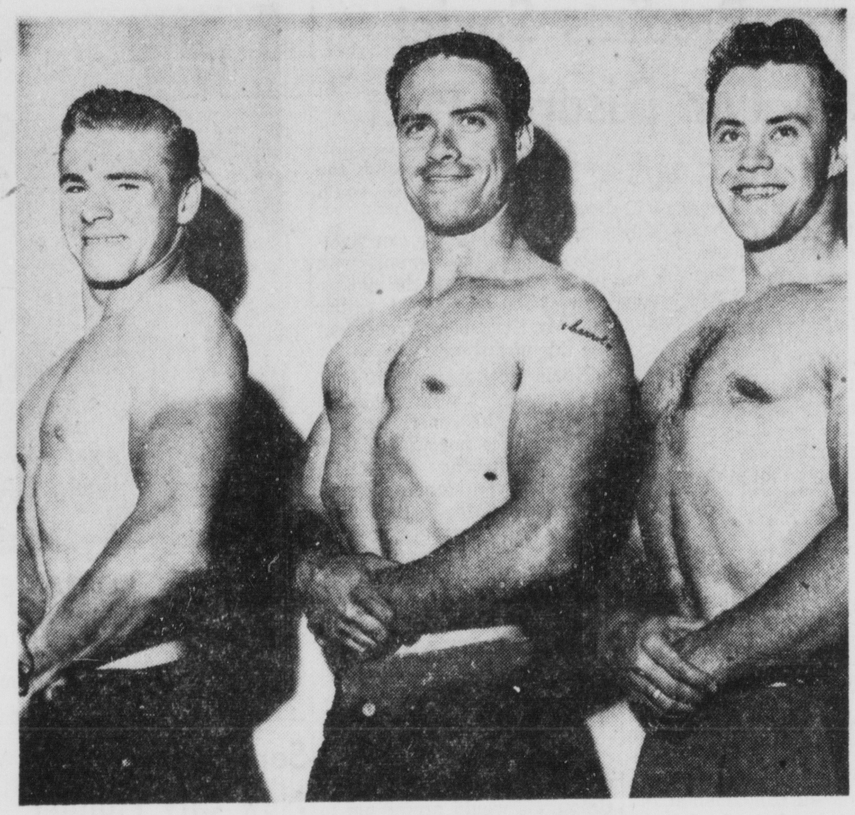
Tam, Redwood Splash To Swim Victories

Tamalpais defeated San Rafael 62-33 in varsity and 61-14 in Class B yesterday in Marin County Athletic League swimming competition.

In the other meet Redwood whipped Drake 64-31 in varsity and Drake won Class B 60-17.



VIE FOR STATE TITLES

These strong men, representatives of the MarVel Athletic Club of San Rafael, were in Los Angeles today competing in the California State A. A. U. Weightlifting Championships. From left are Danny Preston, 148-pounder from Fairfax; Carrol Varner, 165-pounder from San Rafael and Joel Brower, 181-pounder from Travis Air Force Base. Preston, 17, recently tied for third place in northern California championships; Varner, 21, is the northern California champion in his class; and Brower, also 21, was second to Varner in the 165-pound division. He hopes to do even better with the weight he has gained since then. Coach Jack MacPhee of the local club accompanied the trio to the meet.

Tam Rallies To Edge Drake; Bulldogs, Giants Also Win

Tamalpais Indians, Redwood Giants and San Rafael Bulldogs got off to a fast start yesterday with victories in the opening of the Marin County Athletic League baseball schedule.

Tam rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to edge Drake, 7-5; Redwood capitalized on errors and the three-hit pitching of Rich Brear to down Novato, 4-1; and San Rafael, with Mike Osborne driving across three runs, upset Marin Catholic, 6-4.

Action resumes next Tuesday afternoon, 4 o'clock, with Tam at Redwood, Marin Catholic at Novato and Drake at San Rafael.

The Tamites, the MCAL tournament champions, had defeat staring at them going into the last inning, but they rose to the occasion with a three-run outburst. A pair of walks, a run scoring single by John Marchini and a perfect squeeze bunt by Lou Piver featured the uprising. Ed Collins and Dave Broome each collected three blows to lead the way. Russ Adams was winning pitcher in relief of freshman starter Fred Mack.

At Redwood, while Brear was striking out 10 batsmen, the Giants capitalized on four Novato errors to score all their runs via the unearned route.

The lone Hornet run came in the first inning when Corriea doubled home Manzoni who had walked. After that Brear was unbeatable.

Meanwhile, the leaky Hornet defense betrayed the beautiful hurling of Jud Bird who yielded only two hits, although he got himself in trouble by walking four Giants. One of Redwood's hits was a smashing double by Mike Walsh.

San Rafael's bats exploded for triples by Osborne and Mike Cicero and a double by Rich Curry in upsetting Marin. Osborne had three runs batted in. He and Curry each collected two hits.

Five Marin Catholic errors ruined the Wildcats. Their best blows were a triple by Ron Blum and a double by Chuck Reindollar.

Edwards Hurt, But Tam Tops S.R. Trackmen

Coach Glidden Benefield's Tamalpais Indians lost their Jack of all trades, Ray Edwards, possibly for the rest of the season, but even without him they overpowered previously undefeated San Rafael yesterday 74-38, in the Marin County Athletic League's feature dual track and field meet.

Edwards suffered a badly sprained ankle in a training accident when he cut sharply during a 100-yard dash to avoid a collision with another athlete. Benefield said Edwards may be able to compete in the MCAL finals May 14, "but I doubt if he'll regain his top form."

Edwards is a potential triple winner, but even without his 15 points the Tamites downed San Rafael with surprising ease. Bob Hector and Russ Cook each won two events and Pat Morgan turned in a nifty 10.1-second 100-yard dash to feature the Indian attack.

San Rafael's best performance was a 141-foot, 8-inch discuss heave by Big Kent Francisco, by far the longest toss of the MCAL season.

Tam also won Class B by an 83-30 margin and Class C by 51-24 to remain the only school undefeated in all three divisions.

Johnny Harris was a triple winner in Tam's Class B victory.

Elsewhere yesterday Drake swept all three divisions from Novato, 68-45 in varsity, 71-33 in Class B and 41½-35½ in Class C and the Marin Catholic-Redwood meet at Corte Madera was postponed when a heavy downpour sent the athletes scurrying for cover. The meet will be continued next Wednesday.

Dennis Bailey won both hurdles, Bill Collins won the 100 and shot and Ted Cain copped the 220 and broad jump to spark Drake's varsity. Novato's Joe McNern turned in a nifty 52.5 clocking in the 440.

Seek Rematch For Matthews, Vaillant After TV Draw

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Lightweights Len Matthews and Douglas Vaillant battled to a sizzling draw in 10 rounds last night and their managers were talking of a re-match before the crowd had cleared the auditorium.

"I thought he won the fight and I'm willing to meet him again any time, any place, even in his home town of Philadelphia," said Bernard Barker, the manager of Vaillant, who comes from Cuba.

Matthews' manager, Tony Graziano, said:

"I thought Matthews won on effective punching. He was the aggressor all the way. We're willing to fight him again, any time."

Matthews, who ranks fourth among the lightweights, was favored in the nationally televised fight, but the Cuban smothered him with speed and a variety of punches.

Referee Jimmy Peerless scored it even and so did Judge Gus Jacobson, which meant a draw. Judge Stu Winston voted for Vaillant.

Hammerin' Hank Cocky, Confident; MRGC Meeting May Be Marathon

Coming back from a ball game the other day we stopped in at the training headquarters of middleweight slugger Henry Hank, who meets Rory Calhoun Monday night in a 10-round Cow Palace tilt.

Our visit was prompted partly by our interest in Monday's fight, but mostly to take a gander at this Detroit "Brown Bomber" who has impressed us as the best looking middleweight to come along the pike in some time.

You may remember Hammerin' Hank is the man who handed San Anselmo light-heavyweight Sixto Rodriquez his first kayo loss in a national television bout earlier this year. He also holds kayo victories over another ranked 175-pounder, Jesse Bowdry.

Hank has the reputation for being quite cocky, so that was our first question. "It all depends who is listening," said the muscular Detroiter. "Those that know me say it's confidence; those that don't, call it cockiness. I say I'm confident, not cocky."

Q. Are you capable of knocking out an opponent with a single punch?

A. Yes, very definitely.

Q. Which punch?

A. Anyone I hit him with.

Q. How many foes have you flattened with a single blow?

A. Nearly everyone of my knockouts were with one punch. It sure helped me in the Willie Vaughn fight. He beat me for nine rounds — I mean he won the first nine rounds — then I caught him with a punch and knocked him out in the 10th."

Q. Until 1958 you were just a so-so fighter. Then you suddenly became a big sensation. What caused the change?

A. I never had the opportunity to get in shape before. We had a tough time getting matches. No one wanted any part of me. We used to accept matches on a day or two notice. After getting so many last minute fights we decided to get into shape and stay there. We were always ready.

Q. What type of an opponent do you prefer, slugger or boxer?

A. It doesn't make any difference. I'm not a one-way fighter. If they slug, I'll slug; if they want to box, I'll box with them. I adapt as the fight goes along and always try to trap my opponent into making a mistake. All they need to make is one mistake and they are through.

Q. Would you like a shot at Champion Gene Fullmer?

A. Of Course. After I beat Calhoun we'll go after Fullmer.

Q. What about Calhoun? Do you think he can hit hard enough to hurt you or knock your out?

A. I don't intend to find out if I can take his punch. I'm going to find out if he can take one.

Period. End of interview. Cocky? Confident? Hank's a mixture of both.

MARIN ROD and Gun Club will hold what could become the longest meeting in history. Monday night when it hashes over the Air Force's proposal to close a nice piece of recreational area off the Hamilton Field shore.

MRGC President, in a letter to the membership, said, "Each member will be alloted three minutes to express his views and thoughts."

Let's see, now. The MRGC has 2,000 members. If each one attends the meeting and expresses his views, it will require 6,000 minutes of yakking. That adds up to 100 hours—or more than four days.

Bring your own lunch.

FORMER NOVATO High School sensation Jack Sparrow appears to be top candidate for College of Pacific's first string quarterback job next football season.

That's the word from Stockton today in the spring training digest. It reads: "The quarterback situation looks improved with three lettermen back from last season. Starter Bob Vander Wall returns along with Bob Gatiss who threw for 328 yards against Washington State last year, but the bet for the starting call is sophomore Jack Sparrow who quarterbacked the frosh to a 5-1 season last year. Sparrow at 6-4, 190 throws the ball well and looks to be an exceptional runner."

Another top Marin County product with the COP varsity is senior guard Willie Hector, a Tam grad. He has the starting left guard job "cinched."

GARY BARTOLOTTI, catcher for the Marin Catholic Wildcats, must have developed an inferior complex last night in a game against San Rafael. Gary was hit three (3) times by pitched balls.

NOTICEABLY missing from the first seven games at Candlestick: A good old-fashioned rhubarb with the umps. Either the men in blue were perfect, or the players were in a serene mood with their beautiful surroundings. But just wait!

West Berlin Strenghtens Patrols Against Communists

BERLIN (UPI) — West Berlin city authorities dispatched strengthened police patrols to western stations of the Berlin elevated railway today under orders to repel vigorously any further Communist attempt to arrest East German refugees at these stations.

The reinforcements were ordered out after the West Berlin city government flatly rejected a new Communist claim to jurisdiction over the western stations of the Berlin elevated railway.

The East German Communists warned that the Western stand could have "dangerous results." It meant that East-West police clashes could take place at the Western stations.

To underline western determination to fight Communist encroachments, the city prosecutor ordered the immediate trial of three eastern transport police who were overpowered and arrested at a U.S. sector "el" station yesterday.

The three policemen were charged with carrying out police controls without proper organization.

West Berlin authorities acted quickly after the East German Communists revived an old claim to sovereignty over the western stations on the elevated railway which post-war agreements allow them to run.

The Communists dusted off this claim in an effort to halt the greatest refugee exodus from the Soviet zone since East Germans attempted to overthrow the Communist government in June, 1953.

Yacht Club Building Set

Construction of the Sausalito Yacht Club's new $35,000 building is set to begin next week at the downtown waterfront next to the ferryboat Berkeley.

It will have a lounge, washrooms, kitchen, storeroom and a bar, with a large deck around the building. The roof will be of plywood, bent to a semi-circle, with no beams.

Contractor for the job is H. D. Crae of San Francisco.

Huff, married and father of four children, is accused of molesting the girl on the houseboat March 20 and 27.

Nixon Predicts Soviet Move For Disarm Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M Nixon predicted today that Russia will agree to effective peace and disarmament because Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev does not want a war that would destroy communist economic gains.

"The hard facts of international life are on the side of peace and disarmament," Nixon told the American Society of Newspaper Editors

He saw next month's summit meeting in Paris as possibly the first of a series which could lead to world peace.

And, he said, "We can rightly approach the summit with full confidence that the spokesmen of the free world, rather than Mr. Khrushchev, represent the tide of history."

Nixon gave this appraisal of the summit: "I believe that we can look to this conference and to the future not with starry-eyed complacency but with justifiable confidence that responsible world leaders will slowly but inevitably develop more effective methods for settling differences between nations without war."

In assaying Khrushchev's frame of mind, Nixon, who visited the Soviet Union last year, said:

"On the basis of my conversations with him, I am convinced that he is proud of what communism has done in the Soviet Union. He would prefer not to risk destruction of that progress."

DE GAULLE

and Asia. He said this is vital to world peace.

De Gaulle has been actively promoting a project for Soviet-Western cooperation in economic aid to underdeveloped countries and is expected to raise it at the summit Eisenhower is cold to the scheme.

"This is the fundamental and great problem," de Gaulle said. "The great problem is to bring two billion men out of poverty and in the direction of economic progress."

De Gaulle said it is essential that all the countries—includ the United States and Russia—"should agree at least on a start on this project."

As possible starting projects he mentioned development of the Nile Valley in the Middle East and a fight against tuberculosis in Asia.

Quiz Still Due In Death Of Executive

PASADENA (UPI) — Police stationed at St. Luke's Hospital today waited for Mrs. Martha Taft, 30, to regain consciousness so she could be questioned about the hammer slaying of her husband, William Taft, 38, a missile company executive and distant relative of President Taft.

Hospital officials said she was expected to recover from the effects of razor-slashed wrists and about 50 tranquilizer pills she allegedly swallowed after the slaying Thursday in the couple's fashionable home here.

Police delayed seeking a murder complaint pending her return to consciousness, but a booking sheet holding her for investigation of murder was made out.

Before slashing her wrists, Mrs. Taft penned a six-page suicide letter in which she admitted the slaying, described as the climax of violent quarrels over the wife's fidelity.

Nothing Wrong In Lively Play Between Mother And Small Son

P.C. "My conscience bothers me because I enjoy roughhousing with my son. He is 5 and an only child. He can't wrestle with his daddy because he is overseas. Is it wrong for a mother to play this way with her boy?"

Reply. Not if you're agile enough to take it. Many little boys express their love vigorously. Have fun!

C.K. "Our girl is a senior in college. When she comes home for vacations she goes out with her old gang and stays out late. They go to a double feature movie, then bowling and on to a drive-in for food. They get home around 3 a.m. They are good, responsible youngsters. Do other kids stay out late these days?"

Reply .Many of them do. Formerly, extremely late nights usually were a sign of trouble. Now they may not be. If she's a good girl, don't worry. She is an adult now. She must make her own decisions.

T.M. "Our boy is in second grade. His teacher is also a credential psychologist. She said she was worried because our son is so moody. She gave him a personality inventory test. The teacher found his anxiety was related to me. He thinks I don't love him. Her first suggestion was that always make peace with him before he goes to sleep at night. His worst moodiness follows evenings when I've punished him and sent him to bed without a hug and a kiss. This puzzles me. I love him dearly. Could she be right about his feelings?"

Reply. She might well be. There are tests which give accurate pictures of children's feelings toward their parents. Youngsters who are still in the doghouse at bedtime may draw some harmful conclusions. Reconciliation after punishment is very important. Try to follow her suggestions.

Marin Scouts Celebrating Anniversary With Outings

Southern Marin Boy Scouts are having an overnight campout at Fort Cronkhite and scouts from central and northern Marin are camping on Mt. Tamalpais celebrating the 50th anniversary of Boy Scouting this weekend.

Thirty-five patrols from the Southern District arrived at Fort Cronkhite at 9 a.m. today to start a weekend jubilee camporee. The scouts will be tested on fire building, measurement, compass reading, map reading, first aid and rope lashing.

U.S. Army missilemen demonstrated a NIKE Hercules air defense mission for their guests this afternoon and tonight officials and business leaders from southern Marin towns will be special guests at a campfire at the Fort Cronkhite Lagoon.

Scouts from San Rafael, Novato and Potrero Meadows in the Miwok District of the Marin Council received instruction today on the slopes of Mt. Tamalpais in survival training from chairman Bruce Barron of Marinwood.

Burt Stutz of Marinwood will conduct a campfire program today at 7 p.m.

Members of Novato Explorer Post 56 were to have taken a trip this morning in a C119 Flying Boxcar of the 312th Reserve Troop Carrier Squadron at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Entries Received For Reed Schools Arts Festival

More than 100 entries have been received for the Reed Union School District all-arts festival to be held April 30, at 2 p.m. in the Bel Aire School.

Mrs. Seymour Whitelaw, chairman of the district parent-teachers' club event, said prose and poetry, as well as arts and crafts from first through 8th grade students will be exhibited.

The school orchestra and girls' chorus will perform. Seventh and 8th grade students will read the prose and poetry.

Dads Club Checks School Lunches

Fifty fathers of girls of the Larkspur-Corte Madera School District now have first-taste knowledge of the "frozen food luncheon" their daughters eat every school day.

With their daughters, members of the Dads' Club attended a fathers' and daughters' dinner at the Henry C. Hall School in Larkspur Monday night. All the daughters attend the fourth, fifth or sixth grades.

Daughters later square-danced with their fathers, and a magician entertained.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

NOW THEY CAN SLAM THE DOOR

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — They're going to have to find another doorstop for one of the classrooms at Highland Springs Elementary School.

A Civil War cannonball that had been serving the purpose, after lying around the school for two years, was turned over to police Friday.

An observant teacher noticed it still had a fuse.

Quentin Inmate Cuts His Wrists

A 19-year-old San Quentin inmate, transferred April 4 from Deuel Vocational Institution at Tracy, slashed his wrists with a razor blade Thursday in his cell, prison officials reported.

The prisoner, Donald L. Blackmore, was reported in good condition at the prison hospital.

He was transferred from Deuel to San Quentin as an "incorrigible," said Associate Warden Walter D. Achuff.

Mill Valleyan Named To Phi Beta Kappa

Wesley Hildreth of Mill Valley has been elected to Phi Beta Kappa as a junior at Harvard University. Hildreth, former student body president of Tamalpais High School, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hildreth of 179 Tamalpais avenue.

He is one of eight juniors tapped for membership in the international scholastic fraternity.

NEVER MIND THE PRAISE, GET THE KEY

PULGA, Calif. (AP) — Butte County sheriff's deputies congratulated Elmer Johnson for risking his life to pull a crippled man from a burning mountain cabin. They praised him all the way to the jail.

Johnson had just rescued McKinley Johnson (no relation) from the cabin fire that burned McKinley's 90-year-old father, Oscar, to death.

Elmer was booked for failure to answer a four-year-old traffic warrant. He remained in jail because he couldn't post $110 bail.

Hayden's Ex-Wife To Visit Children In San Francisco

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The long court fight between actor Sterling Hayden and his ex-wife, Betty Ann DeNoon over custody and visiting rights to their four children has been ordered transferred to San Francisco.

Superior Judge Aubrey N. Irwin made the order following an agreement between attorneys representing the divorced couple.

The agreement vacated a temporary visitation order issued last December. It required Hayden to deliver the children here every four weeks to spend the weekend with their mother.

Hayden now lives in Belvedere. He protested that the long trip interrupted schooling of some of the youngsters and otherwise interfered with their normal life.

The agreement gives Mrs. Hayden the right to visit the children weekends "in the San Francisco Bay area" at Hayden's expense every eight weeks. The first visit is to be May 14.

It was ordered further that any more legal proceedings on custody and visitation will be heard in the San Francisco courts.

Death Date Set For S.F. Killer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Richard T. Cooper, 33, who confessed to a San Francisco murder for which another man already had been convicted, was sentenced today to be executed July 8 at San Quentin Prison.

Cooper was sentenced for the 1958 strangling of Elvira Hay. Her common-law husband, John Fry, was convicted of killing her and was sentenced to San Quentin for manslaughter. Fry was pardoned after Cooper confessed.

Cooper's automatic appeal to the State Supreme Court was rejected today and Superior Judge Gerald Levin set the death date.

Brown Calls Meet On Gas Rate Hike

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Gov. Edmund G. Brown yesterday announced plans for a conference to see what, if anything, can be done about a 63 million-dollar boost in California gas rates since Jan. 1, 1958.

Brown said he wants to find out the reasons for the increase by the El Paso Gas Co. and for what he termed the failure of the Federal Power Commission to hold a hearing on the raise in prices.

The conference will be held here sometime in June. Representatives of the FPC, private and public utilities, natural gas companies and the state Public Utilities Commission will be invited.

Novato Chamber Mails Brochures

As of today, there is no excuse for anyone who can read to become lost in Novato.

Mailed yesterday to all members of the Novato Chamber of Commerce were the latest maps of the city and brochures describing Marin County's newest incorporated community, as well as a listing of all Novato chamber members.

There will be a 10-cent charge for the maps to all non-members of the chamber, but those in good standing may order additional copies at no extra charge, announced Robert F. Merritt, chamber secretary-manager.

Six Students Arrested In Fake Holdup

SANTA ROSA (UPI) — Five young men and a girl entered a branch bank and pulled out seven guns.

The youths kept their guns on 15 bank customers.

The girl, puffing on a long cigarette holder handed a note to a teller with a dollar bill attached. The note read:

"This is a stickup. Give us change."

The fake bank robbers, all students at Santa Rosa Junior College, were held in county jail today on $5,000 bail. They will be arraigned in Federal Court Monday on real bank robbery charges.

They were identified as Frank M. Palmeire, 20, Santa Rosa; Alan G. Sutter, 21, San Francisco; Robert H. Lindsten, 18, Oakland; John R. Cabl, 19, Redwood City; Frank Louis Priore, 21, Los Gatos, and Patricia R. Marcucci, 19, of Healdsburg.

When they entered the branch office of the Bank of America they were carrying a plastic sub-machine gun, two pellet rifles and four cap pistols.

Just as Miss Marcucci was passing their note to the teller, another bank employee started screaming. Someone else hit the burglar alarm and soon police came swarming in.

The students told police they planned the stunt after a "character day" celebration at the college.

Bank manager Scott O'Leary, whose bank has been held up by real robbers twice in the past year, said "as far as humor is concerned, the reaction of the bank employees was very poor."

An FBI spokesman said the Federal bank robbery charge under which the six were held was the only one that could be used. Federal law does not recognize attempted bank robbery as a lesser charge, he said.

Boats Collect Bay Debris

Floating debris was being collected from bay waters off Marin shores today at the start of a two-day sweep to reduce menace to small craft.

There were two Marin County collection stations at Sausalito and Pt. San Quentin, with a dozen others serving the overall clean-up which extended all the way from the Golden Gate to Stockton and Sacramento.

Final disposition of the debris was at the Army engineers' big incinerator at Sausalito to which collections from all 14 deposit centers were trucked.

All private boats in the bay area had been invited by Col. John S. Hartnett, San Francisco district army engineer, to join in the sweep designed to make bay waters safer at the start of the small craft season. The ban on open burning was said to have greatly increased the debris menace.

Marin Ranks Sixth In Building Permits

Marin County was in sixth place in March in value of building permits issued among the nine Bay Area counties.

Marin building permits totaled $4,572,000, compared to $1,903,000 worth of permits issued in February. Santa Clara County was the top building spot in March with $21,853,000 worth of permits. Low county was Napa, $642,000.

Of the $4,572,000 total in permits for Marin, $3,286,000 was for 193 dwelling units. The total for March, 1959, was 276 dwelling permits for a total of $3,513,000.

San Rafael, with $1,851,000 worth of construction, and Mill Valley, $256,000 were top county builders. Low city was Ross, $60,000.

Sergeant Fined

S/Sgt. Elbert A. Blodgett, 26, of 78th Organization Maintenance Squadron, Hamilton Air Force Base, must pay $150 fine and remain on nine months probation for his first drunken driving offense.

Judge Leonard A. Thomas of Marin Municipal Court sentenced Blodgett yesterday for driving while intoxicated on Highway 101 last Sunday. During probation, he may drive only for military duty.

Teacher To Be Army Instructor

Robert M. Brooks, industrial arts instructor at Sir Francis Drake High School, has been accepted by the Army dependent schools to teach in Europe next year.

Germany will probably be the destination, Brooks said, but the exact location will not be determined until later this year.

Charles M. Doll, another Drake industrial arts instructor, taught last year in Germany under the same program.

Brooks expects to leave sometime in August. He will be accompanied by his wfie, Genevieve.

Novato Kiwanians 'Adopt' Servicemen

A Hamilton Air Force Base unit, to be selected by base officials, was officially "adopted" this week by the Novato Kiwanis Club.

A proposal for adoption of Air Force units by the city's service clubs and chambers of commerce during Armed Forces Week, was made by Capt. Kenneth H. Kronlund, base project officer.

Under the plan, members of the adopted unit will attend the regular weekly meeting of their parent club. Club members will visit the base to observe the unit at work and at leisure.

Paradise Property Owners Set Meet

Directors of the Paradise Property Owners Assn. have set May 16 at 8 p.m. in the Bel Aire School multi-purpose room for their annual meeting to elect officers.

Dr. Fennimore Cady was appointed chairman of the nominating committee. Serving with him are Thomas W. Dorst and Edward J. Haynes.

Directors considered joining the Tiburon Peninsula Coordinating Council but tabled action until they could consider the council's constitution and by-laws, according to chairman A. S. Giesecke.

Tomales School Sets Open House

Tomales High School will hold open house Monday beginning at 7:15 p.m. it was announced today by Miss Annie Rook, teacher.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Tension Grips Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — A group of American residents here planned to guard their homes from possible terrorist attacks as pre-election tension grew in Laos.

U.S. Ambassador Horace Smith ordered all official American personnel to be off the streets from 11 p.m. today until after tomorrow's general election.

Radio Hanoi of Communist North Viet Nam has been charging American interference in the Laotian elections. There were fears here the pro-Communist rebels may take action against Americans during the weekend.

Students Demonstrate

TOKYO (AP) — A thousand Japanese students, shouting opposition to the new U.S.-Japanese security treaty, demonstrated in front of the Diet, Japan's Parliament, today.

The protest rally was called by Zengakuren, the radical left-wing students federation, and the League of Communists, which have been disowned as too militant by the Japanese Communist party.

Authorities sent 5,000 police to hold off the students at the request of the heads of both houses of the Diet.

Care Plan Opposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Democratic compromise plan to offer hospitalization or higher cash payments to the aged under the social security program has run into administration opposition.

Health Secretary Arthur S. Flemming rejected the latest Democratic attempt to ram a medical care program through Congress this session. He told a closed session of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday it would mean raising social security taxes by 2.3 to 11 per cent.

Flemming told newsmen that the administration opposes adding even voluntary hospital care to the social security program.

Verwoerd Recovering

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd, shot twice in the head two weeks ago, is now sitting up in a chair and eating semi-solid foods at Pretoria general hospital.

The prime minister is inquiring into state matters and is being informed of "a certain amount" of official business, his secretary, Fred Barnard said. Within a week he is expected to be doing more government work.

New Missile Success

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Air Force is packing a new missile shooting iron today after blasting an Atlas ICBM from a revolutionary horizontal concrete firing hangar.

And the Navy successfully tested yesterday a new method of launching that turns any ocean, lake or stream into a missile launching pad.

The Air Force, after the Atlas test yesterday at nearby Vandenberg Air Force Base, announced the new horizontal firing method is operational or combat ready.

Rebel Chief Caught

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (UPI) —Rebel Gen. Jesus M. Castro de Leon, captured yesterday in southwestern Venezuela, left here under guard last night for an unannounced destination.

General Castro was flown here from San Cristobal, center of his 30-hour revolt, and taken aboard the destroyer General Moran, which sailed at once.

Moon Photo Fails

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Tiros I weather satellite has failed in an attempt to photograph the moon, but officials say it is providing important information about storms.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said yesterday the Ft. Monmouth, N.J., ground station recently directed the satellite to take a moon picture, but the television transmission was marred by radio static.

The U.S. Weather Bureau announced that Tiros was more successful in providing data about storms.

Lutherans United

MINNEAPOLIS Minn (AP) — The newly unified American Lutheran Church today charted formal ties with interdenominational Christianity on the world scene—but not on the national scene

The church planned to affiliate with the World Council of Churches, but not with the National Council of Churches.

Neither of the three merging bodies, the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the American Lutheran Church, and the United Evangelical Lutheran Church have belonged to the National Council in the past. All three groups have been members of the World Council.

Factory Jobs Up

The hearings for James Eugene Hooten, 37, and Charles Earl Brubaker, 40, had previously been scheduled for Monday.

Man Gets Out Of Jail, Goes Right Back

San Rafael machinist William Fletcher Spurgin, 27, who bailed out of jail for $315 Wednesday on a charge of beating a woman, was back in jail yesterday in lieu of $5,250 bail.

When he showed up in court yesterday on the battery complaint, San Rafael police immediately escorted him into jail the second time—this one on felony check charges.

Officer Earl Christensen said Spurgin is suspected of passing a series of bad checks in town, several of them at the Villa Rafael Motel at 1606 Lincoln avenue.

Spurgin gave his address as 805 Fourth street. The first arrest Wednesday morning came on a complaint by Doris Palmer Fall of 845 Fifth avenue. She complained he arrived at her apartment about 3 a.m. Wednesday and proceeded to beat her.

Castro Levels 'Fifth Column' Charge At U.S.

HAVANA (AP)—Cuba's Fidel Castro accused the Eisenhower administration today of trying to set up a "fifth column" in Cuba.

He charged that recent remarks by President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Christian A. Herter were part of a "well prepared and premediated plan" to create an internal front.

In a television speech, Castro declared that statements by Eisenhower and Herter were "all part of a preconceived intent to create a fifth column to encourage a counter-revolutionary struggle against the Cuban government."

He also accused the United States of trying to organize some sort of action against Cuba within the Organization of American States.

Castro rejected Eisenhower's charge that he betrayed the Cuban revolution.

"If we had done that," he said, "the American president would have called us loyal friends."

In a recent letter to the Chilean Students Federation, Eisenhower warned against communism and said democratic ideas of the Cuban revolution were being betrayed. The Chilean students replied that they felt a true revolutionary process is developing in Cuba.

Castro pointed to actions by his government, some of which have hurt American investments here If they had not been carried out, he declared, "that would have been a betrayal of the Cuban revolution and its people."

"If we had not done this, Eisenhower would have called up friends of democracy and might have given us the same embrace he gave Francisco Franco of Spain."

New Coin Laundry Open In Hub City

Marin County's first "Speed Wash" coin-operated laundry unit has just opened in San Anselmo at 1612 Sir Francis Drake boulevard under the name of San Anselmo Speed Wash.

A second is projected for Novato, to open in late spring or early summer. Both will be operated by a California corporation, M. & H. Coin-Operated Laundries, Inc., which has opened more than 60 throughout northern California, while nationwide the operation includes between 4,000 and 5,000 units.

With 20 washers and six dryers, operating 24 hours every day, Speed Wash specializes in an unusually rapid short-cycle operation allowing washing and drying within 30 minutes. There are automatic coin changers and soap venders.

Novato Man In Accident Still Missing

Shock due to an automobile accident may be responsible for the continued absence of Robert T. Orband of 2 Diablo court, Novato, his wife said today in reporting that efforts to ascertain his whereabouts since the mishap last Tuesday haye been unavailing.

Orband, 29, is a bakery truck driver and salesman for a Vallejo bakery. His truck overturned after it was forced off the road Tuesday afternoon and Mrs. Orband said she fears that a head injury may have left him dazed and unable to coordinate his subsequent actions properly.

A distinguishing feature, according to his wife, is a scar in the middle of the forehead at the line of his hair which is light brown. Eyes are brown rather than hazel as earlier reported. Mrs. Orband said.

Corte Madera To Delay Job Test

An examination for superintendent of public works for the Town of Corte Madera has been postponed from April 30 to May 7 because of a lack of applicants, Town Manager Arthur H. Brandow reported.

Brandow on Monday night will ask the town council to increase the salary range for the position. If this is done, he plans to readvertise for applicants.

The job now pays $426 and $518 per month.

One applicant has filed to date, and one town employee will be a candidate for promotion to the position. He is George Paraspolo who is now acting superintendent of public works and holds the permanent post of town gardener.

Applicants must be between 25 and 50, be high school graduates or the certified equivalent, and have three years of experience in heavy construction or public works.

Today Believed To Be Shakespeare's Birthday

By U. P. International

STRATFORD UPON AVON, England (UPI)—The records have long since disappeared and nobody can say for sure, but it seems probable that today is the 396th birthday of William Shakespeare.

The celebration lasts all day. Shakespeare has become Stratford's major industry. What beer is to Milwaukee, steel to Pittsburgh and automobiles to Detroit—so is the Bard of Avon to Stratford. The flags of the nations are unfurled in the central streets, there is a floral procession from his birthplace to his tomb, there are endless speeches and toasts.

Tourist will number into the hundreds of thousands before the summer season ends. The first of them already are crowding into Stratford by rail and automobile exclaiming to each other about the rolling countryside of Warwickshire where the green miracle of the British springtime has occurred again.

Everything here is geard to Shakespeare. His picture peers from store windows, the house where he was born still stands and so does the one in which he died. There is a Shakespeare Museum, a Shakespeare statue and the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre where "The Merchant of Venice" is currently a smash hit.

All this is an old story to the residents of Stratford Just as a New Yorker seldom looks up at the Empire State Building, so do the local residents rarely go inside Shakespeare's birthplace. They simply take it for granted that somehow one of their own boys turned into the greatest writer of all time.

Was he? If you think he was not, stay away from the Black Swan, the Red Horse Hotel and the White Swan when the ale taps begin to flow and visitors from America, France, Scandinavia, India and almost any country you can name gather to talk about their hero. Advocates of Homer, Dante, and Tolstoy get short shrift in the Stratford pubs.

The other evening a German tourist was saying that if Shakespeare had written nothing but Hamlet, he still would be the world's greatest writer. He soared on to say that Hamlet's speech in Act III, Scene 1 was the greatest passage, prose or poetry, ever put on paper That is the one in which Shakespeare looks us all in the eye and poses a basic inquiry — "To be or not to be: That is the question"—is life worth living or would it be better to commit suicide?

There was a slight murmur of dissent from a few Macbeth fans, but most of the audience went along with the speaker. All this fuss probably would have amused the home town boy who went up to London at the age of 18, dashed off plays to meet the deadlines of his theater and apparently never worried about his position with posterity.

Shakespeare wanted to do two things—get rich and retire to Stratford—and he did them both.

And he doesn't want to be bothered now, because carved in large letters on his gravestone at the chancel of the Church of the Holy Trinity is this warning:

"Bless be ye man yt spares thes stones
"And curst be he yt moves my bones."

THIS IS ONLY a small part of the Sunnyside Nursery's growing grounds located at the foot of White's Hill near Fairfax—more specifically, it's the northwest corner of the grounds. In their entirety the grounds cover eight acres. And in those acres you can find both familiar and rare plants destined for Marin's fine gardens.

AN UNUSUAL FARM

Here's Where Those Plants Get Their 'Start In Life'

Drive about two miles beyond Fairfax on Sir Francis Drake boulevard, and there, hidden from view by creekside trees, you encounter what is probably the most continuously productive eight acres in all of Marin County.

This is the acreage devoted to growing nursery stock to supply the customers of Sunnyside Nursery in San Anselmo — the largest such "farm" in Marin.

Donald C. Perry started the operation about 12 years ago. And since that time, he estimates, it has produced finished plants at the rate of about 100,000 per year.

This adds up to a total of well over a million.

Most of the "crop" is consumed right here in Marin County. But some does go to other nurseries scattered about the Bay Area.

There is nothing left to chance by Perry and his aides. The soil mixture is prepared to a scientific formula developed at the University of California. And it is carefully treated to eliminate all chance of weed seeds, pests, and diseases.

A regular feeding program is carried out under the supervision of an expert who visits the nursery once a month to check both soil and feeding.

Twice a year the growing grounds are gone over from stem to stern by state and county horticultural inspectors. A clean report results in the granting of the "pinto tag," — a device which permits Sunnyside Nursery to deliver its plants almost anywhere in this state without further inspection.

Plants requiring shade for optimum growth are protected by an acre of lath houses. On the other hand, the sun-lovers get plenty of exposure to their favorite element. It is this careful regard to plant preferences in growing conditions that prepare them for their future places in Marin gardens.

Every garden planting need from potted geraniums to specimen shade trees is groomed at the growing grounds for eventual display at the retail nursery in San Anselmo.

Many a fine plant you now admire in Marin's fine gardens got its start in life in the eight-acre Sunnyside "farm" at the foot of White's Hill.

OWNER DON PERRY looks over some of the plants kept in one of the lath houses which occupy an acre of the grounds. There the shade-loving plants flourish. Photos are by Independent-Journal staff photographer Dick Steinheimer.

The Road To A Successful Garden

Continuous, Loving Care Is A Must

By CLAIRE TILDEN
Landscape architect

Beautiful gardens are not accidents. They're the products of continuous and loving care.

In Marin our gardens are outdoors extensions of the rooms of our houses. As such, the outdoor areas deserve the same meticulous attention as the interiors.

Every day people are moving to the country — people who are new to California. Many are appalled by their undeveloped property. They turn to the landscape architect for assistance.

For a nominal fee he will aid you with a consultation service or draw you a master plan. In either case, he will help plan a garden for your individual needs. Whether or not you expect to do the work yourself, he can save you making many costly mistakes.

HIS CHOICE OF materials is important in that they are suggested to do a specific job. He will endeavor to consider your budget and to plan a maintenance program within the scope of your ability. If you do him justice in the execution of his ideas, he will be around one day to take pictures which he will want to publish.

Perhaps you will rely on a landscape designer or contractor to aid you. He, too, will guide you on costs, suitable materials for construction, and appropriate plantings. He is prepared to execute all of your garden plans, or a section at a time.

Substitutions, especially in plants, can often be most disappointing. Each plant has a personality all its own, and it has been suggested because it can fulfill a definite need.

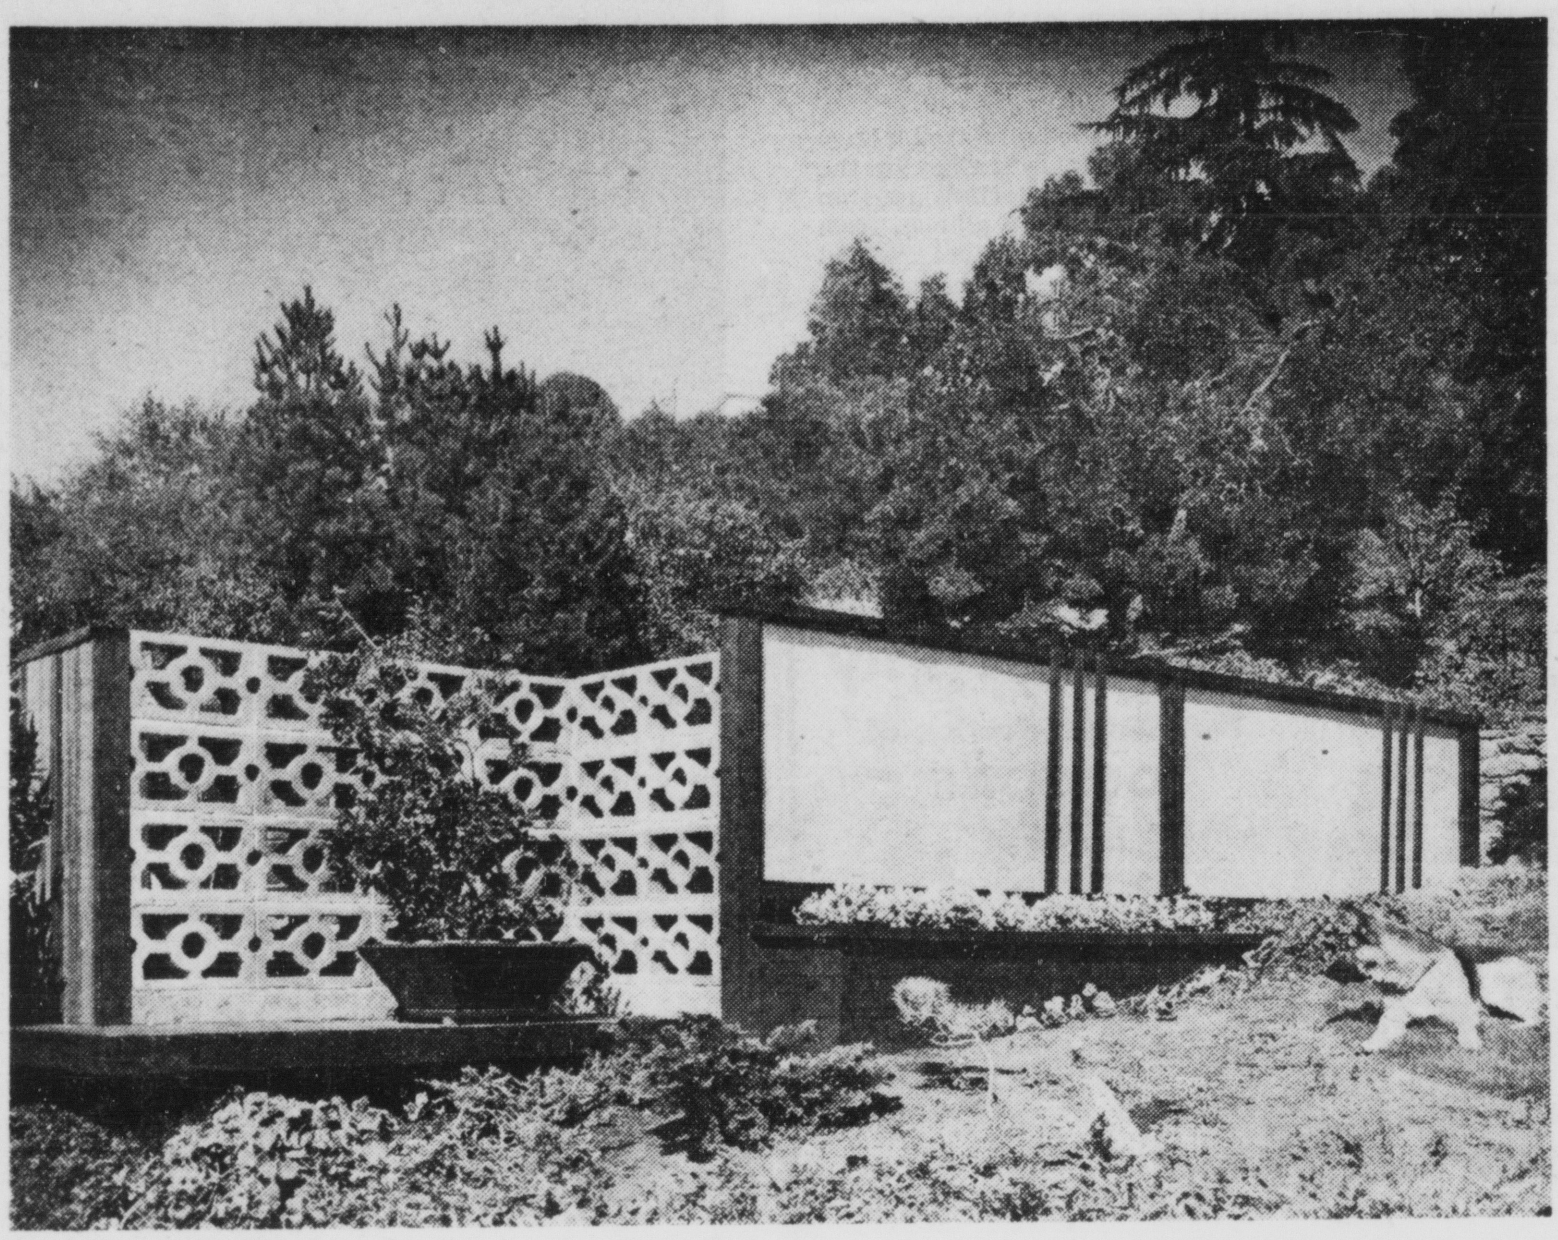
If you do not want the above mentioned services, do not overlook the advantages of consulting with your local nurseryman. He can suggest the proper plants for the varied climatic conditions of Marin. His nursery is stocked with plants that grow here, and he is in business to help you.

Now that we have discussed the planning stages, we can move on to the type and style of garden that will be suitable.

THE CURRENT trend is toward low maintenance gardens which, happily, are most appropriate for homes of contemporary design.

Basic ideas include the use of many forms of paving, ornamental rock or gravel and planting materials of broadleaf evergreens and conifers. Usually the front of the home is devoted to the public, and is elegant in its simplicity. Elsewhere the areas are for living outdoors, and must be functional as well as attractive.

Almost every home in Marin has some form of outdoor sitting area. This part of the garden must represent on opportunity for relaxation and fun. It may be an intimate corner or a spacious area, but it must reflect pleasing design and good taste in its arrangement.



Today the emphasis is upon uncluttered paving, built-in seats, ground covers and flowering evergreen shrubs. Demand is down on fish pools, wishing wells, elaborate masonry barbecues and large beds devoted to the raising of cut flowers. This should not, however, be construed as meaning that smaller concentrations of flowers are "out."

Here are some tips to a better relationship between client and worker:

Your landscape architect, landscape contractor or nurseryman starts you in the right direction. But he can't be responsible for the ensuing maintenance. Learn what will be necessary to sustain your initial investment, and make every effort to fulfill the promise of your new garden. If a problem develops, discuss it pleasantly and give your adviser an opportunity to see if he can help you. Remember that these men are human beings, and they will make some mistakes. They are frantically busy in the spring, and have to depend upon their assistants to help meet demands.

THE BOSS IS only one man. He cannot be everywhere at once.

The life of the average landscape contractor is not an easy one.

From 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. are his producing hours when he earns his living. After that he goes on appointments, purchases tomorrow's materials, and cleans up his truck and equipment. His evenings are spent estimating, drawing, bookkeeping, paying and sending bills, and making innumerable telephone calls. You can see that his dinner hour is sacred. Try to respect it.

And, as a final tip, never, never call a contractor early in the morning when he has a crew of men and expensive equipment standing idle.

GOLDEN REPLICA OF SHRINE TO HIGHLIGHT GARDEN SHOW

Japan's "Great Buddha" of Kamakura is providing the theme for the Oriental displays of "From Kew to Kyoto," the 1960 California Spring Garden and Home Show opening next Saturday for a nine-day run at Oakland Exposition Building.

Howard Gilkey, show designer, has sculptured a huge golden replica of the famous Dai Butsu shrine for the show, towering 30 feet among nine waterfalls into an orchid-framed lagoon. The central waterfall plunges from a bronze "Lotus Bowl" placed beneath the idol's folded hands.

Framing the Dai Butsu shrine will be a wealth of orchids and other exotic tropical plants.

In contrast will be the "Kew Gardens" landscapings at the opposite end of the Exposition Building arena, with emphasis upon formal rose gardens.

THE SKILLFUL HANDLING of a difficult garden entrance is illustrated here in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Zulch of Sausalito as planned and executed by landscape architect Scott Tilden. Rock planter, shrubs, and pipe railing form a focal point so that plain concrete wall recedes and no longer dominates the area.

Covers That Bloom

A ground cover that blooms can be just the thing to brighten your parkway, or to convert that hard-to-landscape patch of ground into a patch of color.

Out of bloom it is just what every good ground cover should be — an evergreen blanket. In bloom it offer its bonus of color.

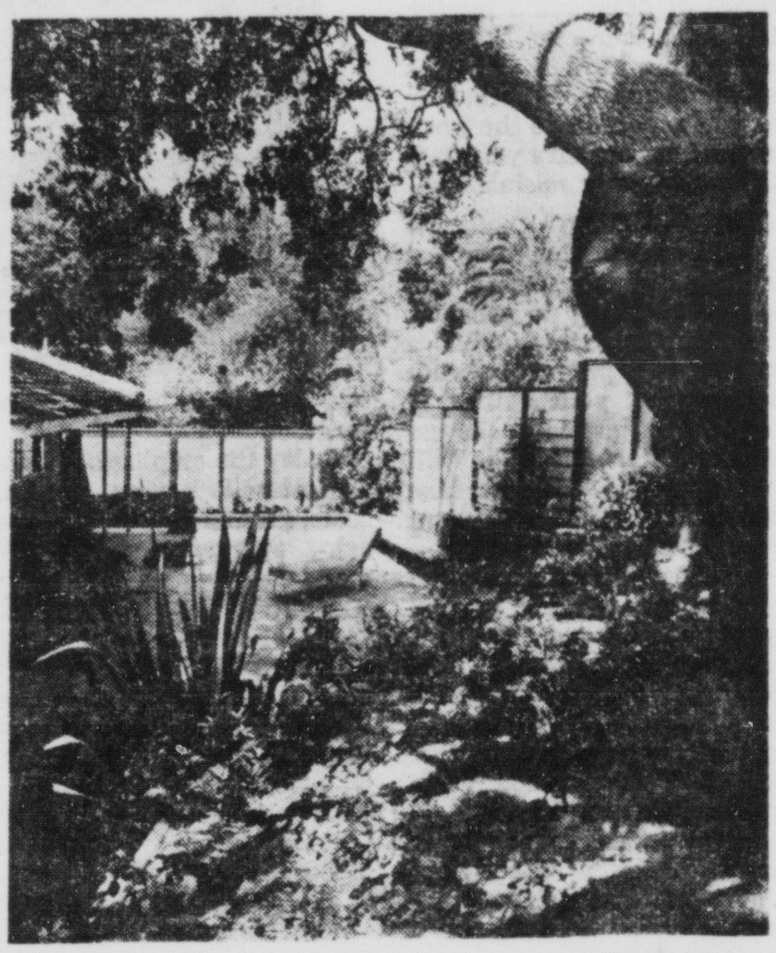
We checked a recent list of ground covers which the California Assn. of Nurserymen sent our way. On it, were a bumper crop of flower-bearing plants that fit our needs.

Some are modest in their bloom habit. Close matting Carpet Bugle falls in this class, as does the "wild" strawberry, though the latter's creamy blossoms are accented sharply against the green foliage. We can't argue with modesty, however, since both do a good job of providing both bloom and cover.

If the opposite of modesty —we balk at the word immodesty—is to your liking, you'll find that either the brilliance of Gazania or Ice Plant fills the bill. The bright yellow and/or orange, daisy-like blooms of the former have filled many a parkway in California, opening their faces to the sun each morning and shutting themselves up again at night. Ice Plant, in its most common form, is a ground hugger for bare banks that dazzles from a distance, nearly blinds you close at hand.

The most useful of all blooming ground covers—and most popular, too, come in-between these extremes of modesty. Here is the group that contains such familiar names as Lantana, Periwinkle, Ivy Geranium and Saint Johns Wort. And to them we have to add the new prostrate form of Glossy Abelia, one of the most exciting new flowering ground covers to come our way in a long while.

The new Lantanas show a good variety of exciting colors too, all of them a far cry from the limited choice the family offered some years back.



IN THE PATIO GARDEN of Mr. and Mrs. John Arnt of San Rafael, a two-level shade garden, plastic panels form the screening and provide a dramatic background for stepped planters. Claire and Scott Tilden were the landscape architects. (Photo by Ken Molino)

Those Worries Of Waste Space Aren't Necessary

The futility of weeding waste areas has always been a sore point with gardeners.

But, unless you can ignore the ragged edges you will hoe or pull or poison—or spend time worrying about it if you don't.

Now, as any nurseryman will tell you, there is really no need to worry about waste space in the garden. You have at your disposal the plant material to cover waste areas large or small. And once you've done this your worries are gone. As the planting takes over, weeds diminish and finally disappear or nearly so. They are replaced with plants that please the eye and pose no problem to you.

We can think of one planting of Rock Rose that illustrates the point perfectly. Before its owner planted it, he had a hillside strip of waste space that presented an unsightly backdrop to his garden. Today, the whole is planted to Rock Roses that have completely filled in to discourage weeds and ease the strain on the eye.

You could do the same with Common Rosemary, Lavender or Bush Germander. Santa Cruz Pyracantha, the as-yet-little-known Firethorn, is another example of an eye-catcher that makes an eyesore waste area something worth admiring.

ONE OF THE REASONS the chrysanthemum is so popular with Marin gardeners is that it is a plant that lends itself to training and special effects. Mr. and Mrs. Claude G. Bessellieu of 3815 Redwood highway, San Rafael, demonstrate that here with a "mum" they were training to grow over a "tree" composed of an old umbrella frame. The Bessellieus are extensive and enthusiastic growers of flowers. But "mums" are especially popular with them, and they are active members of the Chrysanthemum Society of Marin.

'Mums' Have Loyal Following In Marin

The chrysanthemum was probably first grown in China.

And in Japan, where many of its varieties were developed, the "mum" became so popular that it was designated the national flower.

But nowhere will you find a climate which is better fitted for mum culture than right here in Marin County. There is but one drawback. Early winter rains are sometimes unkind to late blooms that are exposed.

Pot culture offers a most satisfactory answer to this. The flexibility of location makes it possible to shelter the plants from those early rains.

AND IT ALSO makes it possible to achieve a variety of effects through changes in display and positioning.

In recent years the hybridizers of chrysanthemums have developed many new colors and types of blooms, thus adding to the popularity of this plant in Marin and elsewhere.

The result of this popularity in Marin has been the formation of the Chrysanthemum Society of Marin, an active and devoted group of "mum" enthusiasts who meet regularly on the second Monday of each month at the Bank of San Rafael, Fourth and B streets, San Rafael, at 8 p.m. to discuss their favorite topic.

A regular event sponsored by the society is its annual chrysanthemum show.

The 1960 show—the 12th annual such event—has been scheduled for Oct. 22 and 23 at the bank.

Theme of this year's show will be "Hawaiian Echoes." Theme flowers will be the Paradise and Moon Stone varieties.

THE SHOW IS open to all "mum" growers who wish to exhibit in competition or otherwise. And the public is always invited.

Meetings of the society are open to all gardeners interested in growing "mums." If you would like to join their ranks, here are a few tips that veteran growers are passing on to you on pot culture of their favorite plants:

Pots or containers which average the size of a gallon can work very well. Soil suitable to mum culture can be provided much better than in the open ground.

The Cascade type mum growers have created a very showy and unique effect of a flower covered waterfall. A tree type is now available which can be grown something on the order of the very popular tree rose. Certain types are also being tried as hanging basket specimens.

Outstanding blooms can be obtained from the exhibition type of mum in this area. When grown in pots in the open, many varieties will develop 12-inch blooms. Spiders, incurves and reflex types make up this group.

APRIL AND MAY have proven to be the best months to choose and plant mums in Marin County. The long days and warmer nights permit steady growth for good stems and plant structure. The local nurserymen stock a good variety of new rooted plants for growers during these months.

Many growers propagate by taking new tips about three inches long and rooting them in sand. After good root formation is shown on cutting they are transplanted to small pots for a hardening process or they may be planted direct to the ground or container which will be their home until after blooming.

When plants indicate that they have accepted their new surroundings and act like they are happy, the grower can then begin to form the plant by pinching the tips and allowing several branches to form from the plant. This will allow more blooms per plant but will also cut down the size. To allow only one stem to develop the largest bloom can be obtained. Three productive stems from one plant is more practiced by the home gardener, All lateral growth is kept pinched off if the size of the bloom is important. This way plant food is channeled either one, two or three ways.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS are always hungry. After they are well established in their permanent containers, food along with good watering procedure will give you excellent results. From July until buds begin to show color a faithful fertilizing proceedure should be followed. A good commercial liquid fertilizer should be used at about 10 day intervals. Growers should also be alert to any pests which show up. The sooner you lick them the better your reward for your work.

Soil preparation is very important if the best results are to be obtained from your investment. A mixture which has proven very satisfactory in this area is five parts good soil, three parts of good barnyard and two parts Vita-Peat, leaf mold or peat moss. Some bone meal can be added to the mixture with good results.

GOLDEN GROOM...

Great for Gardens...Lawns too!

GOLDEN GROOM—an exciting new product for gardens fresh from the Douglas fir forests of California. This scientifically ground fir bark, pre-treated with nitrogen, does nature's work for you in your garden in many wonderful ways.

CONDITIONS SOIL—loosens up adobe and clay-like soils—gives added body to sandy soil. Makes digging easy and roots grow like mad.

CUTS WATER BILL—as a top dressing mulch Golden Groom insulates roots and conserves soil moisture. Your garden thrives with less water—less work.

COMBATS WEEDS—2 inches of Golden Groom spread over planting beds, flower garden and plant containers, smothers out weeds.

FORTIFIED WITH NITROGEN

Golden Groom is pre-treated with organic nitrogen to trigger the decomposition of the fir bark.

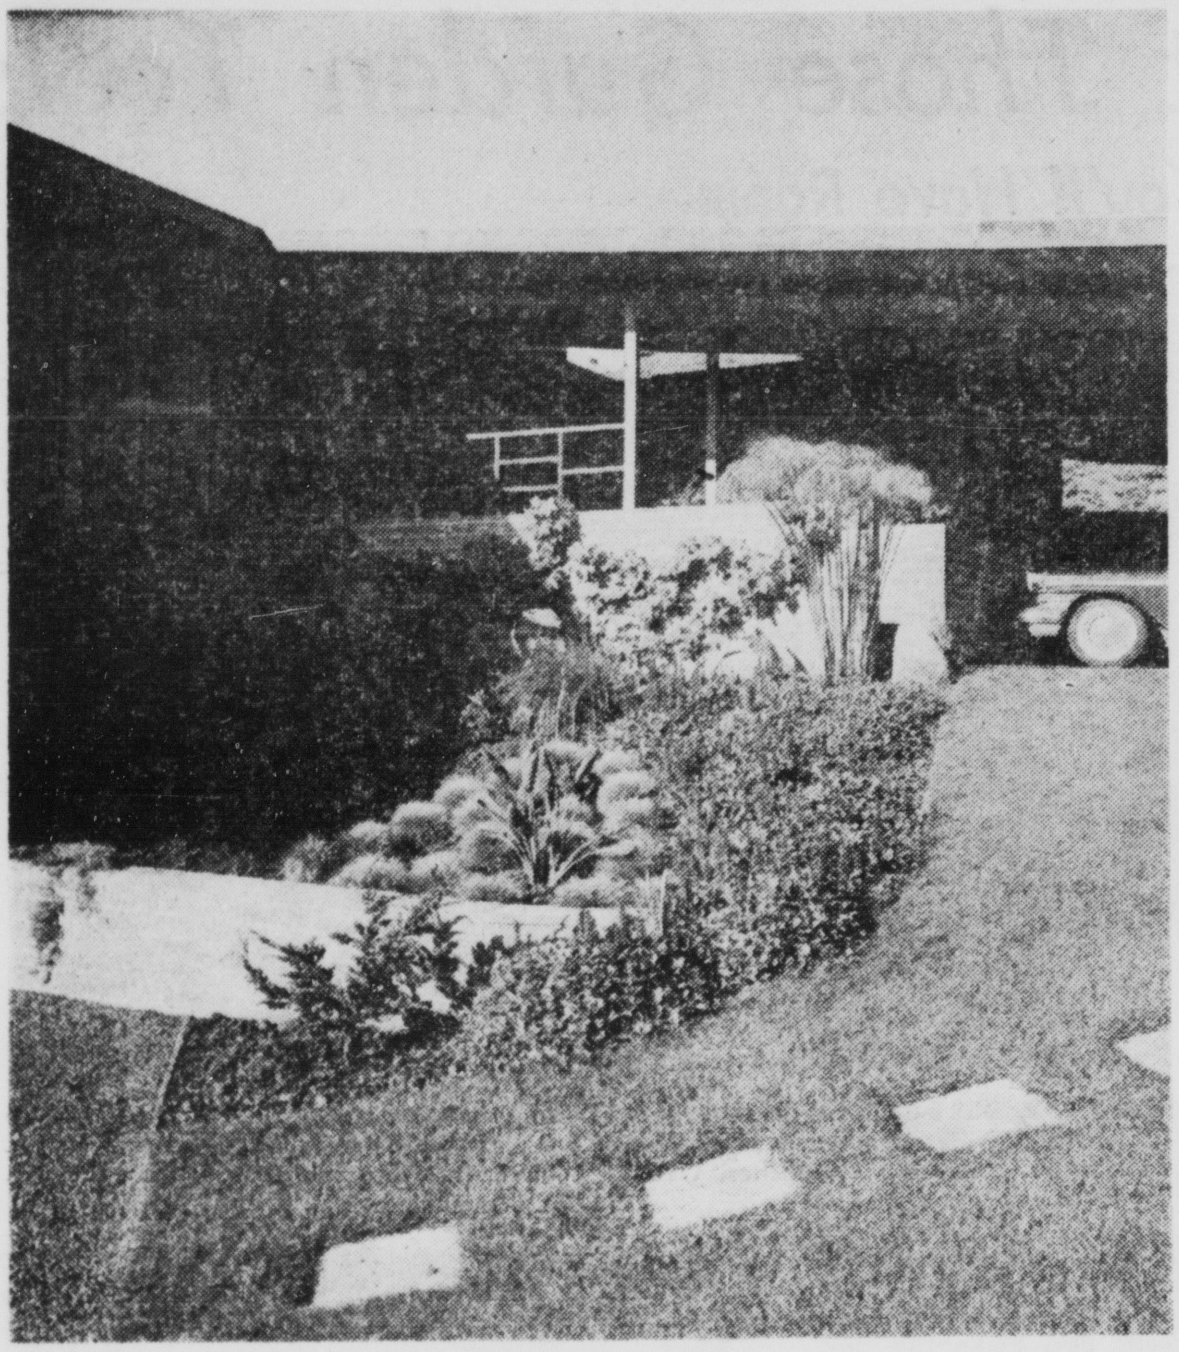
YOU'LL FIND GOLDEN GROOM AT ALL LEADING NURSERIES AND GARDEN STORES

DWARF CITRUS— A DELIGHT TO THE GARDENER

Any way you look at it, dwarf citrus is a gardener's delight.

Its colorful fruit—so wonderfully out of proportion to the size of the tree—is an asset in the ornamental garden or the patio. Its blossoms are often tantalizingly fragrant and its clean, glossy foliage is always pleasant. What more could you ask?

Dwarf citrus is adaptable to either ground or container planting, too, which adds to its usefulness in the home garden. In the ground, most varieties will evenutally grow to eight feet high with an equal spread, but they take years to do it. In tubs—and members of the California Assn. of Nurserymen suggest you give considerable thought to this method of growing them—they are much more compact.



PAUL AND KATY Steinmetz, local landscape architects, were responsible for the tropical planting accentuating the entry of General and Mrs. Charles B. Stone's Reed Ranch Road home in the Reedlands. Emphasis is on tropical planting highlighted by birds of paradise, ginger, elephant ears and dwarf callas. It is a perfect example of how charming the entrance to one's home can be through proper garden planting. The Stones' home was built by the William H. McDevitt Construction Co. A Place To Put Those Garden Tools

Then You'll Have Room In Your Garage For Car

If a rising tide of rakes, shovels, hoses, lawnmowers and fertilizer sacks threatens to evict your car from its place in the garage, you can build this 32-square-foot storage house and give all those garden items a spot of their own.

Designed by architect Walter Widmeyer for his own home, this garden house is a combination of practicality, simplicity, and style. And the construction materials don't cost much more than a new power mower — about $125 to $140.

The garden house can be built in the yard, garden, or next to a patio or walkway. If you have a swimming pool, it can double as a dressing room It is a simple construction project, since panels of waterproof, vertically grooved Texture One-Eleven fir plywood function as combination sheathing-siding.

Inside, there is a place to hang garden tools and hose. Wide three-quarter inch fir plywood shelves hold assorted boxes and bottles of fertilizer and spray. One shelf serves as a potting bench. Even the door has narrow shelves for storage of smaller items. There is plenty of room on the floor of the unit for the barbecue brazier, lawn mower, and large bulky articles, such as garden chairs and fertilizer bags.

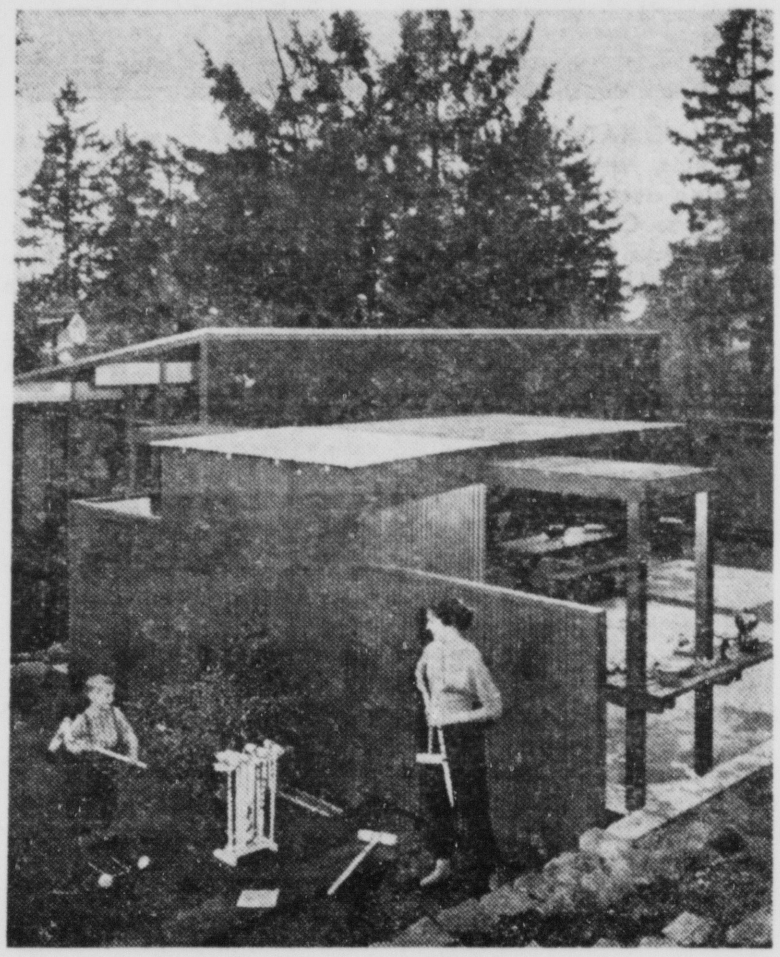
Outside, a handy built-in table provides a work and serving area for patio suppers. Decorative screens flank small plant beds on both ends of the garden house. The screens also make the unit look larger, and insure privacy on the patio.

The roof of the garden house is plastic panels.

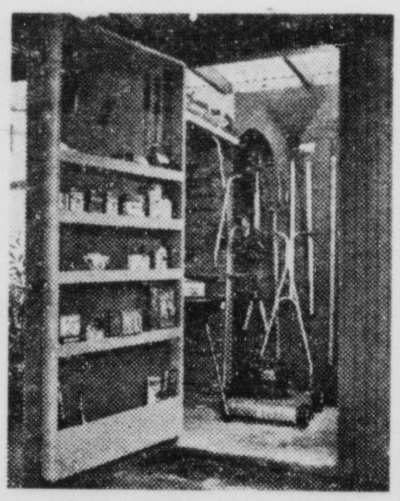
A cantilevered lath overhang decorates the front of the unit. This is achieved with half-inch battens nailed to two by six beams. A canvas could be stretched over the lath to provide shelter in case of a quick shower.

For a free construction plan for the Garden House, write Douglas Fir Plywood Assn., Tacoma 2, Wash.

THE HANDY, BUILT-IN table of this garden house provides a work and serving base for patio suppers or lunches. Overhang has lath top and can be covered for rain protection. For details on how to obtain a free construction plan, read the article on this page.



THIS REAR VIEW of the garden house shows how screens assure privacy — and magnify the size of the structure. Note the clean, straight lines.



THERE'S PLENTY of room inside for garden tools and supplies. And that, of course, is the primary function of the structure. Shelves are located at the right of the tools. There's a place for everything, and with everything in its place, the gardener saves valuable time. He also releases valuable garage space for its real purpose . . . housing the family car.

BONSAI, the growth and shaping of miniature trees and plants, is an Oriental art that has become exceedingly popular in the United States. There is a large and enthusiastic following in Marin. They explain that bonsai permits them to combine their enthusiasm for gardening with their artistic talents. The result are tiny gems such as this dwarf tree shown in its holder on a table. TRY THE NEW HYBRID HYDRANGEAS

For a shrub that puts out bigger and better blooms, hydrangeas can't be beat.

If you fail to share such enthusiasm for hydrangeas, the California Assn. of Nurserymen says you're probably gardening with older shrubs. You simply couldn't have encountered some of the newer hybrids with their glorious colors. These voluptuous beauties come in shades of scarlet, pink, red, rose and pure white. And they are always to be found in the lovely shades of blue which attract so much attention.

If pruned heavily in early spring, the large growing types can be maintained at four or five feet. When pruned to the ground, they make a dense, compact three-foot shrub.

Monthly applications of iron sulfate during the blooming period, will intensify the color of the blooms.

Garden In Your Kitchen Can Be A Good Provider

Does the aromatic freshness of garden herbs accent your cooking? Are fresh-picked vegetables featured at your table? If you answer "no" to these, then you need a kitchen garden.

Kitchen gardens are commonplace in France, where their contribution to the good life is legendary. And any serious gourmet—or anyone who aspires to culinary success — should consider planting such a garden in his back yard.

A check with any nurseryman reveals that growing a kitchen garden is as simple as growing annual flowers. Many of your favorite garden herbs and vegetables are available as seedling plants, while those that aren't come easily from seed.

If your space is really limited, the nurseryman suggests you start with a basic few and add their enjoyment to your life. Start your kitchen garden with half a dozen herbs and an equal number of salad greens and other vegetables.

Sage, Thyme, Savory and Rosemary take up little more space than a potted geranium and often not as much. They are available as seedlings. A packet of parsley seed, soaked overnight in tepid water to encourage germination, will come on easily in a few weeks.

Lettuce of several varieties is a good starting point for gardener-chefs. You'll notice the difference in your salads right off. Broccoli, Cauliflower and Celery are also to be found as small plant in nursery flats. And it takes only a few tomato plants to keep the average family happy right through summer.

From seed will come the likes of string beans and summer squashes—two or three hills of squash is enough for most families; four or five will feed your neighbors, too, which isn't a bad idea.

The Natives Are Friendly— Some Thrive On Neglect

You don't need a guide book to tell you that the natives are friendly in California.

But it takes a knowing gardener to tell you just how nice they can be around the home. Native plants, that is.

In the first place, California's natives come in colors, sizes and shapes to satisfy the most exacting landscaper. Secondly, their culture is so easy that what you don't do for them is more important than what you do.

Taking the second point first, hear this warning from the California Assn. of Nurserymen: The association says the nicesty thing you can do for most natives is to neglect them. Being natives, they are not used to year-round watering and don't like it. Plant them now and water to establish the new plants. Then slack off.

There are extremes to which you can go with neglect—or with attention, if you prefer. The eye-catching, yellow - flowered Fremontia, which lends its stiff tree-like form and warm tones to dry hillsides up and down the state is most susceptible to over attention. You can kill it with a minimum of kindness. Ignore it completely and it will thrive.

Tree Anemone, on the other hand, will submit to a considerable amount of summer watering and can be used in close where its attractive blooms and narrow, evergreen foliage blend with other colors in late spring. The flowers are white with prominent yellow stamens and very fragrant.

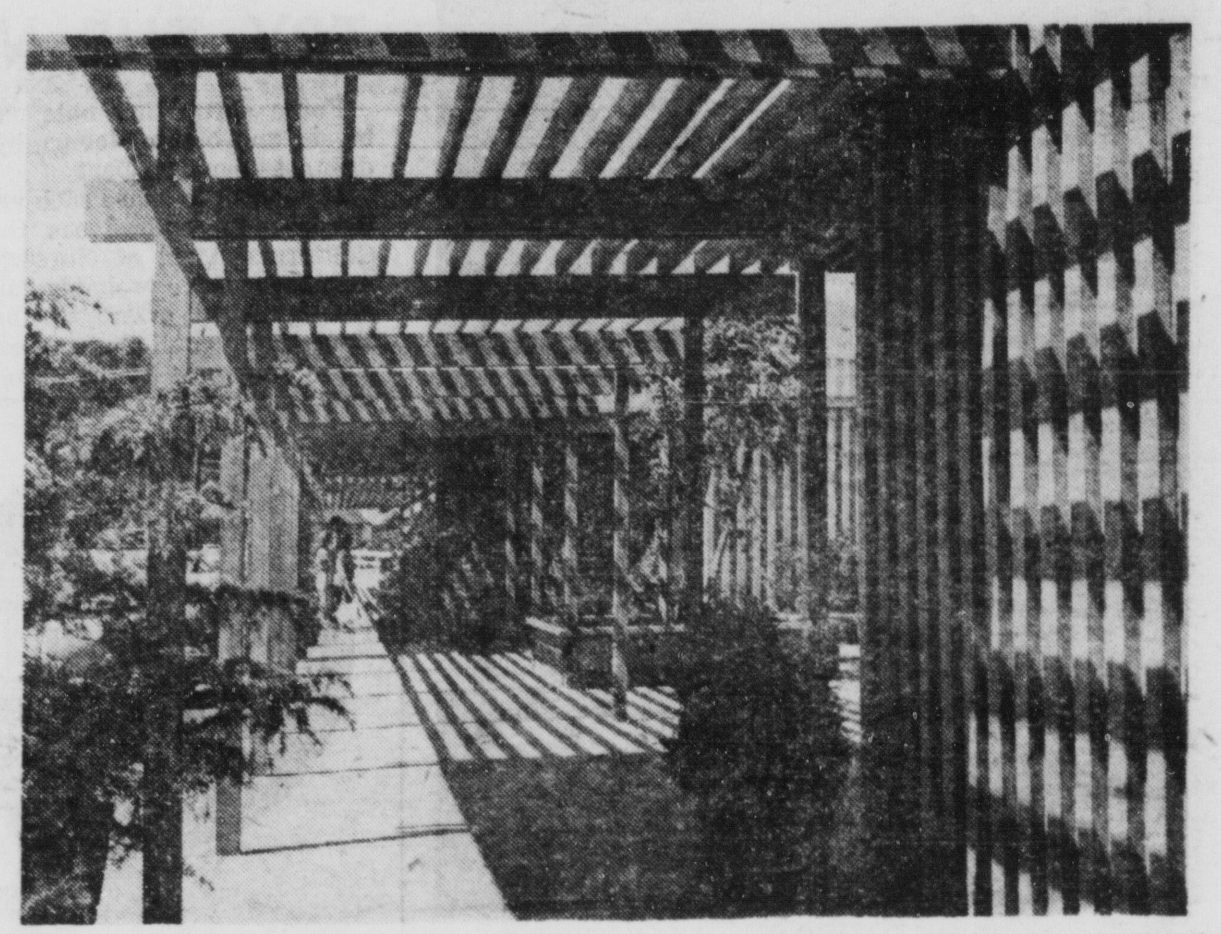
Some 'Unusuals' You Should Think About

If you have an eye for the unusual in the garden, you have plenty to choose from in California. Nurserymen can show you a carload of plants that are both different and desirable.

Just for a starter, have you tried the Shrimp Plant? You can get a lot of mileage out of this near ever-blooming little evergreen. The flower bracts resemble nothing so much as shrimps — lovely bronzed shrimps and shadings of cream that catch the sunlight and reflect it in warm-toned radiance. If you don't enjoy this one in your garden, don't say we didn't tell you about it.

So-called Flowering Maple, not a maple at all, but a dwarfish evergreen shrub, will earn its share of double-takes whenever and wherever it's planted. Give it a semi-shaded spot with adequate water and enjoy its summer-long show of orange-to-red, bell-shaped flowers. It will show some color most of the year in mild winter areas such as Marin. And its maplelike foliage is nice to look at in the off season. Flowering Maple is an old favorite for pot culture with those who know it.

There's nothing unusual about Glossy Abelia, but you'll stop them cold with the new prostrate form of this familiar shrub. Spreading Abelia comes highly recommended for parkways or other problem spots that need an easy cover. Clean, glossy foliage and small white flowers in summer are your reward.



THE NEW EGGER AND SON nurseries building in Mill Valley has a cool and restful, yet modern look. Shaded walkways, landscaped patios and the use of always handsome redwood contribute to its appeal. Professionals in the nursery field hail it as one of the finest on the West Coast.

Nurseryman In Mill Valley Practices What He Preaches

Physician heal thyself.

This old proverb has been carried out to the last landscaped inch by Egger and Son, with nurseries in Kentfield and Mill Valley. Suppliers for some of the most unusual gardens in Marin, owner Jim Egger decided to re-do his own commercial establishment in Mill Valley.

He called in an architect, Michael Wornum of Mill Valley.

He phoned one of Marin's top builders, Ed Burgar.

Three months and some $50,000 later you wouldn't have recognized the old Egger nursery at the corner of Sycamore and La Goma in Mill Valley.

In its place was a modern, functional, and restful redwood building with shaded walkways, landscaped patios, benches, paved parking area and 10,000 square feet of filtered sunlight lath houses.

"And happily the investment has increased business," Egger says. "When the bills for the landscaping, building and what have you came in, we did a double take. But the customers liked it. We certainly find it more convenient. And the black side of the books looks mighty pleasant."

The move to modernization has received enthusiastic praise from architects and professionals in the nursery field as well as an increased tempo at the cash register.

"The future of the nursery industry in Northern California lies in the foresight and planning of establishments of this kind," adds Jack Schneider, president of the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

Egger is active in the field of outdoor living, conservation and planning in Marin, a past director of the Marin Conservation League, and acted as manager of the Marin Art and Garden Fair for four years.

The firm also maintains another large nursery at the corner of Wolfe Grade and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Kentfield. A low rambling adobe building is the central motif at that location, serving as a center-piece that ties in three acres of greenhouse, lath-house and planting area.

A case of practicing what you preach.

Down to the last green thumb.

THE INTERIOR of the new Egger and Son nurseries building in Mill Valley is as attractive as the exterior of the structure. A feature is 10,000 square feet of filtered sunlight lath houses. (Independent-Journal photos)

Annuals Are Basic Ingredient In Summer Garden

Planning your summer garden without the use of annuals is like painting a picture without enough colors. You get the picture, but unless your talent runs deep, your picture is usually incomplete.

Annuals are the basic ingredients which the gardener needs to mix his color palette. They provide hues and tones which no other plant material can supply. They brighten the garden picture and gladden the gardener's heart.

Happily, annuals do all this with an ease that belies their worth. To say all things worth having are hard to come by is to overlook annual flowers completely. You need only drop in on a neighborhood nurseryman, pick up a flat or two of seedling plants and head for home with a big head start on the summer garden. Most seedlings planted now will start showing color before summer comes and reach their height by the time the last school bell has rung.

Plan, then, how you will use this easy-to-come-by color. Do you want it in separate beds for cutting? Or will you fit it into a perennial border, along a path, in containers for portability?

The use of annuals for spot color has often been overlooked. Don't be shy about fitting a few plants here and there in pocket-size beds. A few groupings of white stock may be just what you need as a front for that back ground of blue delphinium. Low blue mounds of ageratum or lobelia mak a good foreground for the stately backdrop of perennial phlox. Portulaca and/or verbena in and around a rose garden make for eye-catching combinations of color. And annuals in combination with other annuals give you many opportunities for working up a masterpiece.

You can make a big splash with a bed of asters or zinnias, a border of petunias or marigolds, an edging of alyssum. And if you would be really resorceful, plant containers full of annuals for color on deck or patio—or as the case might be to sink in the ground where another planting is going out of bloom.

THESE BEFORE AND after pictures show a large indoor plant prior to and after receiving a pruning.

Prune Large Indoor Plants Same As Outdoor Shrubs

Large house plants in clay pots normally put on more healthy growth than me be desirable either from the standpoint of good "plantology" or good looks. It is usually wise to prune and shape such plants shortly after each period of rapid growth.

Just as you would encourage fresh new growth by removing some of the largest, oldest stems from an outdoor shrub, so you should thin houseplants that have too many stems rising from the soil. Leave enough of the old growth to give the plant the height you want—yet remove enough so that the root system throws its strength into the remaining new, virile shoots.

The taller a plant grows, the more stem it needs for the sake of beauty. In other words when a plant is low and bushy it matches its clay pot environment best if it does have leaves growing close to the soil—close to the rim of the pot. As it increases in height, however, some of its lower leaves must be removed to retain the proper relationship between pot and plant. With very large specmiens—it may be necessary to remove some of the branches and side-shoots low on the stems.

It is imperative, of course, in the interest of plant health, to remove dead leaves, shoots, and twigs and destroy them. Also, you should remove overthick growth in the "head" or main leafy body of the plant. When you do, light is better able to reach the remaining leaves, and the plant is better off for it.

Some pruning of indoor plants should be done with regular pruning shears, or a heavy pair of kitchen shears, or a very sharp knife. All cuts must be clean, and close to the stem. If it is intended to control the length of a stem or a branch, make the cut a little beyond a bud or a node that points in the direction you want the new growth to take, since a plant will normally branch and continue its growth from this bud or node.

Some plants are characterized by a definite brittleness right at a leaf joint or stem division. When bent sharply at these points they snap. Plants of this sort are best pruned by snap-breaking at these natural locations.

Porous clay pots are fine for propagation of household plants. Injurious salts contained in many soils can escape through the walls of the clay pot, preventing a concentration of salts from souring the soil and killing the plant. Too, you never have to worry about over-watering. Excess moisture will find its way through the pot and evaporate.

Shaping, pruning, thinning, cutting back and proper planting are all beneficial to the plant, and when carefully done will make nearly any plant more beautiful.

Blue Hydrangeas

An acid soil will turn some (but not all) hydrangeas to lovely shades of blue and keep blue ones the way they are. Not all gardeners go for the blue shades, however, and who's to blame them. The several shades of pink in which new hydrangeas come are just what the doctor ordered to chase the blues. Try them and you'll see what we mean.

Some Favorite Plants Of The Landscapers

Do professional landscapers have favorite plants?

The answer is definitely yes, as anyone who reads the home magazines can readily see. Moreover, in California the landscapers show remarkably similiar likes, regardless of what part of the state they work in.

The reason for this is obviously that certain plants have what it takes to create striking effects in modern garden design. And this is not to say they are more prevalent than other plants, which they definitely are not. Nurserymen sell far more camellias than, say, New Zealand Flax. But the latter tends to show up in a good many newly planned gardens. It is a designers favorite for accent and striking effect.

If a mind-picture of New Zealand Flax escapes you, thumb through a book or magazine of garden design. You'll know it for its sword-like leaves, flaring up cone-like from the narrow base. You won't turn many pages, either, before you spot a bed or border of Blue Fescue, those mounds of meadow grass that look like so many porcupines in the garden. They are striking when inset in a patio bed.

Golden Bamboo is ever a favorite for its feathery grace in the garden. Landscapers use it in tubs and boxes for deck and patio, as single specimens in a border or in a row to screen off unwanted views or mark a boundary. The unrelated Heavenly Bamboo is always present also. You see it in tubs now and then, but more often in borders where its lacy network of canes and leaves contrasts against a fence or wall.

Tree Ferns would also place high on the list of landscape favorites. So would Twisted Juniper, which stands out so grotesquely against fences and walls. You can spend some hours thumbing through pictures to see how these other landscape favorites might fit your own garden.

HERE ARE THE working plans for the Carousel, garden and patio bench as designed by Marin landscape architects Katy and Paul Steinmetz. It will add much to the entertainment features of your garden. And it is easily built.

THIS IS WHAT your bench will look like when it is completed. It is a sturdy piece of outdoor furniture. And it does not easliy tip over. For some variations of the Carousel, also designed by Katy and Paul Steinmetz, look on the facing page. Perhaps one of those variations will be more suitable to your needs.

HANDSOME AND USEFUL

Build Your Own Garden Bench

In today's gardens and patios, which see so much entertaining, benches are a handsome, useful addition.

They are especially useful if (1) they don't tip over easily, and (2) they are sturdy yet light enough to move around to provide seating where needed.

A broad base insures proper balance and non-tipping, according to Marin landscape architects Katy and Paul Steinmetz, who designed these benches. (The designs are also adaptable for single chairs.)

The landscape architects also give these tips for bench making in the home workshop:

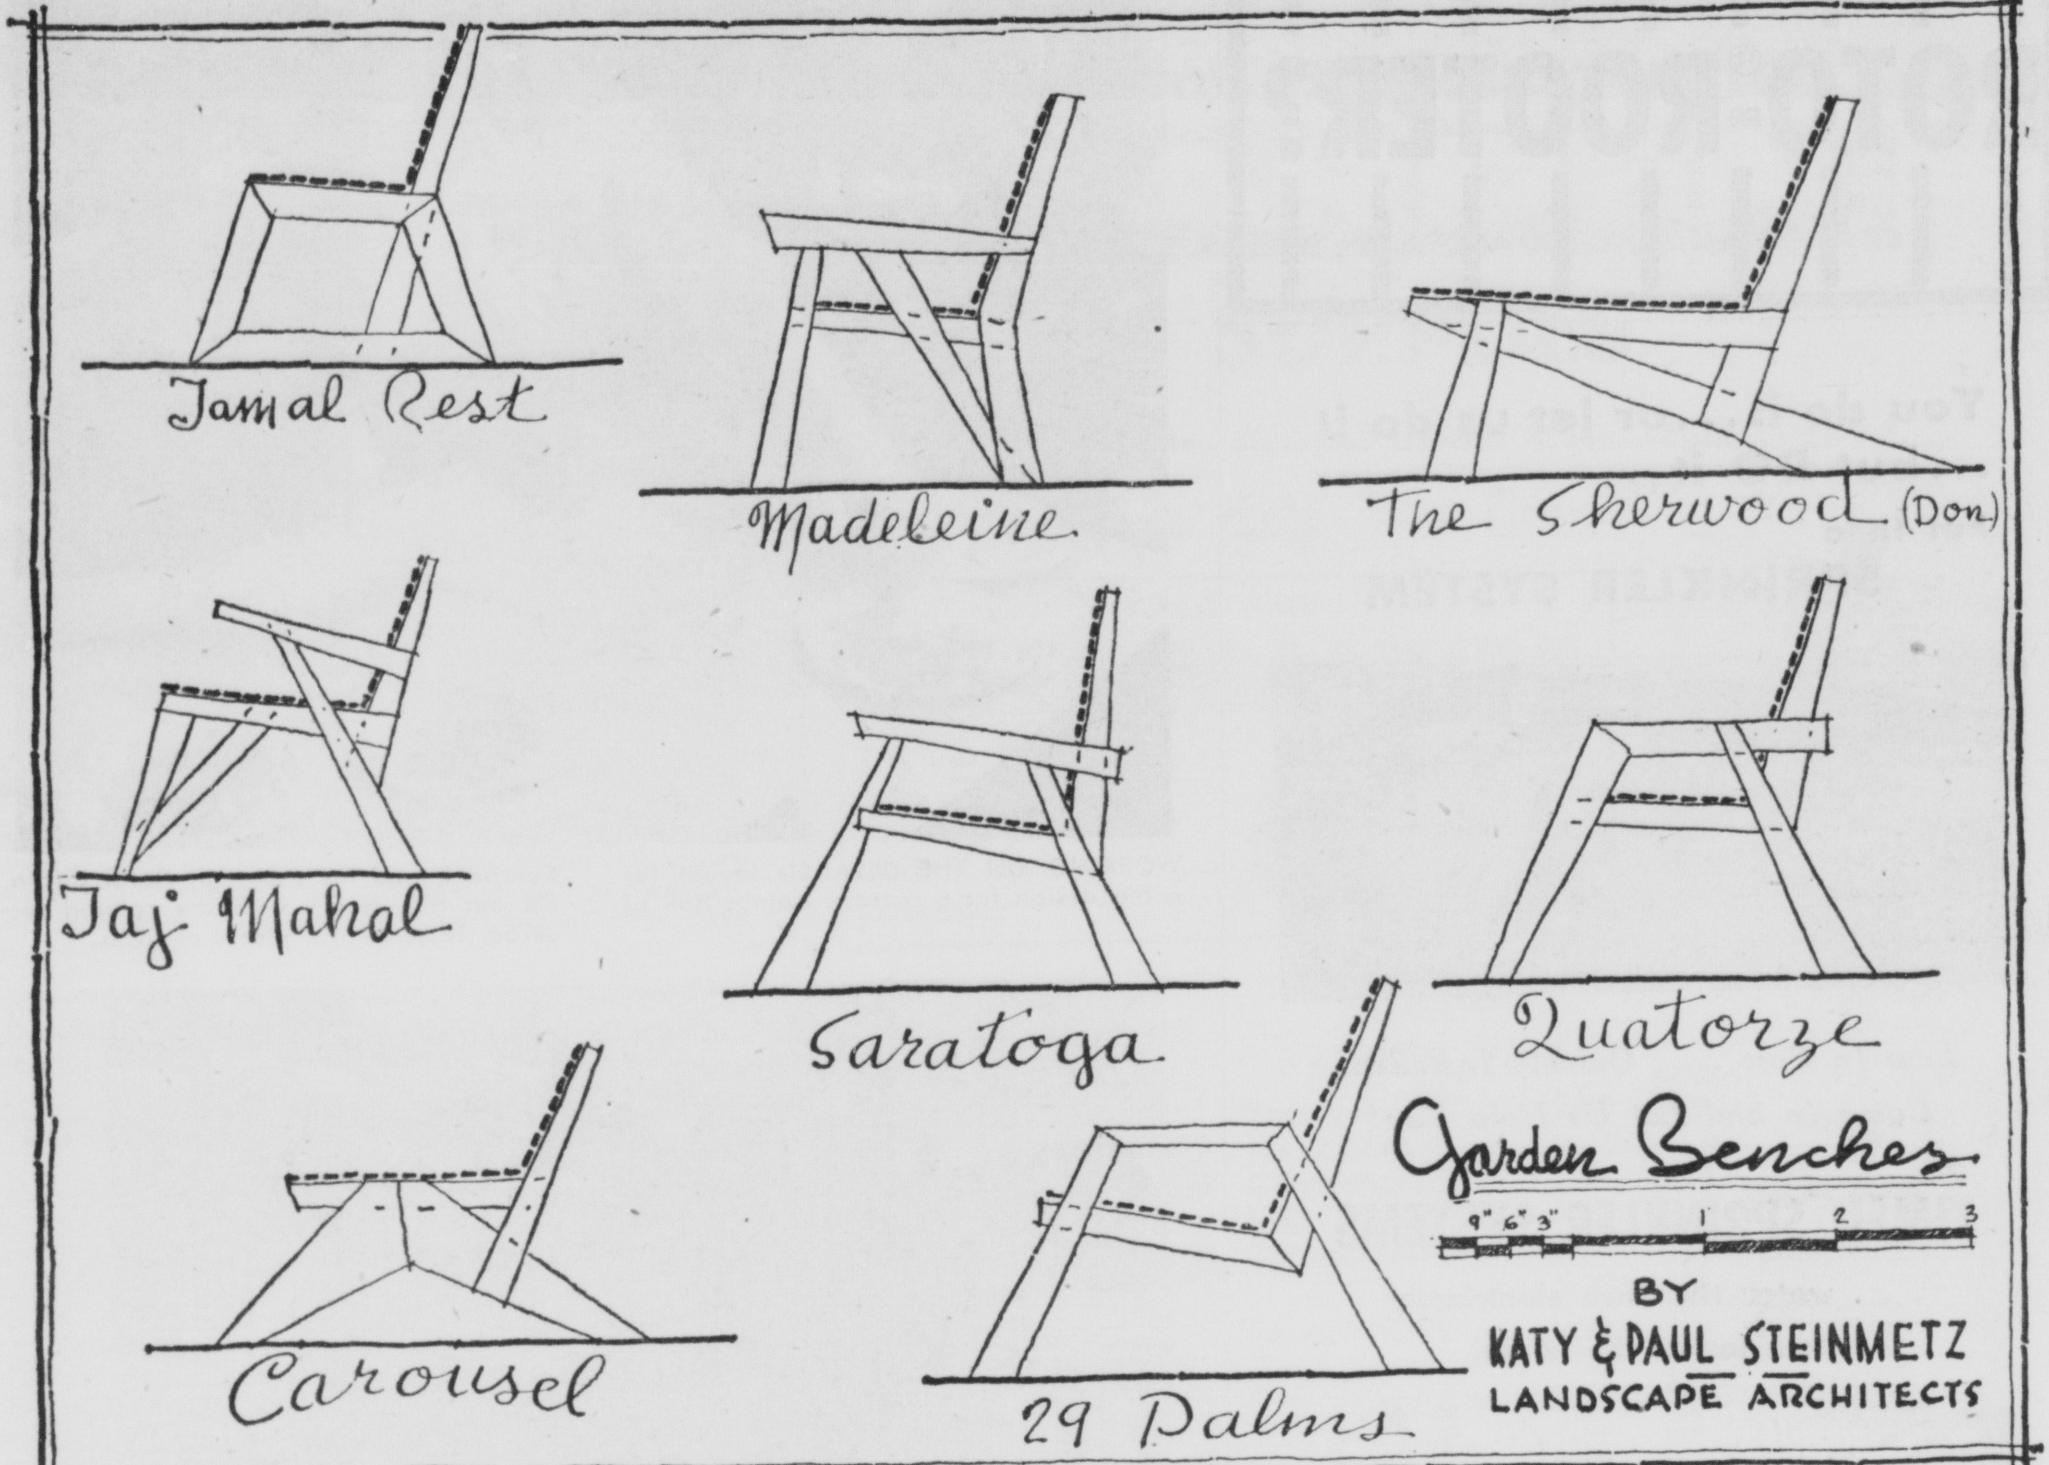
Make the seats low enough to permit addition of colorful cushions or pads. These are easily taken indoors, while the benches themselves may be left out and don't take up valuable storage space.

Use redwood, clear heart select grade, the best dry lumber available.

To insure weatherability, use a good quality stain and galvanized or aluminum screws and bolts to prevent rust and consequent "bleeding."

Place two or three matching benches together to create the long, low, built-in look.

Look Them Over And Choose The Bench You Like



HERE ARE A NUMBER of different types of garden benches. Look them over carefully and you are certain to find one whose design catches your eye and fits your needs. All can be built generally along the same work plans as those shown on the facing page for the Carousel. And none involves intricate carpentry or great expense. A bench is a virtual necessity for today's garden where the owner and guests can enjoy many pleasant outdoor hours.

WORKING ON THE DETAILED layout for a big design for a mosaic, Haines Hall of Kentfield, and his assistant, Carol Coffin, fill out the design with the colored tesserae. Tesserae are pieces of glass.

THIS FINISHED MOSAIC is a huge six foot-nine inch and five-foot four-inch piece done for the London Lodge in Oakland's Jack London Square by Patterson and Hall advertising agency, the first firm to engage in the so-called art contracting of murals, mosaics, collages, and frescos for residential and commercial structures and exteriors. Haines Hall, who executed the design, is to the left. He was assisted by Carol Coffin.

MURALS, MOSIACS

Art For The Garden Wall

Have you heard about the newest things for garden and patio walls, barbecues, foyers and fireplaces?

Well, it's the use of mosaics and murals.

With the emphasis on outdoor living, Haines Hall of 405 Goodhill road, Kentfield, partner in the largest advertising art company in the West, has turned his considerable talents to the creation of "living" walls and decorations for outdoor living.

Hall's modern home in Kent Woodlands, designed by Hilmer and Callister, is filled with art, as befits an artist.

His office on Bush street in San Francisco, where the firm of Patterson and Hall handles such national accounts as Standard Oil, Lucky Lager, Southern Pacific and General Motors is becoming increasingly jammed with wildly colored glass mosaic bits, sketches of garden wall murals, collages and plans for more and more architectural art.

The firm has just finished a seven by 5½-foot mosaic depicting the Oakland waterfront during the 1890s for the patio of an establishment on the now famed Jack London Square.

Hall, a quiet, contented artist with a distinguished record of awards, says this of architecture, building and art:

"They are a real pleasure to do — a challenge I think that architects, if they can be assured prompt delivery, will work them into the landscaping and house plans more and more in the future."

Still Not Too Late For Glads

Gladiolus are, beyond a doubt, the most useful of all garden bulbs. You could have planted them in December. You can still plant them in June. And all for a glorious round of bloom in 1960.

Add that up and you'll find it totals some six months of bloom from glads—provided, of course, that you make successive plantings of the bulbs. And that in turn adds up to a lot of color any way you look at it.

So if you haven't planted already, it's time to get going with glads. Plant some now and continue setting them out at two or three week intervals right through spring and even into early summer and don't be shy with them. Glads put on their best show when planted about four inches apart.

TO ACCENT the beauty of a garden or planted area, construct a walk of concrete slabs. Either precast or cast-in-place, the concrete slabs can be arranged in sweeping curved patterns to give a new deep dimension to boxy or cramped yards.

A Concrete Slab Walk Provides Lasting Beauty

A concrete walk, curved to fit the planted areas in your yard, can enhance the beauty of a garden and protect a stroller from muddy feet.

The concrete walk, composed of either precast or cast-in place concrete slabs, has many purposes. It can serve as a border to accent and frame a carefully planted garden or it can be used as a boundary at the edge of a thick lawn.

Basically, the garden walk provides a bridge or transition from grassy areas to a planting of bright flowers and shrubs.

A sweeping, free-form patterned walk is the answer for making a boxy, cramped yard look more interesting. Concrete slabs, too, may be arranged in sloping or stepped positions to lead from one grade level to another.

Rectangular concrete slabs either white or colored can be purchased precast from a concrete products manufacturer, depending upon the desired decorative effect.

If a uniform curve or any other pattern is desired in the walk, it would be best to have the concrete slabs cast in place with wooden forms outlining the pattern.

Temporary divider strips may be placed between the slab forms prior to pouring the concrete. Once the concrete sets, the divider strips can be removed to allow for gravel or natural grass divisions.

When installing a concrete garden walk, whether it be precast or cast-in-place, the slabs should be placed on a bed of sand to provide proper drainage for water which readily collects in planted areas.

JUST POINT your finger at any Marinite and you are more than likely to find that you have pointed to a "green thumb" enthusiast. For Marin's fine climate and soil are ideal for gardening. And Marin residents take full advantage of those conditions. One such gardening enthusiast is Mrs. Leonard Delmas of 46 Berens drive, Kentfield. Housewife, mother of three daughters, she still has time for flowers. Here she admires some Parrot Tulips, Red Tulips and Yellow Tulips. Red Coralbelles are in the background. Color photo is by Dick Steinheimer, Independent-Journal photographer.

Indoor Gardening In The Summer

Indoor gardening should not be a winter pastime only.

Many of the so-called indoor plants can grace the shaded deck or lanai with you in midsummer. Check in at the neighborhood nursery and see its selection of such material as ferns, philodendrons and other foliage plants. When you've enjoyed them outside during summer, move them in for fun indoors after cool weather comes again.

Your Hoe Can Also Serve As A Rake

Make a hoe do the work of a rake, too by welding a steel blade to one end of the rake. Any flat piece of steel or iron, slightly narrower than the length of the hoe teeth, will do when sharpened at one end. Great for weeding!

Here's An Easy To Build Bin To Hold Compost Heap

Taking proper care of a compost heap can be a frustrating chore.

Layering material properly is difficult with loose compost, since the edges of the pile tend to fray, and the area devoted to compost always seems to be growing, because of the pile's tendency to spread.

And then, when you need some well-rotted compost you have to burrow into the heap. What a mess!

One four by eight-foot panel of one-quarter-inch exterior-type fir plywood and four pieces of two by two-inch lumber can solve the problem. Following simple directions, you can make the compost bin shown here.

The rails permit even layering of material and the opening at the bottom allows easy access to the ripe, useful stuff under the pile. You can water your compost as much as you like without injury to the plywood, which is made with waterproof glue.

You can paint the bin a brighter color to contrast with its surroundings, or in green or brown to blend with its background.

A free plan showing exactly how to build the compost bin is available from the Douglas Fir Plywood Assn., Tacoma 2, Wash.

Color Splash Of Cascades Catches Eye

Can you name a more appealing sight in any garden than a blooming plant that cascades its color over the edge of a wall or spills it over the rim of a suspended container?

Name it and you can have it. To us there is no sight more lovely.

For this alone it would be worth seeking a house with one or more retainer walls to landscape. And if you garden on the level, it's well worth installing some raised planters just to see the contents tumbling down. Hanging baskets are to be planted whatever the contour of your land.

Like any gardener with a bug for some particular phase of gardening, we have special favorites among trailing plants.

The little - used Ground Morning Glory is near the top of our list of trailing perennials. It is well behaved despite its name and sends its gray-green foliage tumbling over a wall to show the inch-wide blue flowers all summer into fall. Use it in full sun and water when you get around to it.

In pots, hanging baskets or atop a wall, the Italian Bellflower spews its myriad of star-shaped little blooms of white or blue. Give it more water than Ground Morning Glory and perhaps a little more shade for most appeal.

The Australian Bluebell has much to recommend it. Gardeners who have not grown it are sure to wonder what took them so long to start. Masses of small blue bells grace this trailer through summer. Excellent for retaining walls, fine for planters and pots, it takes some shade as it is grown away for the coast.

A few dozen annual trailing lobelia will go far to make life worth living. Use them either in baskets, planters or raised beds.

SOHNER CALENDAR

MAY

"Sticky drip" is a sign of Aphis and other sucking insects in Birch and Oak trees and on garden shrubbery. Immediate spraying can save your trees and shrubs from mutilation by these insects.

Poison Oak spray is most resultful if applied when shrub is in "full leaf." Sohner Tree Service—active members of the National Arborist Association for twenty years—is completely equipped for all types of spray work.

JUNE

Elm trees should be sprayed for protection against both the adult and larvae of the Elm Leaf Beetle. As dry weather is favorable to beetle development, protection is particularly important this year.

Aphis spray can still be effective. If "Sticky drip" shows around your trees, arrange at once for spray service.

JULY

Oak Pit Scale may have hatched by July. Scale insects are best controlled when in the young crawler stage. As development period varies, a constant check must be maintained to determine correct time to spray.

This is the most serious and destructive Oak pest! Sohner experts will inspect and spray if necessary.

AUGUST

At this time, spraying Oaks for Lecanium Scale is advised. Twigs infested with this pest are covered with soft brown, down-covered scales, which excrete a sticky 'honey dew' substance; and trees and shrubs become covered with a dirty, sooty fungus.

Professional spray service will assure you of complete treatment, at reasonable cost.

THE VIEW FROM THE front door of the Fred Palmer residence in Belvedere takes the eye into a lovely garden setting. For more Belvedere garden scenes, see pages M10 and M11.

Belvedere's Beautiful Gardens

This Year's House Tour To Include Some Of That Community's Finest

Marin County is justly famed for its fine gardens.

And no one locale within the county is more renown for such beauty than Belvedere.

It is no wonder, then,e that the annual house and garden tour sponsored by the St. Stephen's Church Guild of Belvedere is a big event annually.

It affords participants an opportunity to visit not only fine homes but also some wonderful gardens.

THE TENTH annual tour, "Sophisticated Suburbia," has been scheduled for Thursday, May 12. This year six view homes — all with fine gardens — will be visited, and the tour will be followed by a tea at the newly remodeled San Francisco Yacht Club. Hours for the tour are 1 to 5 p.m. Tea will be served from 3 to 5.

A fleet of station wagons will provide shuttle service around the island.

Each of the six gardens featured is different from the others.

The Robert A. Davies home on the lagoon, for instance, stresses minimum garden upkeep and a boat deck integrated with the garden. It was created by Robert Haag.

The second garden on the tour is that of the Richard O. Pollard home, built on three levels on the lagoon and also featuring mostly dock and minimum garden plantings.

The third garden on the tour is that of Mrs. James Lewis, where Herman E. Hein has provided a secluded and intimate garden featuring native shrubs and trees.

THE FOURTH garden to be visited is that of Mr. and Mrs. Chester C. Vargas Jr., which was designed by the owners. It is a tropical paradise surrounding a pool and featuring lush hibiscus and bougainvillea.

The fifth garden on the tour, designed by W. T. Tobler of West Marin Nurseries for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Horowitz, is entirely different because of its natural hillside planting and integrated waterfalls.

The sixth garden on the tour reflects a lot of work on the part of the owners, Mr. and Mrs. MacBoyle Lewis. It is surrounded by olive trees and other plants native to California. The tiered beds provide color at the different seasons of the year and as the house itself is on a plateau it provides a spacious expanse of colorful planting.

Pictured also on the following pages is the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Vayron H. Montgorery, where the landscaping was done by William Miles of Egger's Nursery. Mrs. Montgomery is general chairman of the Belvedere house tour. Also shown is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Palmer, whose garden was designed by Herman E. Hein. Mrs. Palmer is a past president of the St. Stephen's Guild.

EACH YEAR this benefit affair brings over 1,000 women to view the beauty of spectacular Belvedere, which has shown a great transition from the 1880s to the contemporary homes of today. Each home will be decorated with flowers from many beautiful Belvedere gardens.

Tickets for this benefit affair may be obtained from Mrs. T. L. Wark, 18 Teal road, Belvedere, GEneva 5-0707, or Mrs. George Stephens at her Keil Cove home, Tiburon, GEneva 5-4912.

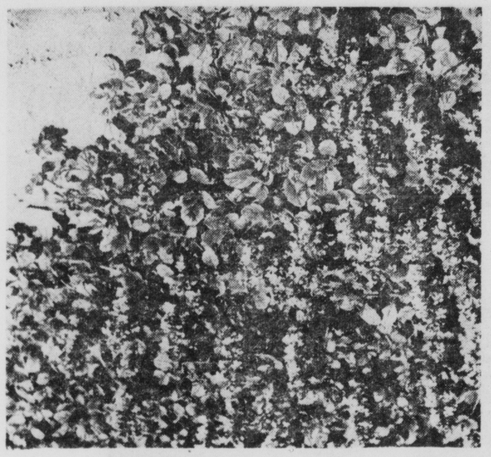
Belvedere Garden Gates Swing Open

THIS STUNNING EXAMPLE of flowers along a walkway can be seen in the garden at the Chester Vargas home in Belvedere. It will be one of the beautiful peninsula gardens to be visited May 12 by participants in the 10th annual St. Stephen's Guild of Belvedere house tour.

IN CHARGE of planning for the "Sophisticated Suburbia" house tour to be conducted by the St. Stephen's Guild of Belvedere on May 12 are Mrs. Edwin Weed, guild president, and Mrs. Vayron H. Montgomery, general chairman. They're shown at the entrance of the Montgomery home before settling down to a busy day of preparation for the big event.



A GOOD GROUND COVERING for Marin is blue Ajuga, used here most effectively by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Palmer to cover a steep bank at their Belvedere home. Participants in this year's Belvedere tour are certain to pick up valuable ideas for their own homes and yards.

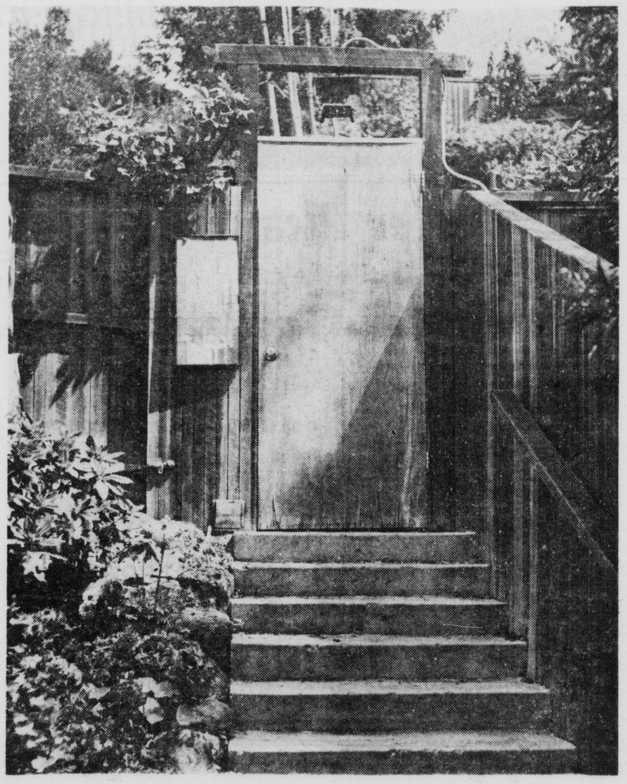
RELAXING IN HER lovely natural garden is Mrs Joel Horowitz of Belvedere. You, too, can enjoy it if you participate in the "Sophisticated Suburbia" house tour to be conducted by St. Stephen's Guild May 12. Landscaping here was by W. T. Tobler of the West End Nursery.

A BANK OF ICE PLANT is part of the garden of Mr. and Mrs. MacBoyle Lewis, another beauty spot to be visited on the May 12 house tour. Sausalito and the bay can be seen in the distance, thus combining eye-catching scenery with lovely surroundings.

THESE FLOWERS are in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Palmer of Belvedere. Mrs. Palmer is past president of St. Stephen's Guild, sponsors of the house and garden tour. It will mark the tenth annual staging of the popular event.

DECKS ARE AN IMPORTANT part of the outdoor landscape for Belvedere homes. And from the deck of Mr and Mrs. MacBoyle Lewis' home high on top of the island you get this impressive view of Belvedere Cove. Note potted geranium. The Lewis garden will be shown May 12.

SHOWN SKETCHING from the deck of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Horowitz, which will be included in the May 12 house tour, is mural artist Mrs. Richard F. Wolbert. Belvedere's beauty is certain to bring out the best in any artist. But you don't have to be artistic to enjoy a tour of the fine homes and gardens.



THE CHARMING EXIT from the garden of the Chester Vargas is certain to catch a lot of eyes of participants in the "Sophisticated Suburbia" house and garden tour. All photos on these pages are by Dick Steinheimer, Independent-Journal staff photographer.

Landscapers Turn Barren Hilltop Into A Showplace

An outstanding example of a created garden is at the Carlos R. Freitas home on the highest point in the hills within San Rafael. Located at 87 Oakmont avenue, with the Bay Area stretched out in panorama beneath it, the beauty of the home and its garden make this an exceptional showplace.

At the time of its purchase by the Freitases, the location was a rocky hilltop. A few oaks were the only features. The soil was barren, dry hardpan. Landscape Architects Royston, Hanamoto and Mayes were called in to design the garden. When their plans were accepted, the work of construction was assigned to the landscape contracting firm of Cagwin and Dorward of San Anselmo. The artistry of gardening followed.

First, the usable native rocks were segregated and the rest hauled away. Then, with tons of soil trucked in from the Freitas ranch, Cagwin and Dorward began the construction of an entire hillside. This rebuilding gave the hilltop a greater surface area and good, rich soil. Native plantings were introduced on the new hillside to blend with growth on the lower slopes. All of this was done before the garden was started. The elevation makes the area frost free and this and other elements were considered. The prevailing wind made a wind screen necessary and the native oaks furnished part of this screen. Ground cover that would blend with the oaks was used and the native stone was utilized to add to the naturalness of the setting.

Structures Can Enhance Looks Of Your Garden

As every gardener knows, there is more to gardening than the growing of plants. For without the proper setting, even the most exotic plant material can be wasted.

It behooves the gardener, therefore to get himself a design for gardening—an overall plan or goal which he can work toward over the years and find satisfaction in achieving a little at a time.

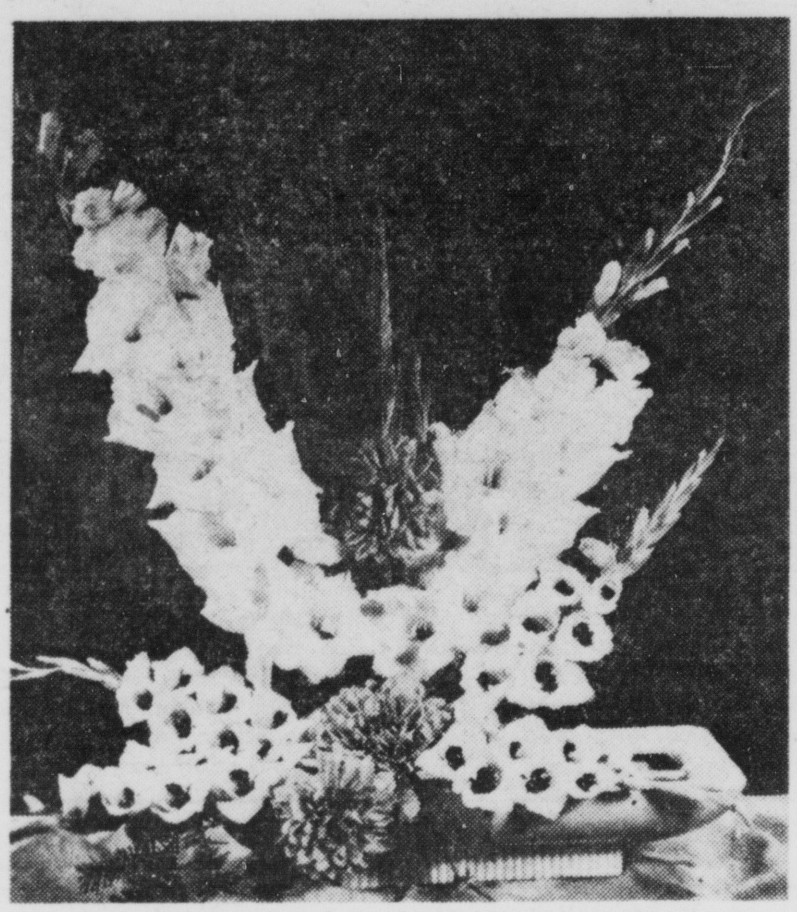
One of the surest ways to enhance a garden is to make use of structural forms. Structure in the garden is often just the thing to make up for nature's shortcomings—or the shortcomings of those who planned your garden to begin with.

Such structure can be as simple or as elaborate as you wish. The California Assn. of Nurserymen claims that merely adding a redwood border around flowerbeds will enhance the effect of flowers. On the elaborate side, possible projects to include in your design are an enlarged patio, a spacious deck or a garden pool.

Sun decks have proved most effective in adding dimension to hillside gardens. A deck increases the usable space of sloping lots, decreases the problem of landscape on an irregular contour. At the same time, decks should not be considered the exclusive property of hillside home owners. We've seen them used to good effect on level homesites —especially in older homes that have their first floor several feet off the ground. A deck with a few tubbed plants will tie house and garden together.

In more modern homes, the transition from house to garden is often abrupt despite the fact that both are on the same level. Here, a roomy, landscaped patio can end this abruptness and lend new pleasure to living.

The possibilities are countless as any landscape expert can tell you. The important thing is that you choose a plan for gardening — then work and plant toward it.



THE GLADIOLUS is hard to match for grace and color in flower arrangements. And testing programs have made the glad practically foolproof for the home gardener. Here are the two 1960 All-America glad selections, the Landmark at top in the arrangement, and the Little Pansy at the bottom. Landmark is the first gladiolus of Canadian origin to win such recognition. It is huge, tall, cream-colored. Little Pansy is petitie and charming — a rich, velvety deep blue.

Boundary Line Is Important

The boundary line is an all-important factor in today's garden.

Not — as in bygone days — because it defines the property on which you live. Rather, it provides privacy, and in this day of high density housing, privacy can be a precious commodity.

It is a matter of interest to ever gardener, then, that he choose the plant material which can best provide the privacy he needs. If space is strictly limited, so is his choice. If his garden is of reasonable size, the nurserymen offer him a wide choice of boundary shrubs and trees.

Except in unusual cases, the greatest need for privacy comes in the back yard where the gardener will spend the greater part of his spare time. Front yard boundaries are really better for modest height — perhaps no more than Boxwood, Dwarf Juniper or Dwarf Myrtle which will define the limits of property and discourage cross traffic from dogs and people alike. A city street is often better for a sweeping view, unbroken by countless high hedges.

In back, however, the gardener is less concerned with overall effect of a neighborhood than he is with his own retreat. Here he will want to protect the outdoor living area, hide an unattractive clutter in the neighbor's yard or provide himself with a sanctuary from encroachment.

Nurserymen are well equipped to show you plant material to fit every boundary need —whatever the size of your garden. They can suggest columnar and clipable shrubs for the small garden such as Privet and Eugenia or some of the Pittosporums. Where space is less cramped, you can choose from the Pittosporums again, from Cotoneasters or any number of fine shrubs and small trees, formal or otherwise.

Strawberry Tree Really A Shrub But A Good One

You can't help noticing the Strawberry Tree when you see it in fall and winter.

Its deep green, bronze-stemmed foliage alone would warrant a spot in your garden, but really outstanding are the small white, urn-shaped flowers and the red or yellow fruits that come from them. It is noteworthy, too, that both blooms and fruit can be found on the tree in various stages of development at the same time.

Strawberry Tree, despite its name, is merely a shrub and a good one. With patience and careful thinning out below, it can be trained to a small tree of from 12 to 20 feet in height. A row of them unpruned along the property line makes a colorful and unusual screen which demands no attention but attracts plenty.

Strawberry Tree derives its name from the showy round fruits which hang in clusters through fall and into January. Fruit is either yellow or red.

The ease with which Strawberry Tree fits into garden situations makes it a shrub of first importance in California.

If your garden has space to spare, or if you live on a hillside that lends itself to a natural look, try the Strawberry Tree's first cousin—the striking, rust trunked Madrone of our foothills.

Some Plants Go Together In Garden

Discovery of two or more plants that go well together is always a happy event for the gardener.

For while many plants mix, there are some that seem made for each others company. And these can make the big difference between any garden and a very special garden.

One combination that we've always liked for the rear of a sunny border is the tall spikes of blue Delphinium with those of the fiery Red Hot Pokers. They are all the more striking when planted against the defining background of a fence or wall.

Daffodils of any color are the better for a cover planting of blue violas and white Carpet-Of-Snow Alyssum. The giant yellow trumpets of King Alfred are especially enhanced when blooming on stems that push up through this combination. Also with bulbs, try pansies as a base planting for tulips.

Along a walk or in the front of a foundation border, a combination of gray-white Dusty Miller and coppery-red Fiberous Begonias always appeals to us. For variation, try Dusty Miller on one side of a walk, the Begonias on the other.

We love the sight of Dogwood in bloom over a carpet of Bleeding Heart as we so often see it in foothill canyons of the Mother Lode, but we've had little luck duplicating it in our garden.

AN EXAMPLE of what can be done with a steep bank is the home of Colonel and Mrs. C. B. Overacker of Reed Ranch Road in the exclusive Reedlands area. The bank is planted with blue blooming ceanosis; rosemary trails on the stone walls blue in bloom also, and blue morning glory is intermingled with it. When in bloom this bank is a beautiful mass of color and completely obscures the original raw wall. Landscape architect was Mrs. Overacker's cousin, Mrs. Mildred Macpherson of Encinita. The Overacker home was built by the William H. McDevitt Construction Co. (Photo by Steve Allen)

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENER'S

The Marin Gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ The long-stemmed, long lasting, many hued Transvaal Daisies are to be found in bloom at nurseries these days. Plant them with the crowns exposed to prevent rot. Good drainage is essential.

✔ Divide tall bearded iris after they go out of bloom.

✔ Potted geraniums are happier for more, rather than less, water. Don't let the pots dry out. Contrary to popular opinion, geraniums don't really like drought, but need good drainage.

✔ Set out chrysanthemums this month and start them on their way to the fall blooming period. Watering, feeding, pinching back to prevent spindly growth are the three requisites to chrysanthemum culture.

Geraniums For Splash Of Color

Showiest of the many fine show-offs in California gardens are the Geraniums.

Can you think of any other family that makes a bigger splash in the sea of color that Californians grow? Or, over a longer period and with less trouble to the gardener?

The common Zonal Geraniums, so named for the varied zones of light and dark in their leaf patterns, are journeymen color bearers and have been to generations of Californians. The testimony to their usefulness has come in recent years with the development of new and better varieties—varieties in which the color has tended to be softened . . . better for blending in the landscape.

These zonals are easiest of all the geraniums to grow. Small plants set out this spring from nursery pots will give good growth and bloom this summer. And after cutting back each winter, they will continue blooming for years.

Zonals are favorite pot plants, too. Buy them in pots from your nurserymen and keep them in pots for color on decks. As the plants grow, they should be moved up to larger pots for continued growth and added bloom.

The Ivy Geraniums are the most colorful of all trailing plants. Used as ground covers, they fill vast areas with their cheerfulness. On a wall, they cascade masses of bloom as though a reservoir of color had spilled over the top.

Most delicate — and most varied in color—are the Martha Washington Geraniums. Botanically, all the geraniums mentioned here are in the Pelargonium family.

AN ATTRACTIVE TERRACE and walk leading up to a sheltered entrance enhances the streamlined beauty of this modern house. The walk is made of concrete slabs set between durable wooden dividers. Alternating sections of colored gravel lead away from the walk into a terrace. Adjoining fireplace wall and planter are of slump block, a new type of concrete masonry. Designs on concrete walk slabs such as the wavy lines here can also serve to beautify a garden sidewalk.

New Wrinkle In Walks: Designs On Cement Slabs

All it takes to construct an eye-catching walk or terrace are concrete and imagination.

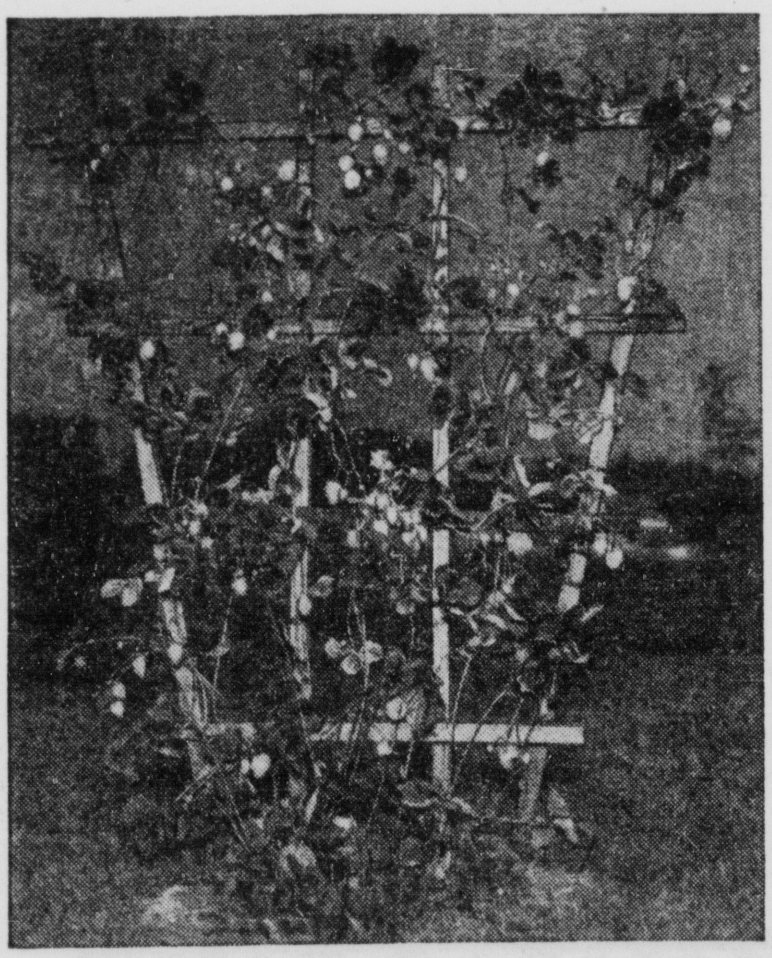
The concrete slabs can be purchased precast, or cast in place in your yard.

By using slabs of various colors in striking combinations or by arranging them into designs or patterns, you can create a distinctive and functional walk or terrace that will emphasize the beauty of your house, yard or garden.

A new wrinkle is a random recessed design on the face of the slab. To produce the unusual wavy lines, concrete is poured over wrinkled newspaper or waxed paper lining the bottom of the forms. After the concrete sets, the forms are removed, the paper is peeled away from the bottom surface and the slabs are reversed, revealing rough recessed patterns.

A checkered design is achieved by alternating slabs of different colors between two-by-four-inch dividers of durable wood, such as redwood. The checkerboard motif can extend from a walk into a terrace of alternating sections of concrete or colored gravel and grass.

The planter and fireplace walls adjoining the walk and terrace are of slump block, a rugged and decorative type of concrete masonry.



SONJANA, the strawberry that climbs, is one of the new "imports" to U.S. gardens. Successful in Europe, it is now being introduced to this country by William Penn Nursery Co. of West Grove, Pa. The berries are described as middle size, firm and meaty — and tasty — and the plant can be trained upwards so that the gardener is able to pick berries that have never touched the ground.

Watering Tip For Gardeners

In watering, do not leave basins around your plants to hold water.

This often causes the soil level to be raised or lowered, and harms the plant. It can also cause the plant to drown if drainage is poor.

After proper gardening, adequate watering is the secret of a successful garden.

Rocky Yard Answer

Development of wood patio decks has been a life saver to the home owner with the rocky yard which wouldn't grow lawn. Decks of rugged, all-weather woods like Douglas fir can be built to cover any desired area in any shape.

Plants Important To Rock Gardening, Natural Or Artificial

Rock gardening in its classic sense is akin to sculpturing. It is an artificial relief, created from ground up with varying degrees of artistic success by enthusiastic gardeners.

In California, rock gardening more often denotes making the best use of naturally rugged terrain. The Californian, especially in coastal and foothill gardens, is often confronted with a rocky hillside or a newly cut embankment to landscape. And this he proceeds to do with a proper choice of plant material.

Nurserymen suggest that gardeners who lack the natural terrain to do their rock gardening on, can have fun and challenge by building—as in the classic sense—an artificial mound of earth and stone.

In either case, plant material can be much the same, what you plant depending mainly on how easily the area can be watered. Rock gardens of limited water supply are best handled with natives and other drought resistant plants. Keep them low to tie in with the terrain.

In any situation, we find the dwarf conifers ideal rock garden subjects. They stand attention or lack of it and always blend beautifully with rocks. Nurserymen offer a selection of these—dwarf Junipers and the shrubby Mugho Pine being among the most useful.

Look, too, for such durable and compact growers as Lavender or Rosemary. Annuals can play an important role, also. Alyssum is especially good for naturalizing effects around rocks. Lobelia in season and Dwarf Marigold add color and cover in their turn.

We'd not overlook succulents by any means. Many hobbyists build their rock gardens around succulents. Nor can the importance of bulbs be ignored, though you'll have to wait until fall to plant most of them.

CHERRY TIME is a new cactus-flowered zinnia. It has shades of cherry, rose-red, spirea red and magenta rose, all in heaviest saturation, and is a good cut flower carried on plants that stand two and a half to three feet. Blooms often measures five inches across. (Bodger photo)

Rock Roses Are Rough And Ready

You see the rock roses in the lonliest places—along the dusty roadfront of a country home, or on a barren, hot hillside that doesn't know what water is for over half the year. Yet these rough and ready shrubs seem to thrive where the going is tough.

Rock roses have truly earned their place in this land of little rain. Your garden can use them if it has areas of neglect, unfriendly soil or a lazy owner. They ask only sun and perfect drainage. And while they will tolerate some shade, they won't stand for soggy conditions at their feet.

This leaves any number of possible uses for rock roses. Until you've seen them, you can't know just how well they convert a disheveled slope into a sea of pink or white blooms. Plant them along the sun-baked west or south wall of your house and enjoy their perennial fresh look in the face of heat. Try them at the seaside or in the foothills. They thrive under all conditions.

You won't mistake Rock Roses for a regal Rhododendron, for theirs is a proletarian beauty that is enhanced by contrast to the surroundings.

ONE OF THE MOST EXCITING things about the rose is the many different types that are available. And the number increases annually with the development of new and beautiful varieties. Three of the newer roses are shown above. At top, Pink Glory, a large pink hybrid tea rose especially developed for the West Coast. In the center is Border Gem, a compact floribunda which needs no pruning to keep it the right height for edging. And in the lower photo, the Malibu, a new large-flowered floribunda whose color starts as a coral orange red and finishes several shades lighter but still attractive.

WHILE AWAITING THE next generation of Stanley children this little wagon is serving temporarily as a holder of plants in the Edward J. Stanley Jr. garden at Ross. When the time comes for it to return to service, the sideboards will be put back into place.

A Garden Piece That Has Another Use — And A History

By DON KEOWN

In the garden behind the Edward J. Stanley Jr. home at Ross there is a plant-holder which must qualify as one of the most unusual such pieces in Marin County.

It's a toy wagon. But, more than that, it's a wagon with a history dating back to 1896.

It was then, Stanley recalls, that his grandfather, Edward Hallihan, a blacksmith, forged the axles in the Union Iron Works in San Francisco. And his father, Edward J. Stanley, a professor of mechanical engineering at Stanford University, built the body of a solid oak trimmed with brass. It was present for little Edward Jr.

Still a prized possession of Edward J. Stanley Jr. is a photograph taken in 1896 showing him and his baby brother, Herbert, Seated on the new wagon.

RECENTLY there was a family reunion gathering of the Stanleys in Ross. Among those attending was Herbert M. Stanley, now a geologist residing in Dallas, Tex.

In a playful mood, the two brothers posed seated on the same wagon upon which they had been pictured 64 years ago.

"Of course, we had put on quite a bit of weight along with the years," Edward Stanley Jr. smiles. "But that wagon is as strong today as it was in 1896."

The wagon has now served three generations of Stanleys as a plaything. And it was last used by Edward Jr.'s grandchildren. Now the last of those grandchildren is 14 "and at the age where he is more interested in hot rods than in toy wagons," the grandfather says. So the wagon is seeing temporary service as a plantholder in the Stanley garden, awaiting the next generation of children.

Stanley says the wagon is certain to serve not just one but several more future generations.

The wagon brings back many memories to Stanley, who retired after 38 years as a Bank of America executive and is now with the American Building Maintenance.

He can recall back in 1906 when this very wagon was used by his family to transport to the safety of the Potrero Hills what few possessions they could salvage from the Stanley home after the great earthquake and fire had struck.

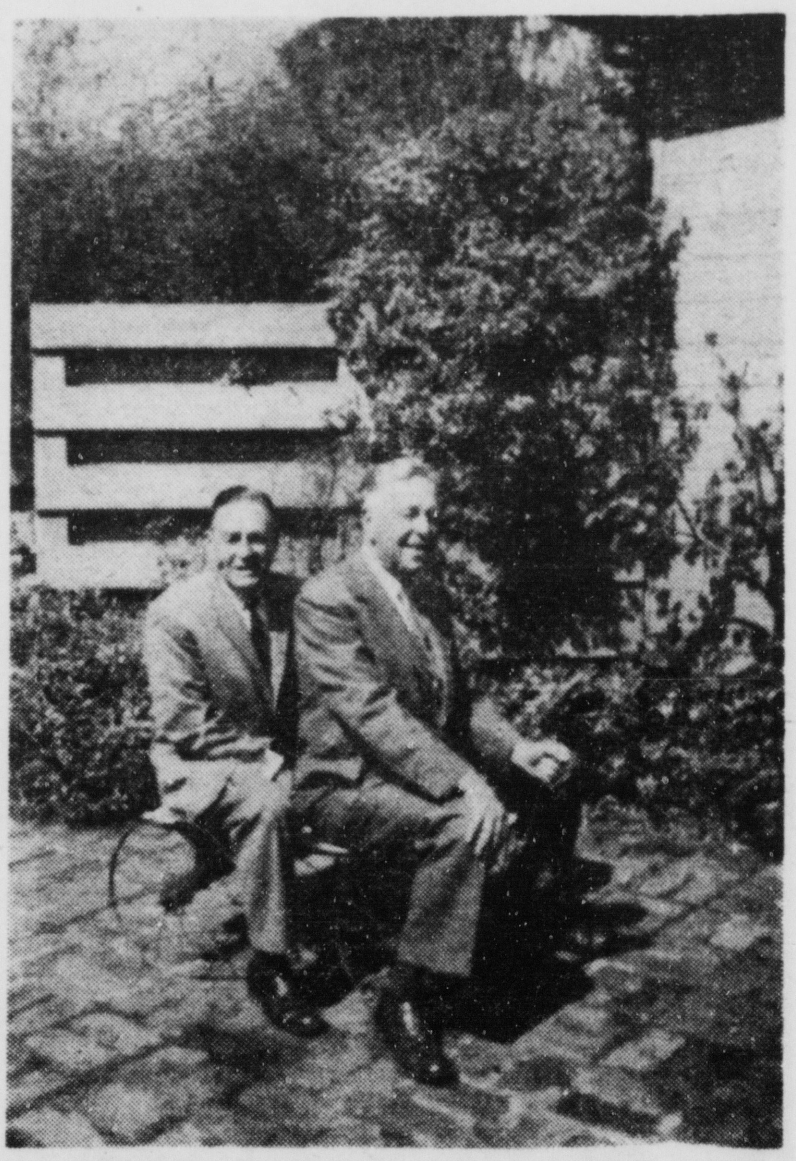
"We loaded it up with everything we could possibly get on it, and then pulled it up into the hills," he says. "Everything else was left behind to the flames."

HE CAN ALSO recall many parades, shows and celebrations in which the little wagon had a role.

No wonder the wagon came in for considerable attention when the Stanley clan gathered for that recent reunion.

It must seem almost like a member of the family.

THE LITTLE WOODEN WAGON which his grandfather and father had built for him was brand new back in 1896 when Edward J. Stanley Jr. and his baby brother, Herbert, posed proudly, seated upon it.



SIXTY-FOUR YEARS LATER at a family reunion in Ross, Edward J. Jr. and Herbert M. Stanley again posed on that wagon. In the interim it had served well three generations of children as a toy.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

By BERT BROWN, Marin Cleaners of San Rafael and Bel Air
Member Textile Maintenance Committee University of California

"Why Did My Bright, White Dress Turn Brown?"

You have been made the victim of the new fluorescent "brightener" that is being used by manufacturers so much these days. Not only are fluorescent brightening agents used to make white, whiter, but they are used to make all colors more vivid. Almost any textile article today may contain a brightener. The unfortunate effect of these fluorescent dyes is that they do not always hold up under ordinary use. When these brighteners are used in summer wear or draperies which are exposed to the sun, the fluorescent dyes may bring about a discoloration. Bright whites may turn yellow or brown on relatively short exposure to sunlight.

Often the drycleaner is blamed for this color change in the garments. Actually, the fault lies with the textile manufacturer who, in an endeavor to please his customers with whiter whites or brighter bright colors, used fluorescent dyes that were not color-fast to light.

In washing or cleaning fabrics at home, when they have been dyed with the artificial brighteners, beware of common bleaching agents. They will yellow or brown the fabrics the same as the sunlight will do. When fabrics are yellowed or browned in this manner, the damage is permanent and the stain cannot be removed.

THE PRESERVATION of oak trees has paid a large dividend of beauty in Greenbrae, as shown in the Philip Russell Quick home at 100 Los Serros. The Schultz Co., Greenbrae developers, have made every effort to save and maintain these natural features. This area, with the garden encircling the central oak, suggests years of careful tending in a comparatively new garden. Flowering shrubs selected for year 'round color make this a constant beauty spot.

HERE IS HOW

Extra Patio Tables Are Easy To Make

What patio ever has enough serving tables?

This question is usually asked as a glass which has been balanced on a guest's knee goes crashing to the patio flagstones.

If this is a familiar situation at your barbecue parties, you will welcome a patio table idea developed by designer Thomas Jensen. It is economical, sturdy, and can be left out in all kinds of weather. And, it's probably the world's simplest do-it-yourself project.

The base of the table is one or two 8 by 16-inch or 12 by 12-inch clay flue lining tiles. You can obtain these inexpensive tiles from almost any ready-mix cement firm or concrete block supplier. The tiles can be painted any color. Then, cover them with square or rectangular pieces of exterior-type (waterproof) fir plywood.

If you want a small table, cover one 12 by 12-inch tile with an 18 by 18-inch square of fir plywood. If you want a larger unit, put down two 8 by 16-inch tiles and cover them with a 24 by 48-piece of plywood. No fastening is required — just set the plywood on the tile. Nail a strip of wood molding around the edges of the plywood for decorative purposes.

These tables are easily moved, but can be left outside indefinitely. For an extra smooth surface, specify medium density overlaid fir plywood. This type has a resin fiber surface which makes an excellent paint base. Regardless of the plywood grade you select, make sure you obtain exterior-type. This can be identified by the grade-trademark EXT-DFPA.

When the outdoor season is over, move the tables into the den or family room. They will withstand a lot of punishment from the children, but are hard to tip over.

A PAIR of flue-lining tiles and a sheet of exterior-type plywood is all you need for this simple, attractive patio table. Just apply a coat of paint to the tiles and the lumber rim and you have a handsome piece of outdoor furniture for your garden, patio or other use.

IN NEXT WEEK'S MAGAZINE —

A HAPPY MARIN FAMILY huddles around a map planning a vacation trip and looking forward to a vacation to be spent together. This is the typical Marin family, closely-knit and sharing their pleasures and projects. But there is another side not depicted in this picture. This is the family which is not happy. Their problems can be of many different kinds. And sometimes they seem insurmountable. But there is a Marin agency — the Family Service Agency of Marin County — which is willing to tackle these seemingly insolvable problems. And often it does solve them, and an unhappy family becomes a happy one. You will read about the Family Service Agency in next week's Marin Magazine. The following day — May 1 — the annual observance of Mental Health Week will begin. The Family Service Agency plays a major role in the fight for better mental health in this county.

MARIN ET CETERA

Even A Bird-Brain Will Finally Get Idea When He's Not Wanted

IF THERE WAS EVER a dope, it is this character who's been hanging around our place the last four years.

This spring he's more wacky than ever — and decidedly unhappy. His mentis is completely non compos, also disorganized.

Even for a bird-brain sparrow.

Our dining room window is the only one in Marin County with an outlook like unto that from a grass shack in Kealakakua, Hawaii, overlooking what appears to be a threadbare hula skirt hanging from the clothesline.

Bird-brain has nesting problems.

From sun-up until mid-day he builts frantically.

AT NOON HE pulls down a sloppy mess of wisp and straw from our eaves and starts all over again.

His afternoon schedule is a repitition of the same.

This has been going on for three weeks.

Ever since we bought this place we've encouraged the presence of bird life. By shooing away the neighbors' cats and throwing stones at predatory hawks we've managed to keep the yard a sort of sanctuary for sparrows, robins, bluejays and migrants on tour.

THEY ARE VERY friendly and enjoy our company, chirp noisily for food and follow us around the yard. They won't eat out of our hands but come almost that close when we call them.

Their daily presence in our patio lends it a decorative touch.

This we could do without but we haven't discovered yet how to prevent it and not hurt their feelings.

Old "bird-brain" seems to be the leader and the tamest of the lot. Many of them are undoubtedly his offspring from previous years and accept his word as law. He claims the biggest cracker crumbs as tribute and scolds my wife if she fails to observe protocol.

His markings are a little different from the rest—rust-brown coat, gray chest and vest, black crown, face, beak and cravat.

His current choice of mates is less easy to identify in mixed company—mottled brown and gray without distinctive pattern.

I don't think she's too much interested in this nesting project. She's either hard to please or plain hard to get.

EVERY TIME she flies under the eaves to look over his work he flutters his wings and describes the attractions of setting up housekeeping. He's got a good line but it hasn't seemed to be effective.

She answers with a few nasty cracks, then flits away for a date with a worm.

That's when the poor dope tears everything down and starts all over agan. At the end of the day he looks like he'd been in a badminton game.

Women!

All I've got to say is that she better not carry it too far. I've noticed another slick little chick in dove gray who's been casing the inside of our carport and making soft noises to bird-brain about the superior accommodations and company. Tch-tch!

And I think the old boy is weakening.

CAN'T SAY that I blame him, and far be it from me to interfere in the love life of a sparrow, but—

I sure hate to think of washing the Plymouth every day through the mating season.

MILL VALLEYAN NOW

Kentuckian Writes Of Land He Loves

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Kentuckian Wendell Berry lives in Cascade Canyon, Mill Valley, and writes about his home place, County Henry.

He is 25, lanky, and when he says, "I get up and start work when I get my courage up, and I quit when I wear out," you have had a good taste of his easy drawl and outlook on life.

Berry is the author of "Nathan Coulter," his first book, a novel published Thursday. It is a book "about a place like the place I grew up in," Berry says. It's about the land.

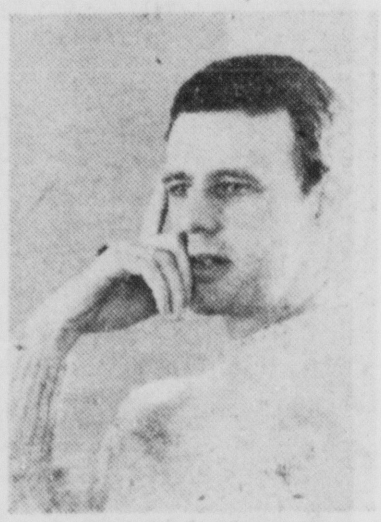
Berry is from a tobacco farm at New Castle Ken., and his family on both sides are farmers. Looking out at the eucalyptus trees at the Dick O'Hanlon place at 628 Throckmorton avenue where he and his wife rent a small house, Berry says, "A eucalyptus tree is far different from a white oak or a hickory of Kentucky."

The six-foot-four-inch writer said he has worked in all phases of tobacco raising from breaking ground to curing and pressing. It is a complicated art, he said, and it is still practically all hand work except for the plowing.

He speaks about his home country this way. "I associate people with it. I associate everything I know with it. I like to be on it. I like to be outside. The way to tell you my feelings about my love of the land is to write a book about it."

Berry teaches a course, "The Writing of Fiction" two days a week at the creative writing center at Stanford. He and his wife, Tanya, and daughter Mary, almost 2, will return to Kentucky in June when the semester ends, "If I get some money," Barry says, "we might go to Europe. Otherwise I will stay and farm awhile."

He finished work on "Nathan Coulter" at the end of 1959 and started work on another book in January. It, too, will be a novel about the same place and will have some of the same characters, Berry said.



WENDELL BERRY
Tobacco country man

Berry first began writing seriously at the University of Kentucky where he received his bachelor and master degrees in English. He later taught a year at Georgetown College in Kentucky.

He started out with a few sketches, he said In 1958 an editor of Houghton Mifflin took part of the book to Boston and Berry was given an option on it. Following this he got a fellowship to the Stanford Writing Center and studied in 1958-59 under Wallace Stegner and Richard Scoweroft. Much of his book was written in California since with the fellowship, he had more free time.

Tanya, the niece of Ann and Dick O'Hanlon, is the daughter of Clifford Amy, professor of art at the University of Kentucky. He did the drawing for the jacket cover of Berry's book.

Tanya says she has always considered her husband more of a poet than a prose writer. He has written a book of poems and has had poems published in the Sausalito magazine, Contact, and in the quarterly, Prairie Schooner.

Berry says of writing, "I dread is every morning when I start but it excites me as soon as I begin." About Kentucky he says—"Rolling country, river and creek country, limestone, blue grass, fine pasture country."

'Nathan Coulter' Fine Novel, Critic Says

NATHAN COULTER by Wendell Berry, Houghton Mifflin, 204 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Kenneth Lamott.

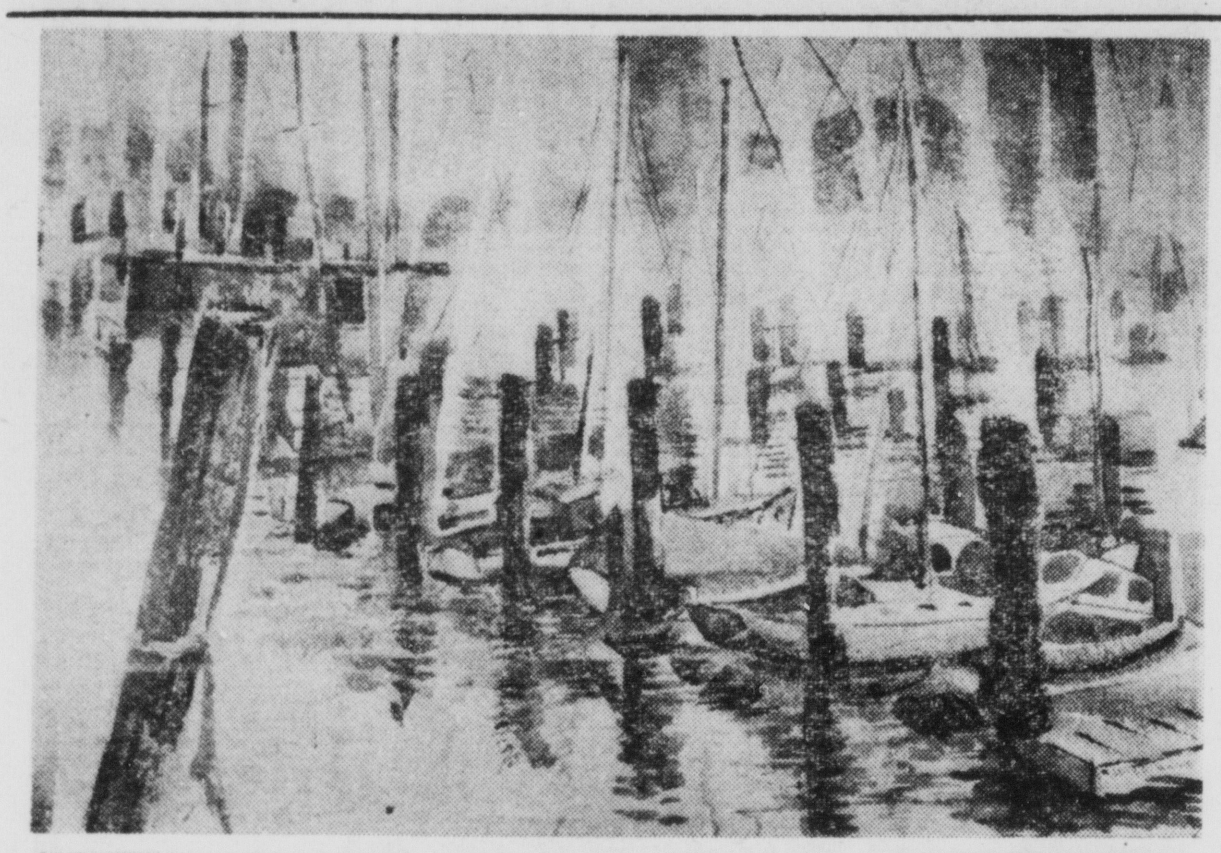
In clear, direct, and evocative prose, Wendell Berry has written in "Nathan Coulter", a novel of a boy's growing up in the tobacco country of Kentucky. It is a fine book.

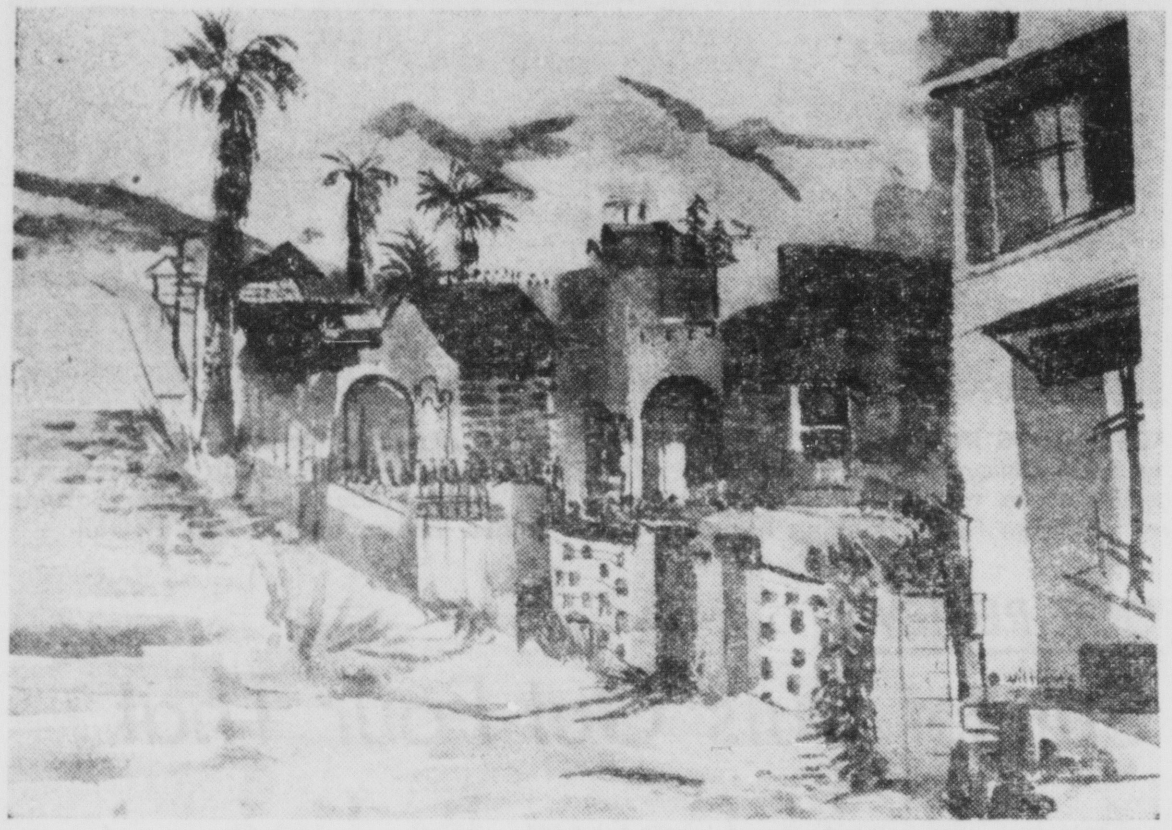
The great English novelist, E. M. Forster, once wrote that an understanding of life comes less from the knowledge of good and of evil than from the knowledge of good and evil. This is the sort of understanding Mr. Berry has. Nathan and his brother, his father and Uncle Burley, his mother and Mandy Loyd are cruel-and-tender, loving-and-hating, creating-and-destroying, innocent-and-guilty, all at the same time. They are, in other words, human beings.

Mr. Berry writes about his country and its people with great skill and with a love that never turns into sentimentality. "Nathan Coulter" is a book about a boy's acceptance of the world as it really is, with all its absurdities and contradictions. It is also a world that can be outrageously and wonderfully funny.

Somebody has said that the sign of a good book is that when you finish it you feel like calling up the author immediately. "Nathan Coulter" is that sort of book, and it's good to know that Wendell Berry of Mill Valley is within easy phoning distance.

Arts And Entertainment





THESE WATERCOLORS, "Masts" at top and "Ensenada" below, are by Dorothy Williams. An exhibit of her paintings and work by another Marin artist, Mary Ann Fries, opens with a preview showing tomorrow at the Torrance Gallery in San Anselmo.

Gallery Staff Members To Show Art

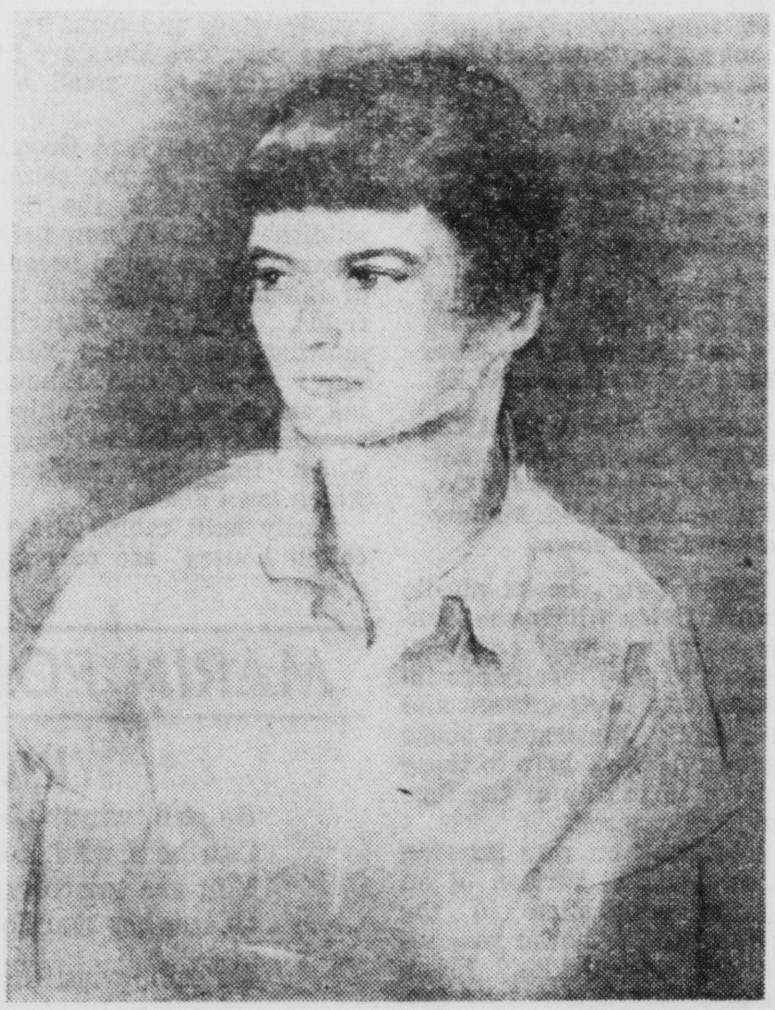
The Torrance Gallery of San Anselmo will open a show of art work by two members of its own staff with a preview tomorrow from 3 to 6 p. m.

The artists are:

Mary Ann Fries (Mrs. William Fries) of San Rafael, mother of six children. She studied at Philadelphia's Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, then won a Cressan Scholarship to continue her studies in Europe. She is much in demand by parents of Marin for her life-like portraits of children, a favorite subject. She is a member of the Marin Society of Artists and has exhibited at the Frances Young Gallery in the Marin Art and Garden Center at Ross.

Dorothy Williams (Mrs. Robert E. Williams) of Kentfield. A graduate of College of Marin, she is primarily a watercolor artist. She has studied at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco and has exhibited at the Frances Young Gallery and the Dick Ford Gallery in Mill Valley. She is also a member of the Marin Society of Artists and the Friday Nite Art Group. She is also talented in ceramics.

Visitors are welcome at the gallery daily from 9:30 a. m. to 5:45 p. m.



"JOAN" is the title of this painting by Mary Ann Fries of San Rafael. Her portraits of children and young people are especially popular. This painting will be included in the show opening tomorrow at the Torrance Gallery.

Guild Orchestra To Appear With Basso, Choral Groups

Symphony Guild of Marin officers are hailing their final concert of the current series, scheduled for next Friday at 8:30 at Marin Catholic High School, as the most ambitious undertaking in the eight-year history of the Guild Orchestra.

The choral music of Moussorgsky's opera "Boris Godounoff" will be highlighted.

Members of three Marin choral groups — the Winifred Baker Chorale directed by Winifred Baker, the Marin Chorale led by Dr. John Milton Kelly, and the Mill Valley Light Opera Co. directed by Cary Smith—will join with guest soloist Roderick Risto and the orchestra.

Basso Risto recently sang roles with the Cosmopolitan Opera Company in San Francisco. Rated the most promising male singer in Southern California, he will sing at the forthcoming Carmel Bach Festival under the direction of Sandor Salgo who will also be conducting the orchestra and combined chorus Friday.

Salgo will also conduct the orchestra in the Verdi overture, "La Forza del Destino" and in Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan."

He'll be guest soloist

Handy One For Student Of Politics

POLITICS 1960 edited by Francis M. Carney and H. Frank Way Jr., Wadsworth Publishing Co., 266 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Bill Hendricks.

For any student or even a casual observer of the fall madness this book is a handy piece to have beside his easy chair.

The basic issues and processes by which candidates are born, brought through a national political convention and finally elected are delineated here by top writers and students in the field peculiar to America—the two party system.

We liked particularly the Mark Sullivan piece — "The Nomination of Warren Gamaliel Harding." And those who are interested in who might be the 1960 nominee of the two parties might do well to read "The Nine Tests for the Presidential Hopeful" by Sidney Hyman.

Gold Rush Yarn Set In Panama

DANGEROUS CLIMATE by Diana Gaines, Doubleday and Co., 284 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown .

A historical novel that is neither much better nor much worse—nor much different in other respects — from most such work.

This one is laid in the Gold Rush days, but it never reaches the California gold fields. Most of the story takes place in Panama City where the adventurers congregated, awaiting ships to take them on to awaiting riches. This gives the author a colorful background.

Otherwise, there is the usual heavy emphasis upon sex. The usual brawling. The usual hero, the usual villain, and the usual struggle for the heart of the heroine.

It will provide you with a diverting, if not rewarding, evening.

Who-Dun-It Doesn't Jell

HOW I MADE A MILLION DOLLARS by A. Frank TAYLOR, Pageant Press, 234 pages, $3. Reviewed by Don Keown.

There is no more enjoyable and well-constructed "who-dun-it" with good character-reading than a well-plotted ization. This one, however, misses the target.

The successful mystery must be so believable and yet gripping that the reader feels he is an actual participant in the excitement. No such feeling results from this one. The plot is not sharply honed. And except for the two "leads," the characters are not clearly drawn.

The "veddy veddy" British detective and the well-stacked stenographer who assists him in the solution of the murder have possibilities. But the rest of the cast simply doesn't come alive. The result is something well short of a first-rate mystery.

Ross Players Feature Husband-Wife Teams

Two husband - and - wife teams will be included in the cast when the Ross Valley Players open their new production, "Sabrina Fair," next Thursday night in the Marin Art and Garden Center at Ross.

The play will continue on Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays for four weekends.

Playing the feminine lead will be Tykie Casey.

Her unsuccessful suitor, David Larrabee, will be played by her husband, David Casey. The Caseys reside in Larkspur.

Another husband and wife team which will appear in the cast is Fred and Carol Brylka of San Rafael. Fred plays Linus Larrabee Jr., also romantically involved with Sabrina. Carol plays Gretchen, ex-wife of David Larrabee. But the plot does call for her to go sailing once with Linus, played by her husband.

The play is a comedy dealing with "the idle rich."

John King is the director.

Others in the cast include Al Spalding, Ralph Alden, Iolanda Diner, Dora Blunden, Marv Silberberg, Sue Steinmetz, Dick Webster, Joanne Dunn, Harry Mack and Marjean Hedden.

A number of organizations have already signed up to sponsor performances of the play. Included are Marin County Humane Society Auxiliary, Thursday's opening performance; American Assn. of University Women, May 6; the Faxfairs, May 13; and the Church of the Nativity of Marin, May 20.

How-to-buy and how-to-plant tips are, of course, included, along with "how-to" drawings, and photos in both color and black and white. John Paul Edwards, consulting rosarian, American Rose Society, is the guiding light.

"Garden Work Centers," includes plans for lathhouses, greenhouses, tool storage sheds, compost bins, potting areas, etc. There are 400 photos, drawings and plans as illustrations. The ideas are designed for both small and large gardens.

"Sunset Lawn and Ground Cover Book," is the second such Sunset book, the first, published in 1955, now being regarded as outdated because of the many changes in this field. Planting, watering, mowing, pest control, fertilizing, weeding and renovating are some of the subjects covered. A special chart shows which fungicides work on which lawn diseases.

Easily built cabins and vacation houses are currently enjoying quite a boom in the West as noted in your April 9 Marin Magazine. Sunset has asembled a number of intriguing construction ideas along with 250 photographs and 252 plans and drawings. There is also advice on the acquisition of land, site improvement, interior arrangements, care and maintenance, etc. An extremely practical book for one considering such a project.

If this edition of your Marin Magazine has served only to whet your appetite for gardening and the outdoors, then there is no better source for more detailed and specific information than books written by the experts on the Sunset staffs.

MARIN POETS' CORNER

WIND MAGIC

Be still, wind! Restlessness as yours
Can be a wild, contagious thing.
You are mistress of conquerors,
Of mighty warriors, knaves and kings.

Be still, wind! Mournful is your sigh
As you twist ghostlike through the rain,
And broken hearts intensify
Their anguish, in your sorrowing.

Be still, wind! Play your anxious game,
And promises you may rescind.
— But spare me the legerdemain
Of hiding sorrow in the wind!

A Chance To Hear Young Talent

BOTH DOUBLE AND single reed players can be seen here. John Leonis, foreground, plays the bassoon. Loren Donaldson and Heidi Hubbell are the oboeists. Barbara Woelz plays the English horn and Judy Curry the clarinet.

Teen-Age Orchestra Performs Tomorrow

Marin's musically talented teen-agers have been hard at work these past few months preparing for the Marin Youth Orchestra's annual spring concert, which will be held tomorrow at Marin Catholic High School in Greenbrae at 7:30 p.m.

This year the orchestra will be joined by the Tamalpais High School Choir, and the combined groups will perform the "Sacred Service" by Ernest Bloch, dedicating the work to the composer's daughter, Lucienne Bloch Dimitroff. Equally important is the premiere performance of "Overture to a Carnival" by Dr. Leonard Ratner of Stanford University, a composition written specifically for this orchestra, commissioned by the Symphony Guild of Marin and sponsored by Miracle Music and Marin Music Co.

Although both groups have undertaken a sizeable task in producing such works, it is not the first challenge either has accepted and met. At Christmas the Youth Orchestra joined with the Leona Norman School of Ballet to perform Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Ballet," a difficult and exacting production with which the young people won enthusiastic acclaim from capacity audiences. Also this year the orchestra presented a concert at Redwood High School, and again won high praise for its musicianship and its high standards which conductor Hugo Rinaldi has has carefully adhered to since the orchestra's formation several years ago.

The Tamalpais High School Choir, directed by Robert Greenwood, has had a slightly different type of challenge. From some 250 auditioning choirs, Tam's group was one of 40 choirs chosen from California and Nevada to perform at Squaw Valley for the opening of the Winter Olympics. To take the entire 60 voice chorus was a real feat, for the expenses amounted to something over $700. Undaunted, the choir members themselves undertook the task of fund-raising, and made and sold over 1,200 candy wreaths to pay their own expenses. They were virtually the only group with 100 per cent attendance.

Director Greenwood feels that young people should know and appreciate the music of their times, and to this end has done much contemporary music during the past few years at Tam. The group's latest production was "Brigadoon," and before this they had done "Paint Your Wagon," "Down in the Valley," and "The Telephone."

In a different vein, they introduced the "Ceremony of Carols" four years ago. The sacred service will again be heard on June 2 at the choir's own program at Tam.

Greenwood explained that the service will be sung in English since the prose is so moving, although the group could sing the Hebrew text as well. Soloists in the Bloch work will be Joe Reade, cantor, Sita Dimitroff, the composer's granddaughter, alto soloist, and Lisa Mibach, soprano soloist.

UTTER CONCENTRATION is demonstrated here by violinist Lynn Danforth, left, and Paul McSweeney as the Youth Orchestra rehearsed for tomorrow's big concert. Photos are by Ken Reichard.

Also on the program tomorrow will be the "Pastorale Suite" by Lars-Eric Larssen and two works featuring instrumental soloists — the "Fourth Brandenburg Concerto" by Bach, performed by flutists Wendy Eisler and Pat Hurtado with violinist Robert Talmage, and the first movement of the Tschaikowsky "Violin Concerto" played by concertmaster Tom Reynolds.

For both orchestra and chorus, tomorrow's appearance will climax long hours of rehearsal.

But, their conductors say, a good turnout tomorrow will be ample reward for their young charges for their special efforts for one of their big events of the year.

Symphony Guild members are admitted free, and tickets for non-members may be obtained at the box office.

One Safe As Supersonic Bomber Crashes In Utah

THEY'LL HAVE TO CORRECT THE SUN — Marvin W. Brigham, county director of public works, and Leslie Wider (foreground), county building maintenance supervisor, check what's to be done to make Courthouse Square sundial tell the right time when Daylight Saving Time starts tomorrow. Wider's answer: rotate the base enough to make the shadow of the pointer fall one hour-figure later. He plans to do it Monday.

Wind Drags Chute In Mud Killing Pilot

Captain Survives Hamilton Training Plane Smashup

One of the two Hamilton Air Force Base jet fighter pilots who crashed while on a routine training mission yesterday was pronounced dead on arrival at the base hospital less than an hour after he was fished from the mud flats of San Pablo Bay.

He was 1st Lt. Bernell A. Mason, 25, of Aurora, Tex. Strong winds drug his parachute into the mud.

The flier who parachuted from the F104B, with Mason was Capt. Orland Wayne Jensen, 39, of 195 Alameda de la Loma, Novato. Jensen parachuted to safety from a similar plane last Nov. 10. He was hospitalized at the base, suffering from mild shock.

The crash was caused by a flameout of the engine, a base spokesman said.

STUDENT PILOT

Mason was a student pilot in the two-man plane which was returning to the base for a landing after a 35-minute flight. The plane crashed five miles east of the field near the mouth of Petaluma Creek.

A witness, Lt. Col. Robert H. Benesh of Larson Air Force Base, Wash., said both fliers ejected from the plane at an altitude of 2,000 feet Jensen was picked up from the mud by a base helicopter piloted by Capt. Henry Fogg. A Coast Guard helicopter from San Francisco International Airport picked up Mason moments later.

Benesh was the pilot of a C47 transport plane which was preparing to land with a load of Air Force ROTC students from Washington. He said he and his passengers were watching the jet fighter when both men ejected.

"Their chutes opened almost simultaneously," Benesh said. They came down like two peas in a pod."

CHUTE COLLAPSES

He said one of the parachutes collapsed on landing but the other failed to collapse and billowed in the strong wind, dragging one of the men through the mud at a speed of about 10 knots.

Mason, who was being dragged by his chute, appeared to be unconscious, Benesh said.

First word of the crash was flashed to the base operations tower by Benesh who orbited his plane over the scene of the accident until the helicopters arrived.

Jensen climbed aboard the helicopter under his own power, Capt. Fogg said. An unidentified paramedic aboard the coast guard helicopter attempted artificial respiration on Mason but the pilot never regained consciousness.

Jensen was the pilot of another F104B which crashed in the bay about a mile south of the base runway last Nov. 10. He bailed out, and was rescued from the water by a SA16 Albatross of the now deactivated 41st Air Rescue Sqdn.

Rhee Agrees To Relinquish Some Power

SEOUL, Korea (AP) — President Syngman Rhee agreed today to yield some of his strongman power and reform his badly shaken government.

A cabinet minister said the 85-year-old Rhee would bring back the premier-cabinet system of government he once scrapped.

At the same time, Lee Kipoong, Rhee's hand-picked heir, was reported resigning the vice presidency he was to have taken over Aug. 15.

RESIGNS IN PROTEST

Earlier, lame duck Vice President John M. Chang, head of the opposition Democrat party, resigned in protest against Rhee's government.

The swift developments left Korea's political scene in confusion in the midst of the crisis created by bloody antigovernment outburst. Police shot and killed at least 128 demonstrators and wounded nearly 800 last Tuesday.

The rioters were protesting the mid-March landslide election won by Rhee and Lee was rigged.

Since Tuesday's blood-bath the heavily armed police and troops patrolling the main centers have held their fire.

Today 3,000 students marched through the streets of Inchon demanding that Rhee and Lee resign. The students paraded for more than four hours and threw rocks at police stations and the local offices of the Liberal party. Police made no effort to halt the demonstration.

MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT

The announcement of Rhee's decision to change the government came from Home Minister Hong Chin-ki who said the government would submit the required constitutional changes to the National Assembly soon. There was still much speculation on just how much power Rhee would be willing to relinquish.

South Korea formerly had a cabinet system of government but abolished it. Since then the nation has followed the American pattern putting executive powers in the hands of an elected president who picks his own cabinet.

NO BERLIN CRISIS SEEN BY DE GAULLE

COMBINED AP AND UPI

WASHINGTON—Charles de Gaulle said today he sees no chance of solving the Berlin problem at next month's summit meeting—but that he does not believe Nikita Khrushchev will force a new crisis on the issue.

The French president told a massive news conference at the National Press Club that the Big Four leaders "above all" must grapple at Paris with the "crucial point" of relaxing general East-West tensions.

"If we make some progress in this matter . . . gradually solutions to the problems that divide the world will begin to appear," he said "solutions which no one (has) thought of proposing under the present circumstances."

PRE-SUMMIT TALKS

The 69-year-old French leader, here for pre-summit talks with President Eisenhower, said this applied to disarmament, German problems, aid to underdeveloped countries and many other matters.

De Gaulle said he considered it possible "from a practical point of view" to make a start on control of nuclear weapons and bases at the summit meeting in Paris May 14 of himself, Eisenhower, Khrushchev and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

As far as Berlin is concerned, I do not see now a possible solution," the French leader declared. "But I envisage a common control of nuclear weapons which should start by the control of planes, missiles and bases."

'MAJOR CRISIS'

De Gaulle replied indirectly when asked whether he believed Khrushchev "will precipitate a major crisis over Berlin at the summit" if the Western leaders reject his demand that they get out of the city.

"I cannot foresee nor take responsibility for the tactics displayed by the president of the presidium of the Soviet Union," de Gaulle said. "But it seems to me that had the Soviet Union wanted to keep on the pressure and the threat looming over the west because of Berlin, it would have done so, and the Soviet Union did not."

De Gaulle also called on the United States, Russia and the other great powers to launch a cooperative economic program for the benefit of underdeveloped countries of Africa

$10 Million Craft Falls Near Lake

HILL AIR FORCE BASE, Utah (UPI) — One crewman of a B-58 Hustler, missing since yesterday, was rescued today from the cold water of Great Salt Lake but the fate of two companions aboard the supersonic bomber remained unknown.

The Air Force believed the $10 million plane, capable of speeds twice that of sound, had crashed in the shallow waters in the north end of Great Salt Lake or in the sagebrush-dotted desert bordering the inland sea.

The known survivor was Kenneth G. Timpson, 29, Fort Worth, Tex., a flight test engineer of the all-civilian crew.

Missing were pilot Ray Edwin Tenhoff, 38, and Walter Simon, 32, navigator-bombardier.

HIT BY COLD

Timpson, suffering a little from a night in the open, said he was ordered to bail out at 4 p.m. yesterday when the plane was flying about 500 miles per hour at an altitude of 17,000 feet over the lake.

The craft had just completed a practice bombing run in the Wendover area and was to make a radar bombing approach at a Salt Lake City simulated target.

Timpson said he never saw either Simons or Tenhoff after leaving the plane. The engineer parachuted into 10 feet of water, inflated his life raft, and paddled one mile to shore at Little Valley, an abandoned construction camp used for the recently completed dirt fill causeway built across the lake by Southern Pacific Railroad.

Timpson fashioned a lean-to where he spent the night. This morning he trudged until he found a sheep camp where sheepherder Chris Choulos took Timpson to the railway flag stop of Saline where they flagged a passing freight train.

MEDICAL EXAM

The train brought Timpson to Ogden where a hasty medical examination pronounced him uninjured. He was then brought to Hill Air Force Base for questioning by Air Force investigators.

Three helicopters from the base were assigned to search for the missing plane. It was raining heavily throughout Salt Lake Valley and helicopter crewmen reported visibility was badly impaired.

The plane, built for the Air Force by Convair, apparently was on an acceptance flight prior to its actual delivery to the Air Force. It had taken off from the Convair plant at Fort Worth where it had been built.

The pilot had last radioed the control tower at Salt Lake City at 2:55 p.m. yesterday that he was returning to Fort Worth.

Air Pollution Board Gets Efficiency Study

Supervisor William Gnoss of Novato said today that he has received a copy of an efficiency report on smog control ordered by Bay Area Air Pollution Control District directors of whom he is one, and chairman last year.

"I haven't had time to read it yet," said Gnoss, "but we felt that the situation required inquiry and that we might get more action through such a survey."

Although the report recommends more technical personnel, Gnoss said that directors have not hitherto felt that any more people were needed.

The report was critical of the operating personnel as indulging too much in efforts at public relations, and by implication not enough in smog control itself. It also said a salary survey should be made as wages seemed high.

The report was prepared by the firm of Ernst & Ernst, accountants and business management, at the suggestion of Benjamin Linsky, control officer—but Linsky was told in the findings that his main job should be that of district management.

To this Linsky has responded that his public relations efforts have caused industry to be more cooperative in trying to bring smog under control. He also says with regard to the charge of too-high pay that he has been able to hire competent technicians only by offering salaries that are "competitive" with other potential employers.

Gnoss returned to Novato late last night after attending board hearings on regulation of industrial plants and large incinerators. It expects to adopt draft regulations with tougher requirements May 4, planning for full enforcement by the end of this year.

More Rainfall Seen For Marin

Light rains fell intermittently on Marin last night and today, with prospects that measurable amounts would fall during the weekend.

Sausalito, Marin City, Mill Valley and other points in south and middle areas reported showers in varying degrees last night. A chilly 39 degrees was recorded in Woodacre. Further cool weather was expected through the weekend.

Snow was falling today in the Sierras.

It's That Time Again; Change Your Sundials

By RANDALL GOULD

It won't help a bit to look at your sundial tomorrow morning (unless you reset it as in the picture above). If you want the right time of day it will be better to dial RO 7-8900.

Another good system would be to set your watch AHEAD one hour just before you doze off tonight.

Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co., at any rate, is taking due precautions to see that the voice with the word on what time it is doesn't flub her assignment tomorrow just because Daylight Saving Time will once more be in effect.

Sun time and man's time will undergo their annual divergence not only in Marin County but in about half the rest of the United States. Elgin National Watch Co.'s publicity people have figured that at least 91,275,000 persons will lose an hour of sleep tonight.

That goes on the assumption that all those people are going to know the right time of day tomorrow morning and additionally are going to get up at their regular hour, none of which is necessarily so.

But people who do their regular sleeping tonight will confront a horrible dilemma tomorrow night, either going to sleep early by the clock or to skip that hour of sleep Monday morning.

Of course they can go to the office an hour late Monday, but that isn't recommended in most instances.

The phone people expect that the time-telling voice of Mrs. Berrien Moore Jr. is going to be called on for information tomorrow a vast number of times more than the usual average, figured at 1,779 calls daily in San Rafael alone.

That won't worry Mrs. Moore a bit. She will be in Atlanta, Ga., as usual. Her voice is taperecorded Talk with her all you like.

Lots of people say "Thank you" when Mrs. Moore tells them the time, not just in Marin County but all over. The courtesy doesn't do a bit of harm but it doesn't do Mrs. Moore any good.

She had her voice recorded on one tape counting to 12 for the hours, and on another tape she counted to 59 for the minutes. On a third is her voice introducing her time-talk with the words "The time is . . ."

These three tapes are fixed on individual revolving drums and all over America mechanics are busy seeing to it that from midnight on, the tapes will talk on a Daylight Saving Time basis.

Fifty-nine Northern California communities get Mrs. Moore's voice with an average of 193,000 requests most days; a whole lot more the first day the time has changed, and then again when it changes back.

Your sundial won't be reliable again till the last Sunday in September.

Hub Mayor Signs Pact For Firehouse

Mayor Arthur W. Smith of San Anselmo announced today that he has signed lease agreements for construction of its projected No. 2 firehouse on a lease-purchase plan.

"It's all up to the San Anselmo Fire Station Building Corp. to go ahead as quickly as possible now," said Smith. "Things should move from now on."

The way was cleared for Smith's action when Judge Thomas F. Keating handed down a ruling Thursday affirming the legality of the plan. Smith had formerly declined to sign in order to bring the issue before the court in an agreed test case.

By terms of the plan, city property on Butterfield road at Arroyo avenue will be leased to the building corporation on condition that a firehouse will be built there and leased back on a fair rental basis for not less than 50 years, with 20-year option for the city to purchase no earlier than 1973.

Gremlins Blamed For Raid Signals

Those eerie wails from air raid sirens in various Marin County areas yesterday afternoon were not due to air raids.

Gremlins known as short circuits apparently were to blame. The sirens sounded without human aid, the sheriff's office said.

ANOTHER REPRIEVE?

Jurist's Retirement Plans Give Chessman New Hope

As a faint glint of hope appeared for Caryl Chessman today from Sacramento, San Quentin Prison official machinery turned in preparation for gas chamber execution of the convict-author May 2.

The hope came through announcement that Justice Homer R. Spence—one of the four state supreme court judges who voted against commutation to life imprisonment for Chessman early this year—will retire June 1.

It was suggested in Sacramento that Gov. Edmund G. Brown might grant another reprieve, for perhaps 30 days, till appointment of a successor to Spence who might join three other justices inclined toward mercy and thus give the governor the legal sanction he requires for executive clemency.

Prison officials meanwhile announced rules for the ninth scheduled execution date, including slight change in previous arrangements projected.

Associated Warden Walter D. Achuff pointed out that radiotelephone equipped cars, to be used by some news media because of shortage of the prison's phone facilities, will be kept behind a barrier near the community hall instead of at the inspectoscope gate as previously planned.

This is farther to the eastward, consequently a little farther from the execution chamber, but it affords a clear view uninterrupted by any nearby buildings, Achuff said.

Attendance at the spectators' area outside the "green room" will be limited to 60 outside people, additional to the necessary officials.

George T. Davis announced that he was still one of Chessman's attorneys despite a recent letter from Chessman asking him to withdraw. He showed another letter from Chessman confirming that Davis remains an attorney of record along with Rosalie Asher and A. L. Wirin.

I-J SCHOOL SERIES TO START MONDAY

One week each year, many people, who mostly take schools for granted, give them a little extra thought and attention.

That's during Public Schools Week, which starts Monday.

While schools are in the limelight, the Independent-Journal, starting Monday, will present a series of articles on school unification in Marin County: what has been proposed, what the advantages and objections are to the various plans, what may be expected to happen.

Watch for this series, by reporter Donald G Davis, starting Monday in the Independent-Journal.

Water Contract Talk Planned

North Marin Water District officials will travel to Santa Rosa Monday to discuss final negotiation of a contract that may supply the Novato area with Russian River water.

Jerome B. Gilbert, chief engineer and general manager, said it was decided at a meeting last night to iron out the final contract negotiations with representatives of Petaluma and Sonoma County. The contract would provide for 10,000 acre-feet of Sonoma County water to be piped to North Marin.

CONCERN EXPRESSED

Consumer Counsel Eyeing Drug Advertising Dispute

The state's newly appointed consumer counsel, watch dog on the side of the buyer, has indicated she will step into the case of the Drake Pharmacy, San Anselmo, vs. other Marin drug stores.

An exclusive story in the Independent-Journal April 7 told of pressure being brought by other druggists to stop price advertising of prescription drugs as being "unethical and undignified."

An I-J editorial in the same issue suggested that the consumer counsel represent the buyers interest in any state hearing on the subject.

The California State Pharmaceutical Assn. may push for an amendment to laws which would have the effect of outlawing price advertising of prescription drugs.

Mrs. Helen Ewing Nelson of Mill Valley, the state consumer counsel, wrote the Independent-Journal today that she is "concerned about the situation described in your recent editorial. . . .

"I will be wanting all the facts in the case."

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Meadow Club Party In Sidewalk Cafe

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

The Meadow Club has been transformed into a French sidewalk cafe for tonight's annual spring formal dinner dance at the club. Jack Fairhurst designed the cover for the invitations which show a French cafe with the Eiffel Tower in the background. The verse inside reads: "The sidewalk cafe is a dead giveaway to the theme of our Spring formal dance. Won't you come to the fling and greet Marin's spring, no need to go over to France."

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph McCullach, co-chairmen, are being assisted by Messrs. and Mesdames Fairhurst, Robert Grady, Benton Coit, Jack Lee and Harding McPhun. Seated with Mr. and Mrs. Edward Grady (she is the club's social chairman) will be the Henry Skinners, LeRoy Pages, Rudy Langs, William Zimmermans, Charles Trosts, Robert Walkers and Floyd Gilmans.

HAWAII seems to be the popular vacation locale right now. Mr. and Mrs. Roger Darrow of Ross with her sister, Miss Claire Byers of San Jose, are flying to the islands on Monday. They'll be quartered at the Royal Hawaiian for three weeks or more. Mr. and Mrs. Russell Scott of San Rafael are now enjoying a holiday in the islands. Also over there are the William Grants of San Rafael. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Castro Jr. of San Rafael left today for the island paradise.

ITALIAN was the theme for the dinner party the George Schirmers gave a week ago tonight at their Kent Woodlands home. Menu, table service and decorations carried out the theme. Dr. and Mrs. S. Nicholas Jacobs came over from San Francisco for the party. Others present were Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Halley, Frank Paganini, Leon Smith and Robert Byard.

A BON VOYAGE EVENT was the champagne cocktail party hosted Saturday night by Mr. and Mrs. Donald N. Fox of Larkspur for their neighbors in Hillview, Dr. and Mrs. R. H. Bowman, who left on Thursday to fly to Europe. A handsome scroll made by Dr. Michael Looper and, signed by all the guests, holding currency of all the countries the Bowmans will visit was presented to them. Guests were Dr. and Mrs. Looper, Messrs. and Mesdames Kenneth Hansen, Abe Kupperberg, John Corriea, Aaron Shenson, William Hawk and Jerome Cohn.

ENTERTAINING on Easter Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Philip T. Smith of Mill Valley. Present in addition to their daughter, Stephanie, and son, Philip M. Smith, and wife up from Stanford were Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Deedy of Ross and their six children, Mesdames Stewart Bostwick and S. C. DeGuerre of Mill Valley with the latter's houseguest, Mrs. Francis Hummer of Madison, Wis., and Mrs. Arthur Garland of San Francisco.

MRS. E. J. WALTERS of Strawberry Point, will tour Europe with her parents, Dr. and Mrs. G. B. Robson of San Francisco, visiting France, Germany, Switzerland, and England. They leave May 1 New York to Paris, via Air France jet and will travel through the vineyard countries, and English countryside by rented car. From London over the Polar route they'll return on June 10. The Walters' daughter, Lisa, will stay with Mrs. Walters' grandmother, Mrs. A. D. McCoy of San Francisco.

NEW RESIDENTS of Marin are Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Sullivan. They have taken a home at 245 Center street in San Rafael until the house they are building in the Reedlands is completed. The Sullivans, who will soon be joined by their daughter, Mary, now on a trip around the world, formerly resided in Boston, Mass., and Detroit, Mich. They are neighbors of Miss Edythe Foster, whom they met through an introduction by an eastern relative.

A UNIVERSITY OF OREGON student, Janet Tait, will spend the summer in Europe. On June 22 she will leave by plane for Oslo, Norway, where she will visit with Bibbi Lie. The latter as an exchange student, studied a year at San Rafael High School, and made her home with Janet and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tait of Loch Lomond. Janet, a second year student at the University will spend several weeks with Bibbi, who is now attending the University of Copenhagen, and then make a tour of the continent. She will return home on Sept. 11.

COMPLETELY surprised was Mrs. Martin J. Livingston of Mill Valley after Wednesday's Symphony Guild preview at the Meadow Club.

At the luncheon following the preview she was the guest of Mrs. Arnold J. Oehler at a table composed of Mill Valley women. These included Mesdames Edward Kemp, John Nason, Chester I. Dennis, Albert Von Der Werth, William Benetley, Elvira Becker, Richard Stanton, Paul Kleinsmith and Wayne Speckmann.

What Mrs. Livingston did not know was that most of them, members of board of the Mill Valley concert series founded by her late husband, the noted concert pianist Maxim Schapiro, were going on to a tea in her honor at the Mill Valley home of Mrs. Douglas Cummings.

The former Jane Eddy Schapiro had been active on the board during the 11 years of the series and took over her late husband's work in 1959, the last year of the series. Continuing his work also on the Alaskan series he founded and traveling in Europe and Japan, she did not return to Mill Valley until February this year. She was married in December in Honolulu to Martin J. Livingston of Sausalito.

Having wanted for a long time to express their appreciation for her leadership, all those who had worked on the concert series boards for the last three years planned the surprise tea under the direction of Mrs. Oehler.

Luncheon over, Mrs. Ochler suggested to Mrs. Livingston that they drop by the Mill Valley Episcopal Church's antiques show in Sausalito, saying she wanted to stop a few minutes to see someone in Mill Valley.

When they stepped into the Cummings' home, assembled to cry "surprise!" were Mesdames Dennis, Bentley, Kemp, Nason, Stanton, Becker and Von der Werth, with Mesdames George Whitsett, Martin Goldschmidt, Eugene McGeorge, F. J. Connelly, Joseph Brewster and Benjamin Young.

Coming in later were Mesdames Delmar Clinton, Harold Jolley and Ehrling Carlsen.

Proving quite a conversation piece was a group of tiny marquisite lapel pins worn by Mrs. Oehler. She had bought them—a zebra, a giraffe, an impala and an elephant — at Nairobi during her African safari.

State's Drivers Pay Better Attention To New Law

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California drivers apparently are paying more attention to the state's new 65 mile-an-hour speed limit than they did to the old law.

Highway Patrol arrests for speeding started dropping last July, shortly after the Legislature adopted the new limit.

Even though the 65-mile law wasn't effective until Jan. 1, the decline in arrests continued through the balance of the year and into 1960.

So far this year, the Patrol has issued 58,590 speeding citations, a drop of almost 29 percent under the number issued during the same period last year.

Patrol spokesmen theorized motorists are paying more attention to the new law because they know it is inflexible. Under the old law, a driver could undertake to prove he wasn't being careless when he exceeded 55 miles an hour.

Other statistics reported by the Patrol in its quarterly bulletin today show all other arrests also have declined this year except those for drunk driving.

Henry C. Hall School Dedication Scheduled

Larkspur School District will dedicate Henry C. Hall School, its third elementary school, at 2 p.m. next Saturday.

The dedication program will be held in the multi-use room of the school at 200 Doherty drive, Larkspur.

Henry C. Hall School opened last November with classes from kindergarten through the eighth grade. The school was named in honor of the late district superintendent and principal of the Larkspur-Corte Madera School, who died in 1927.

Principal speaker at the dedication will be Jack Mengel, a member of the district board of trustees and former chairman of the bond committee whose successful campaign helped make the school possible.

Dr. Henry C. Hall Jr., professor of education at the University of San Francisco and a son of the late educator, also will speak and make a presentation to the school.

Supt. Vaughn D. Seidel will preside at the ceremonies and welcome guests. These will include former school board members, city and county officials, Parent-Teacher Assn. officers, John Lyon Reid and partners, school architects; W. J. Kubon Co., general contractors, and members of the Hall family.

Also taking part in the program will be John R. Cunningham, chairman of the trustees; Mrs. Doris Barck, board clerk, and trustees M. K. Taylor and John Boyd.

The Larkspur School District Band will provide music, Rev. James J. Healy of St. Patrick's Church, Larkspur, will give the invocation, and Rev. Wayne Hansen, Redwoods Presbyterian Church, Larkspur, the benediction.

The school P-TA will serve refresments after the program and the school will be open for inspection.

Sausalito Unit Asks Waiver On Parking

The Sausalito Recreation Commission will recommend to the city's planning commission that it waive all or most of the offstreet parking requirements for a new parish hall to be built by Christ Church, Episcopal.

This decision was made at a committee meeting of the commission Thursday night with members of the church building committee.

The move is to keep as much of the present playground as possible for a recreation area when the parish hall is built in the area of the present city-leased tennis court. Building will probably not get under way earlier than fall, Col. Henry G. Douglas of the church building committee said.

The recreation commission will hold an adjourned meeting at 8 p.m. Thursday at the city hall.

Awards Presented To Boys' Choir

The annual awards breakfast for members of the Boys Choir of Mill Valley Episcopal Church was made extra festive this year with Easter egg tree decorations.

Mrs. Tom Chesnut, Mrs. Robert Stott, Mrs. Horatio Ham and Mrs. Ivan Hayes were responsible for decorations for the Easter Sunday breakfast.

Boys who had been choir members for five years, Robby Robins, Creighton Wyatt and Cedric Collett, received Bible awards.

Prayer books are given to Brian Collett, Bob Wall and Gary McCallum for four years. Silver crosses went to Bill Phelps and Craig Jolly for three years service.

Rev. D. Murray Hammond and choirmaster Barry Mineah presented the awards.

Tickets now are available for the choir's "Music in May" concert May 14 at the Tamalpais High School auditorium.

Cancer Fund Event Slated For Monday

Mrs. Robertson Ward, county chairman of the Cancer Crusade, said today that Marin residents are expected to give $30,000 toward fighting the disease in a fund-raising event next Monday.

"How can we expect residents to give this much?' she asked. "It is an unprecedented amount."

"Because," she said, "the crusade is especially meaningful this year.

"First, trends show that the outlook is good. When the Marin unit of the American Cancer Society was organized in the spring of 1947 with Mrs. Harry N. Hensler of Ross as chairman, $4,000 was raised. Ten years later more than $21,000 was raised.

GROWING

"In the past two years the collections have continued to increase.

"Now, nearly everyone has a relative, business associate or friends who is suffering or has died from cancer. National figures show that cancer will strike two families in every three.

"In Marin last year 357 persons died of cancer, and there are more than 1,000 Marin residents now being treated for cancer, well above the expectation—based on population.

TRAGEDY

"Like all statistics these figures cannot possibly convey the amount of suffering and personal tragedy involved in each individual case.

But Mrs. Ward added that early detection and treatment of the disease is saving lives. While that is good news, she said, additional money is needed for research and study to make further progress in the field of fighting cancer.

Sergeants 45 Miles Ahead Of Dr. Moore

ELKO, Nev. (AP)—Two British sergeants striding across the United States were expected to pass through this northeastern Nevada cowtown today—still about 45 miles ahead of their countrywoman, Dr. Barbara Moore.

The sergeants, Patrick Moloney and Mervyn Evans, bedded down last night at Carlin, 22 miles west of here on U.S. Highway 40.

Dr. Moore reached Battle Mountain, 45 miles west of Carlin.

The determined, 56-year-old vegetarian has vowed to overtake the sergeants before they reach Salt Lake City. They insist it is not a race and that she is welcome to amble by them anytime—if she can.

She said in Battle Mountain last evening that she strongly suspects the sergeants have been snitching rides with their jeep escort. This comment came after they expressed disbelief that she had covered 109 miles in 17 hours Tuesday in northwestern Nevada.

"I don't have any way of proving it," she said, "but now I'm close enough to watch them. People are driving back to tell me what they're doing."

The sergeants left San Francisco April 12 on the trek to New York. Dr. Moore followed them the next day. It is about 3,200 miles between the two big cities. The sergeants hope to make it in 70 days or less. The record is 79.

Novato Club Plays Host To Rotarians

More than 200 Rotarians from Mill Valley, Sausalito, San Anselmo and San Rafael were guests of Novato Rotarians at an exhibition of stunt flying and a luncheon Thursday at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Speaking to the representatives of all Marin County Rotary Clubs at the base officers' club was Robert Hoover, World War II pilot now with the customer relations department of North American Aviation, Inc.

EXHIBITION

Preceding the luncheon meeting, Hoover treated the guests to an exhibition of daredevil flying over the base runway in an F86 jet borrowed from the California National Guard for the occasion.

Also a former test pilot with North American, Hoover spoke on defense problems in general and specifically on the value of the latest aircraft being built by his company — the B70 bomber.

PERFORMANCE

The B70 is capable of flying at three times the speed of sound at an altitude of 80,000 feet, Hoover said, and its adoption by this country would make all potential enemy aircraft obsolete overnight.

Introducing guests at the meeting was Donald F. Donohue, Novato Rotary president. Representing Col. George F. Ceuleers, commander of the base who was away on Air Force business, was Col. Benjamin B. Cassiday Jr., deputy commander.

Actor To Appear At Jewish Center

Actor Howard DaSilva will appear at the Marin Jewish Community Center in San Rafael, May 12 in a one-man show.

DaSilva will tell, in English, the most beloved stories of the Yiddish humorist Sholom Aleichem, beginning at 8:15.

Da Silva will be on the Ed Sullivan show tomorrow.

Tickets for the May 12 performance may be purchased at the center office, 1618 Mission avenue.

CROSSES AND CRUCIFIXES

The second annual Art and Liturgical Tea will emphasize crosses and crucifixes next Saturday at St. Columba's Church, Inverness. The tea will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. On display will be 400 year old Danish christening clothes, a coin from the Roman catacombs and works of modern artists.

There's A Lesson In City Elections – Every Vote Counts

There is a lesson in the recent city elections in Marin County. It isn't a lesson for the candidates, although they undoubtedly looked at the returns with varying reactions, some rueful, others relieved.

The lesson is there for the voters, or more specifically, the eligible voters who "didn't bothers to vote because what does one more vote more or less mean."

One vote more or less meant a great deal in a number of the city elections. In San Anselmo, for example, one vote more for one candidate and one vote less for another would have changed the results. Instead of one candidate losing and one winning, the result would have been tied. Only two votes separated the winners and the losers.

The importance of taking the responsibility of voting seriously was demonstrated in Larkspur where the voters who had bothered to cast absentee ballots because they would not be near the polls on election day, decided the issue. In fact they reversed the results.

In that city only eight votes separated three candidates; two of them were elected, one lost. The absentee votes made the decision, electing the man who was lowest after the regular ballot count and unseating the woman candidate who apparently had won a council chair.

Although these two were the most dramatic of the close city elections, only 20 votes separated a winner and a loser in Belvedere, 29 votes in Mill Valley and 46 in Sausalito.

We are now approaching the important primary election June 7 in which, among other things, we will select Marin's nominees for our State Senator, State Assemblyman and Congressman. In addition there will be presidential preferencial vote and three statewide issues. Yet even now it is too late for persons not yet registered to do so. They will not be able to participate in our republican form of government at this election.

With each vote obviously meaning so much, we urge every eligible voter to get himself registered as soon as possible, before Sept. 15 or you won't be able to vote in the general election either. And we urge every registered voter to study the candidates and issues so as to be able to cast an informed vote on June 7.

NOTHING TO LIVE FOR?

A murderer made a strange request just after he was sentenced to life imprisonment for killing a store clerk in a holdup that netted only $80.

"A life sentence is not merciful," the 28-year-old criminal pleaded. "I'd rather die. I have nothing to live for. I am all alone."

The judge refused to impose the death penalty.

Those who think they "have nothing to live for" lead incomplete, desolate, even desperate lives. In disregarding God and others, they inevitably end up living with their miserable selves. For some this can be a fate worse than death.

None of us can rightfully say that we have "nothing to live for." Every human being has a role to play on the stage of life that is important in God's sight, however insignificant it may seem. It is far more than merely seeking self. Our very nature yearns to reach out in love to the Creator and to all our fellowmen. Those who live up to this noble ideal never have any regrets. They find the longest life is too short.

"Walk in love, as Christ also loved us and delivered Himself up for us."
(Ephesians 5:2)

Imbue me with such a love for you and others, O Lord, that life will be the foretaste of heaven.

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Primary Campaigns Start To Move; Wilson Has Tough, Unique Plan

By CHAPIN A. DAY

The campaigns for party nomination in the June 7 primaries are really starting to roll.

As is to be expected, with five candidates seeking two party nominations, the battle for the State Assembly is shaping up the fastest and the hottest.

Republican William T. Bagley of San Rafael has been concentrating his efforts in Sonoma County because he's little known in the north of the two-county district.

Bagley has his organization well under way in both counties. Marin County campaign chairman is Thomas W. Peryam, recently retired Marin County agricultural commissioner. M. J. Lamperti of San Rafael is heading the Marin Democratic Committee For Bagley. Sonoma County Chairman for Bagley is Santa Rosa attorney Marshall H. Comstock.

Bagley's Republican opponent, Sonoma Supervisor Leigh Shoemaker, has been strangely silent. We've heard little from him, not even the name of his campaign chairman, although he has appeared at several candidates' nights before Marin organizations.

Democratic hopeful Joseph G. Wilson of San Rafael is putting together an unusual and interesting campaign to get his name known throughout the two counties. The plan is to hold a series of "Joe Wilson Days" in 20 towns and communities throughout the district.

It will work like this. Starting early in May each day for 20 consecutive days, except Sundays, a different Marin or Sonoma town will be selected for "Joe Wilson Day." Using newspaper advertising, radio, quarter cards, bumper strips and about everything else possible, the selected community, 10 in Marin and 10 in Sonoma, will be saturated with notice of Joe's visit. Then he'll set up shop in some store window or an equally conspicuous place, with necessary campaign banners, slogans, and propaganda.

William R. Davis, San Anselmo gasoline dealer, is Wilson's Marin County chairman, and Lewis H. DeCastle, Santa Rosa attorney, is handling his Sonoma campaign. We don't know who his doctor is.

One of Wilson's opponents, Petaluman Everett A. Matzen named John S. Watson of Petaluma, chairman of the State Board of Agriculture, his general chairman. Clyde Nelson, a Petaluma attorney, is his finance chairman. But thus far we haven't see much evidence of his campaign in Marin County, where his chairman is not yet named.

The third Democrat, Mrs. Helen Putnam, hasn't even let us know who her workers are nor have we even heard from her since she announced her candidacy.

THE CONGRESSIONAL campaign organization is much easier to report.

Incumbent Clement W. Miller has two chairmen in his battle for re-election. Still back in Washington, the Democrat got in an opening speech here during a flying visit to Pt. Reyes a week ago. But he's leaving his campaign planning in the hands of co-chairmen Mrs. Nancy Swadesh of Mill Valley and Tom Bair of Arcada, Humboldt County.

His opponent, for the second time, is Republican Fred G. Dupuis of Tiburon. He has announced that Robert L. Bishop of Santa Rosa, former member of the State Highway Commission, will head his campaign. Bishop plans bipartisan committees throughout the seven counties of the district, but he hasn't said yet who will head the campaign in Marin.

STATE SENATOR John F. McCarthy, Republican, has an old team of Raymond Shone, campaign chairman, and Warren McGuire, finance chairman, working for him again this year as he seeks election for the fourth time. But he has brought in a young livewire, Mrs. Mary Ellen Irwin, to manage the campaign.

One of his Democratic opponents, Charles M. Geller of San Anselmo, has a temporary chairman in Ed McCarthy of San Anselmo, but will have a permanent one later. Norman Campbell, is Geller's treasurer.

The other Democrat, Max Miller of San Rafael, has been so busy with business he hasn't "had time yet to appoint a campaign manager," but he'll "start getting into high gear in the next two weeks.."

In any event, it looks like a remarkably fine primary campaign season.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

San Rafael Can't Govern Itself

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

This is with reference to the proposed annexation to San Rafael of the Nunes Ranch area and Terra Linda which was reported in the Independent-Journal on April 19.

It is frightening to me as a resident of Terra Linda and a citizen of Marin to watch the tenacles of a neighboring city reach out and attempt to consume a community. No action of the city of San Rafael, up to the present time, indicates that it is capable of coping with the problems that exist within its city limits.

There are two specific points. By way of example: first, the inability of the city government to solve the horrendous traffic problem on Fourth street during the last 10 years. Secondly, the lack of planning for the recreational needs of San Rafael now.

Two years ago the Wise report to the planning commission of San Rafael indicated the immediate need of the city for 80 acres of land for recreational use while at that time there were only 50 acres of land available and most of it was poorly used for recreational needs.

Now in our country it is desirable for everything that is little to grow bigger, and while this seems to be a reasonable goal for any governmental body, I personally feel that San Rafael will be harming itself by assuming responsibility for areas that it is incapable of governing and it will also hurt the citizens of the present city of San Rafael in that energy, time and money will be used to solve problems of newly developing areas while those who reside in the town at present will suffer from continued second rate government.

I therefore urge all present citizens of San Rafael to seriously consider the risks to them, if their city government continues its apparent plan to absorb all areas it can reach with is long arm of annexation in this irresponsible manner.

M. J. FRANZBLAU, M.D.
Terra Linda.

Clem Miller For More Everything

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

Hurray for Mr. Carrow! Let him proclaim, in his attempted defense of Clem Miller's record, that the forthcoming campaign should be fought on the strength of basic issues. And let every Republican in this Congressional district stand up and say: Yes, Mr. Carrow, this is what we want, because IF we can fight this election on the issues as they truly exist we will beat you hands down.

We know what Clem Miller is FOR. We know that he is FOR something for everyone, that he wants MORE of everything for his constituents that will produce a vote. We know that he, like all of us, wants more schools, more roads, more hospitals, more care for the aged. We are also quite sure that to obtain pie in the sky Clem Miller also wants more taxes, more debts, more federal government, more regimentation, more restrictions for John Q. Citizen.

We, as Republicans, want to know what Clem Miller BELIEVES. We want to know what he will answer when Messrs Dupuis, Bagley, et al, step forward and proclaim to the electorate these, the basic principles of Republicanism:

Faith and trust in the individual as being best able to seek his own destiny—and therefore the resistance to governmental intrusion into the private lives of American citizens; the right to protection of savings and therefore the importance of balanced budgets and a reduced national debt; the obligation of all men to work when work is available, rather than to seek the deluding aid of the federal government and therefore the preservation of an economic climate in which work—and hard work — is encouraged; the right of all men to invest in the American economy and to expect commensurate gain; equal educational and economic opportunities; strong local governments; preservation of FREEDOM.

These, Mr. Carrow, are what we as Republicans believe. These are the principles upon which our nation was founded, and these are the principles by which it shall be preserved.

WILLIAM M. SPENCER, Jr.

20 YEARS AGO

The newly formed San Rafael Young Democrats acted as host to a meeting of the California Young Democrat Northern Executive Committee, the first time San Rafael had ever had such a meeting.

Gasoline cost half a cent more per gallon in Marin County than in San Francisco, according to a communication to the supervisors from Joseph W. Glaser of San Anselmo, who asked that something be done about it.

TRY AND STOP ME

BENNETT CERF

A great big he-man from the West wrote a great big novel which he submitted to a New York publisher with this note attached: "I don't want any of your typical Eastern discourtesy and carelessness. Read this manuscript carefully. It's great. And if you're too stupid to appreciate its possibilities, don't send me one of your insulting printed rejection forms. I want a personal letter telling me why!"

In due course the Westerner got his manuscript back with this letter from the publishing house: "We are overcome with the opportunity of corresponding with a wonderful author of your calibre. Our editorial staff was so carried away by your novel it took some of them a week to get back to the office. But what would happen if we published your masterpiece? We would be establishing a standard we obviously never again could attain. Rather than reach the pinnacle, therefore, only to plunge later into the abyss, we are humbly standing aside to let a competitor triumph with your magnificent novel which we are returning under separate cover, collect."

Spring Afternoons Find Boss 'Called To The City' And Things

These balmy spring afternoons make a man lazy.

Even the courthouse and city halls, which bustle with activity in the brisk morning hours, seem to slow down to a crawl after the noon siesta.

Many of the employees are hard at work, but here and there you find that "the boss has gone to the City for the afternoon." No, they can't be reached by phone. Maybe by loudspeaker?

POLICE OFFICER Earl Christensen got a lucky break this week. His day off fell on Wednesday, and he took off for Candlestick Park. Too anxious to get inside, he forgot where he parked his car. After the game he spent an hour in the shivering dark, until all the cars thinned out and he finally found it.

He was too proud to go to police for help.

BACK IN THE courthouse, young deputies of the D.A.'s office had a rough week. Roy and Harry, caught parked in the wrong slot on the courthouse lot, got tickets from the sheriff. They each forfeited $1 bail in traffic court.

A third deputy Bruce, worked all day prosecuting speeders, and those driving with suspended or expired licenses. At the end of a long day, he pulls out his wallet and happens to check his own driver's license. It expired last January.

MOST DRIVERS fight and plead for the right to keep their driver's licenses. But one salesman appeared before Judge Leonard A. Thomas the other day with a new twist. He said:

"After careful consideration, I feel it unwise to drive any more," and he voluntarily turned in his license.

Anything can happen on a balmy afternoon.

A MAN WALKED in to see Recreation Director Joe Rodota at Albert Field a couple days ago, looking for one of the summer jobs.

"May I see Mr. Park," he asked politely. Supervisor Art Morris identified himself and suggested he see Mr. Rodota. "No," said the gent, "I was specifically told to report to Albert Park for an interview. I'd like to see Mr. Park."

It took several minutes to assure him that he was at Albert Park, but the man to see is Mr. Rodota or Mr. Morris.

EVEN THE mailman gets fancy ideas these days.

Did you ever notice the postman riding a small scooter up and down the sidewalks of a nearby subdivision, happily popping mail into boxes?

Riding in the street would have meant too long a reach.

IF YOU believe in horoscopes, here's a small tip.

The Santa Rosa carpenter who held up a Cotati bank on Good Friday, apparently used the horoscope book. Marin officers found one in his car. They turned to the appropriate page which said in effect:

Today is a good day financially if you work it right.

The result of his day's work: He lost his freedom, his false teeth, and $14,396.01 stuffed in a paper bag. The extra penny was apparently what he had before he went to the bank.

RICHARD ARGENTO, 12, of Fairfax is a real sport fisherman. He caught a two-pound bass at Smith Lake, brought it home and put it in the water in the kitchen sink.

When mother said it would have to be killed, Richard said, "Oh no, you can't do that." Mama had to drive him back at night to the lake, where Richard waded into the mud to give the bass an easy launching back into the pond.

BEFORE YOU GO to sleep, don't forget to turn your clock one hour ahead. Or you may miss church tomorrow.

Gen. De Gaulle Is More Than Just A Great Leader; He Is A Genius

WASHINGTON — Having been one of his American admirers since June of 1940, when he raised his flag in Britain and summoned the French to go on with the war, I cannot pretend to write dispassionately about Gen. de Gaulle.

But now that he is back in Washington in triumph, I have been asking myself what is the secret of this famous man?

The secret is that he is more than a great man. He is a great man in the sense that he has taken a great part in historic events. But there were other great men in the war days. In addition to being an historic man, he is also, which is rarer than greatness, a genius. This is the special quality which he, and I think only he, shares with Churchill.

HIS GENIUS consists in the capacity to see beneath the surface of events, to see through the obvious and conventional and stereotyped appearance of events to the significant realities, to the obscured facts and forces which will prevail.

This gift, which is more than leadership as such, is second sight into the nature of history. It brings with it the gift of prophesying what is going to happen because to the seeing eye it is already there.

The ability to see truly the significant reality carries with it the ability to convey what his vision brings him. Men like Churchill and de Gaulle do not sign ghost-written books and they do not read ghost-written speeches. For the vision is their own and they alone can communicate it.

THUS, in the bitter days of 1940 when France had fallen and Britain stood alone, it called for a great man, for a brave man, for a resolute and faithful man, to go into exile and from there to organize the French resistance. But it took genius to see how this noble but desperate venture would end, and to see that France, defeated, demoralized and prostrate, remained one of the great powers, to see that in the end she would be — as is now the fact — among the principal shapers of the settlement with Germany.

Thinking of all that has happened in these 20 years, it occurred to me to see whether or not my memory was deceiving me. Was it true, as ever since I have believed, that in the darkest days of the most desperate of modern wars, Gen. de Gaulle had communicated his vision of an enduring and an undefeated France?

I FIND that about three weeks after the fall of France, I had learned enough to be able to write that "in the misfortune of France it should be our fierce pride to be the last to forget the greatness of France. We must wish to be the first to remember . . . that France is indispensible, as indispensible, to the maturity of Western civilization as Hellas was to its birth—and as imperishable."

I learned to say that only from Gen. de Gaulle.

Today is Saturday, April 23, the 114th day of the year, with 252 more in 1960.

The moon is approaching its new phase.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

On this day in history:

In 1879, President-elect and Mrs. George Washington moved into the first presidential mansion at the corner of Franklin and Cherry streets in New York City.

In 1791, James Buchanan, 15th President of the United States, was born in Franklin County, Pa.

In 1792, "La Marseillaise," the French national anthem, was written by Claude Joseph Rouget de Lisle.

In 1898, the government asked for 125,000 volunteers to assist in the war against Spain.

In 1932, the Prince of Wales presided at the opening of the Shakespeare Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon, England.

A thought for today: William Shakespeare, in King Richard III, said: "Talkers are no good doers."

Bucs Close In On Giants As Friend Off To Fast Start

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

This definitely is a new season for Bob Friend, the Pittsburgh Pirates's right-handed ace who wasn't last year.

He put away his second straight complete game victory last night as the Pirates beat the Milwaukee Braves 6-2 and jumped into second place in the National League race.

A year ago Friend lost his first seven and didn't win one until his 11th start. He didn't manage two complete-game victories in a row until his 29th start.

It was the third straight victory and fifth in six games for the Bucs, moving them within a half-game of front-running San Francisco. The Giants took a 10-8 win at Chicago while the St. Louis Cardinals dropped Los Angeles out of a share of first to third place by beating the Dodgers 11-7. Philadelphia whipped Cincinnati 10-7.

In the American League, unbeaten Detroit won its third, breaking a first place tie with Chicago by handing the White Sox their first defeat 6-5. New York beat Baltimore 5-0 as Whitey Ford and Ralph Terry combined for an eight-hit shutout. Kansas City rapped winless Cleveland 4-1, and Boston defeated Washington 5-4 in 11 innings.

Friend, who shut out Cincinnati on four hits Sunday, has allowed only one scoring inning in his last 18. The Braves ended his scoreless string at 11 innings when Billy Bruton tripled, and scored on an infield out, and Hank Aaron followed with his third home run for a 2-2 tie in the third.

The Bucs, who chased Juan Pizarro with two runs in the first, then cracked the tie and hung the defeat on reliever Joey Jay (0-1) in the third when he hit Don Hoak with a pitch and Hal Smith followed with a triple. Pittsburgh scored three more in the fourth, all with two out, on Bob Clemente's two-run homer and Smith's double.

GIANTS EXPLODE

San Francisco walloped five home runs against the Cubs, but it was Willie Mays' double in a two-run eighth that clinched it for the Giants. Jim Davenport walloped two homers for the Giants. Willie McCovey, ex-Cub Dale Long, who got off a three-run shot as a pinch-hitter and Ed Bressoud hit the others.

Sam Jones gave up a pair of Cub homers, by Frank Thomas and George Altman. Billy Loes (2-0) won it in relief with a save by Johnny Antonelli. Don Elston (1-2) lost it.

The Cards scored five in the first, three on Stan Musial's double, against loser Sandy Koufax (0-1). But it was Daryl Spencer's two-run double off reliever Roger Craig in the fourth that won it. Spencer also homered for the Cards, who had 15 hits and nine walks. John Roseboro, Gil Hodges and Wally Moon hit home runs among the Dodgers' 14 hits. Marshall Bridges won it in relief, but needed Lindy McDaniel's help in the eighth.

Rob Roberts needed Ruben Gomez' relief after giving up home runs by Frank Robinson and Eddie Kasko, but won his first for the Phils. Jim Coker's two-run triple in the fifth put it away. Roy McMillan also homered for the Reds. It was his fourth—tops in the majors.

Rod-Gun Club To Discuss Bay Closure

President Peter Bertoni has called a special meeting of the Marin Rod and Gun Club Monday night to discuss the proposed closure of valuable recreational waters near Hamilton Air Force Base.

The meeting will be held at the MRGC clubhouse at Point San Quentin starting at 7:30 o'clock.

The local sportsmen's club is protesting a request by Hamilton Air Force Base to close a large area of fishing, boating and duck hunting area immediately behind its practice rifle range. Sportsmen using the area, the Air Force has explained, are in danger of being hit by bullets from the range.

Bertoni said Monday night's special meeting has been called to sound out the MRGC members and other interested parties on their reaction to the Air Force's proposals. The general public is invited.

Bertoni said the MRGC board of direcotrs has been trying to arrange a compromise suitable to all concerned.

Tam Rallies To Edge Drake; Bulldogs, Giants Also Win

Tamalpais Indians, Redwood Giants and San Rafael Bulldogs got off to a fast start yesterday with victories in the opening of the Marin County Athletic League baseball schedule.

Tam rallied for three runs in the seventh inning to edge Drake, 7-5; Redwood capitalized on errors and the three-hit pitching of Rich Brear to down Novato, 4-1; and San Rafael, with Mike Osborne driving across three runs, upset Marin Catholic, 6-4.

Action resumes next Tuesday afternoon, 4 o'clock, with Tam at Redwood, Marin Catholic at Novato and Drake at San Rafael.

The Tamites, the MCAL tournament champions, had defeat staring at them going into the last inning, but they rose to the occasion with a three-run outburst. A pair of walks, a run scoring single by John Marchini and a perfect squeeze bunt by Lou Piver featured the uprising. Ed Collins and Dave Broome each collected three blows to lead the way. Russ Adams was winning pitcher in relief of freshman starter Fred Mack.

At Redwood, while Brear was striking out 10 batsmen, the Giants capitalized on four Novato errors to score all their runs via the unearned route.

The lone Hornet run came in the first inning when Corriea doubled home Manzoni who had walked. After that Brear was unbeatable.

Meanwhile, the leaky Hornet defense betrayed the beautiful hurling of Jud Bird who yielded only two hits, although he got himself in trouble by walking four Giants. One of Redwood's hits was a smashing double by Mike Walsh.

San Rafael's bats exploded for triples by Osborne and Mike Cicero and a double by Rich Curry in upsetting Marin. Osborne had three runs batted in. He and Curry each collected two hits.

Five Marin Catholic errors ruined the Wildcats. Their best blows were a triple by Ron Blum and a double by Chuck Reindollar.

Edwards Hurt, But Tam Tops S.R. Trackmen

Coach Glidden Benefield's Tamalpais Indians lost their Jack of all trades, Ray Edwards, possibly for the rest of the season, but even without him they overpowered previously undefeated San Rafael yesterday 74-38, in the Marin County Athletic League's feature dual track and field meet.

Edwards suffered a badly sprained ankle in a training accident when he cut sharply during a 100-yard dash to avoid a collision with another athlete. Benefield said Edwards may be able to compete in the MCAL finals May 14, "but I doubt if he'll regain his top form."

Edwards is a potential triple winner, but even without his 15 points the Tamites downed San Rafael with surprising ease. Bob Hector and Russ Cook each won two events and Pat Morgan turned in a nifty 10.1-second 100-yard dash to feature the Indian attack.

San Rafael's best performance was a 141-foot, 8-inch discuss heave by Big Kent Francisco, by far the longest toss of the MCAL season.

Tam also won Class B by an 83-30 margin and Class C by 51-24 to remain the only school undefeated in all three divisions.

Johnny Harris was a triple winner in Tam's Class B victory.

Elsewhere yesterday Drake swept all three divisions from Novato, 68-45 in varsity, 71-33 in Class B and 41½-35½ in Class C and the Marin Catholic-Redwood meet at Corte Madera was postponed when a heavy downpour sent the athletes scurrying for cover. The meet will be continued next Wednesday.

Dennis Bailey won both hurdles, Bill Collins won the 100 and shot and Ted Cain copped the 220 and broad jump to spark Drake's varsity. Novato's Joe McNern turned in a nifty 52.5 clocking in the 440.

Seek Rematch For Matthews, Vaillant After TV Draw

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Lightweights Len Matthews and Douglas Vaillant battled to a sizzling draw in 10 rounds last night and their managers were talking of a re-match before the crowd had cleared the auditorium.

"I thought he won the fight and I'm willing to meet him again any time, any place, even in his home town of Philadelphia," said Bernard Barker, the manager of Vaillant, who comes from Cuba.

Matthews' manager, Tony Graziano, said:

"I thought Matthews won on effective punching. He was the aggressor all the way. We're willing to fight him again, any time."

Matthews, who ranks fourth among the lightweights, was favored in the nationally televised fight, but the Cuban smothered him with speed and a variety of punches.

Referee Jimmy Peerless scored it even and so did Judge Gus Jacobson, which meant a draw. Judge Stu Winston voted for Vaillant.

Hammerin' Hank Cocky, Confident; MRGC Meeting May Be Marathon

Coming back from a ball game the other day we stopped in at the training headquarters of middleweight slugger Henry Hank, who meets Rory Calhoun Monday night in a 10-round Cow Palace tilt.

Our visit was prompted partly by our interest in Monday's fight, but mostly to take a gander at this Detroit "Brown Bomber" who has impressed us as the best looking middleweight to come along the pike in some time.

You may remember Hammerin' Hank is the man who handed San Anselmo light-heavyweight Sixto Rodriquez his first kayo loss in a national television bout earlier this year. He also holds kayo victories over another ranked 175-pounder, Jesse Bowdry.

Hank has the reputation for being quite cocky, so that was our first question. "It all depends who is listening," said the muscular Detroiter. "Those that know me say it's confidence; those that don't, call it cockiness. I say I'm confident, not cocky."

Q. Are you capable of knocking out an opponent with a single punch?

A. Yes, very definitely.

Q. Which punch?

A. Anyone I hit him with.

Q. How many foes have you flattened with a single blow?

A. Nearly everyone of my knockouts were with one punch. It sure helped me in the Willie Vaughn fight. He beat me for nine rounds — I mean he won the first nine rounds — then I caught him with a punch and knocked him out in the 10th."

Q. Until 1958 you were just a so-so fighter. Then you suddenly became a big sensation. What caused the change?

A. I never had the opportunity to get in shape before. We had a tough time getting matches. No one wanted any part of me. We used to accept matches on a day or two notice. After getting so many last minute fights we decided to get into shape and stay there. We were always ready.

Q. What type of an opponent do you prefer, slugger or boxer?

A. It doesn't make any difference. I'm not a one-way fighter. If they slug, I'll slug; if they want to box, I'll box with them. I adapt as the fight goes along and always try to trap my opponent into making a mistake. All they need to make is one mistake and they are through.

Q. Would you like a shot at Champion Gene Fullmer?

A. Of Course. After I beat Calhoun we'll go after Fullmer.

Q. What about Calhoun? Do you think he can hit hard enough to hurt you or knock your out?

A. I don't intend to find out if I can take his punch. I'm going to find out if he can take one.

Period. End of interview. Cocky? Confident? Hank's a mixture of both.

MARIN ROD and Gun Club will hold what could become the longest meeting in history. Monday night when it hashes over the Air Force's proposal to close a nice piece of recreational area off the Hamilton Field shore.

MRGC President, in a letter to the membership, said, "Each member will be alloted three minutes to express his views and thoughts."

Let's see, now. The MRGC has 2,000 members. If each one attends the meeting and expresses his views, it will require 6,000 minutes of yakking. That adds up to 100 hours—or more than four days.

Bring your own lunch.

FORMER NOVATO High School sensation Jack Sparrow appears to be top candidate for College of Pacific's first string quarterback job next football season.

That's the word from Stockton today in the spring training digest. It reads: "The quarterback situation looks improved with three lettermen back from last season. Starter Bob Vander Wall returns along with Bob Gatiss who threw for 328 yards against Washington State last year, but the bet for the starting call is sophomore Jack Sparrow who quarterbacked the frosh to a 5-1 season last year. Sparrow at 6-4, 190 throws the ball well and looks to be an exceptional runner."

Another top Marin County product with the COP varsity is senior guard Willie Hector, a Tam grad. He has the starting left guard job "cinched."

GARY BARTOLOTTI, catcher for the Marin Catholic Wildcats, must have developed an inferior complex last night in a game against San Rafael. Gary was hit three (3) times by pitched balls.

NOTICEABLY missing from the first seven games at Candlestick: A good old-fashioned rhubarb with the umps. Either the men in blue were perfect, or the players were in a serene mood with their beautiful surroundings. But just wait!

Nixon Predicts Soviet Move For Disarm Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice President Richard M Nixon predicted today that Russia will agree to effective peace and disarmament because Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev does not want a war that would destroy communist economic gains.

"The hard facts of international life are on the side of peace and disarmament," Nixon told the American Society of Newspaper Editors

He saw next month's summit meeting in Paris as possibly the first of a series which could lead to world peace.

And, he said, "We can rightly approach the summit with full confidence that the spokesmen of the free world, rather than Mr. Khrushchev, represent the tide of history."

Nixon gave this appraisal of the summit: "I believe that we can look to this conference and to the future not with starry-eyed complacency but with justifiable confidence that responsible world leaders will slowly but inevitably develop more effective methods for settling differences between nations without war."

In assaying Khrushchev's frame of mind, Nixon, who visited the Soviet Union last year, said:

"On the basis of my conversations with him, I am convinced that he is proud of what communism has done in the Soviet Union. He would prefer not to risk destruction of that progress."

and Asia. He said this is vital to world peace.

De Gaulle has been actively promoting a project for Soviet-Western cooperation in economic aid to underdeveloped countries and is expected to raise it at the summit Eisenhower is cold to the scheme.

"This is the fundamental and great problem," de Gaulle said. "The great problem is to bring two billion men out of poverty and in the direction of economic progress."

De Gaulle said it is essential that all the countries—include the United States and Russia—"should agree at least on a start on this project."

As possible starting projects he mentioned development of the Nile Valley in the Middle East and a fight against tuberculosis in Asia.

Quiz Still Due In Death Of Executive

PASADENA (UPI) — Police stationed at St. Luke's Hospital today waited for Mrs. Martha Taft, 30, to regain consciousness so she could be questioned about the hammer slaying of her husband, William Taft, 38, a missile company executive and distant relative of President Taft.

Hospital officials said she was expected to recover from the effects of razor-slashed wrists and about 50 tranquilizer pills she allegedly swallowed after the slaying Thursday in the couple's fashionable home here.

Police delayed seeking a murder complaint pending her return to consciousness, but a booking sheet holding her for investigation of murder was made out.

Before slashing her wrists, Mrs. Taft penned a six-page suicide letter in which she admitted the slaying, described as the climax of violent quarrels over the wife's fidelity.

West Berlin Strenghtens Patrols Against Communists

BERLIN (UPI) — West Berlin city authorities dispatched strengthened police patrols to western stations of the Berlin elevated railway today under orders to repel vigorously any further Communist attempt to arrest East German refugees at these stations.

The reinforcements were ordered out after the West Berlin city government flatly rejected a new Communist claim to jurisdiction over the western stations of the Berlin elevated railway.

The East German Communists warned that the Western stand could have "dangerous results." It meant that East-West police clashes could take place at the Western stations.

To underline western determination to fight Communist encroachments, the city prosecutor ordered the immediate trial of three eastern transport police who were overpowered and arrested at a U.S. sector "el" station yesterday.

The three policemen were charged with carrying out police controls without proper organization.

West Berlin authorities acted quickly after the East German Communists revived an old claim to sovereignty over the western stations on the elevated railway which post-war agreements allow them to run.

The Communists dusted off this claim in an effort to halt the greatest refugee exodus from the Soviet zone since East Germans attempted to overthrow the Communist government in June, 1953.

Nothing Wrong In Lively Play Between Mother And Small Son

P.C. "My conscience bothers me because I enjoy roughhousing with my son. He is 5 and an only child. He can't wrestle with his daddy because he is overseas. Is it wrong for a mother to play this way with her boy?"

Reply. Not if you're agile enough to take it. Many little boys express their love vigorously. Have fun!

C.K. "Our girl is a senior in college. When she comes home for vacations she goes out with her old gang and stays out late. They go to a double feature movie, then bowling and on to a drive-in for food. They get home around 3 a.m. They are good, responsible youngsters. Do other kids stay out late these days?"

Reply .Many of them do. Formerly, extremely late nights usually were a sign of trouble. Now they may not be. If she's a good girl, don't worry. She is an adult now. She must make her own decisions.

T.M. "Our boy is in second grade. His teacher is also a credential psychologist. She said she was worried because our son is so moody. She gave him a personality inventory test. The teacher found his anxiety was related to me. He thinks I don't love him. Her first suggestion was that always make peace with him before he goes to sleep at night. His worst moodiness follows evenings when I've punished him and sent him to bed without a hug and a kiss. This puzzles me. I love him dearly. Could she be right about his feelings?"

Reply. She might well be. There are tests which give accurate pictures of children's feelings toward their parents. Youngsters who are still in the doghouse at bedtime may draw some harmful conclusions. Reconciliation after punishment is very important. Try to follow her suggestions.

Thirty-five patrols from the Southern District arrived at Fort Cronkhite at 9 a.m. today to start a weekend jubilee camporee. The scouts will be tested on fire building, measurement, compass reading, map reading, first aid and rope lashing.

U.S. Army missilemen demonstrated a NIKE Hercules air defense mission for their guests this afternoon and tonight officials and business leaders from southern Marin towns will be special guests at a campfire at the Fort Cronkhite Lagoon.

Scouts from San Rafael, Novato and Potrero Meadows in the Miwok District of the Marin Council received instruction today on the slopes of Mt. Tamalpais in survival training from chairman Bruce Barron of Marinwood.

Burt Stutz of Marinwood will conduct a campfire program today at 7 p.m.

Members of Novato Explorer Post 56 were to have taken a trip this morning in a C119 Flying Boxcar of the 312th Reserve Troop Carrier Squadron at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Entries Received For Reed Schools Arts Festival

More than 100 entries have been received for the Reed Union School District all-arts festival to be held April 30, at 2 p.m. in the Bel Aire School.

Mrs. Seymour Whitelaw, chairman of the district parent-teachers' club event, said prose and poetry, as well as arts and crafts from first through 8th grade students will be exhibited.

The school orchestra and girls' chorus will perform. Seventh and 8th grade students will read the prose and poetry.

Dads Club Checks School Lunches

Fifty fathers of girls of the Larkspur-Corte Madera School District now have first-taste knowledge of the "frozen food luncheon" their daughters eat every school day.

With their daughters, members of the Dads' Club attended a fathers' and daughters' dinner at the Henry C. Hall School in Larkspur Monday night. All the daughters attend the fourth, fifth or sixth grades.

Daughters later square-danced with their fathers, and a magician entertained.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

NOW THEY CAN SLAM THE DOOR

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — They're going to have to find another doorstop for one of the classrooms at Highland Springs Elementary School.

A Civil War cannonball that had been serving the purpose, after lying around the school for two years, was turned over to police Friday.

An observant teacher noticed it still had a fuse.

Quentin Inmate Cuts His Wrists

A 19-year-old San Quentin inmate, transferred April 4 from Deuel Vocational Institution at Tracy, slashed his wrists with a razor blade Thursday in his cell, prison officials reported.

The prisoner, Donald L. Blackmore, was reported in good condition at the prison hospital.

He was transferred from Deuel to San Quentin as an "incorrigible," said Associate Warden Walter D. Achuff.

Mill Valleyan Named To Phi Beta Kappa

Wesley Hildreth of Mill Valley has been elected to Phi Beta Kappa as a junior at Harvard University. Hildreth, former student body president of Tamalpais High School, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hildreth of 179 Tamalpais avenue.

He is one of eight juniors tapped for membership in the international scholastic fraternity.

NEVER MIND THE PRAISE, GET THE KEY

PULGA, Calif. (AP) — Butte County sheriff's deputies congratulated Elmer Johnson for risking his life to pull a crippled man from a burning mountain cabin. They praised him all the way to the jail.

Johnson had just rescued McKinley Johnson (no relation) from the cabin fire that burned McKinley's 90-year-old father, Oscar, to death.

Elmer was booked for failure to answer a four-year-old traffic warrant. He remained in jail because he couldn't post $110 bail.

Hayden's Ex-Wife To Visit Children In San Francisco

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The long court fight between actor Sterling Hayden and his ex-wife, Betty Ann DeNoon over custody and visiting rights to their four children has been ordered transferred to San Francisco.

Superior Judge Aubrey N. Irwin made the order following an agreement between attorneys representing the divorced couple.

The agreement vacated a temporary visitation order issued last December. It required Hayden to deliver the children here every four weeks to spend the weekend with their mother.

Hayden now lives in Belvedere. He protested that the long trip interrupted schooling of some of the youngsters and otherwise interfered with their normal life.

The agreement gives Mrs. Hayden the right to visit the children weekends "in the San Francisco Bay area" at Hayden's expense every eight weeks. The first visit is to be May 14.

It was ordered further that any more legal proceedings on custody and visitation will be heard in the San Francisco courts.

Death Date Set For S.F. Killer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Richard T. Cooper, 33, who confessed to a San Francisco murder for which another man already had been convicted, was sentenced today to be executed July 8 at San Quentin Prison.

Cooper was sentenced for the 1958 strangling of Elvira Hay. Her common-law husband, John Fry, was convicted of killing her and was sentenced to San Quentin for manslaughter. Fry was pardoned after Cooper confessed.

Cooper's automatic appeal to the State Supreme Court was rejected today and Superior Judge Gerald Levin set the death date.

Brown Calls Meet On Gas Rate Hike

SACRAMENTO (AP)—Gov. Edmund G. Brown yesterday announced plans for a conference to see what, if anything, can be done about a 63 million-dollar boost in California gas rates since Jan. 1, 1958.

Brown said he wants to find out the reasons for the increase by the El Paso Gas Co. and for what he termed the failure of the Federal Power Commission to hold a hearing on the raise in prices.

The conference will be held here sometime in June. Representatives of the FPC, private and public utilities, natural gas companies and the state Public Utilities Commission will be invited.

Novato Chamber Mails Brochures

As of today, there is no excuse for anyone who can read to become lost in Novato.

Mailed yesterday to all members of the Novato Chamber of Commerce were the latest maps of the city and brochures describing Marin County's newest incorporated community, as well as a listing of all Novato chamber members.

There will be a 10-cent charge for the maps to all nonmembers of the chamber, but those in good standing may order additional copies at no extra charge, announced Robert F. Merritt, chamber secretary-manager.

Six Students Arrested In Fake Holdup

SANTA ROSA (UPI) — Five young men and a girl entered a branch bank and pulled out seven guns.

The youths kept their guns on 15 bank customers.

The girl, puffing on a long cigarette holder handed a note to a teller with a dollar bill attached. The note read:

"This is a stickup. Give us change."

The fake bank robbers, all students at Santa Rosa Junior College, were held in county jail today on $5,000 bail. They will be arraigned in Federal Court Monday on real bank robbery charges.

They were identified as Frank M. Palmeire, 20, Santa Rosa; Alan G. Sutter, 21, San Francisco; Robert H. Lindsten, 18, Oakland; John R. Cabl, 19, Redwood City; Frank Louis Priore, 21, Los Gatos, and Patricia R. Marcucci, 19, of Healdsburg.

When they entered the branch office of the Bank of America they were carrying a plastic sub-machine gun, two pellet rifles and four cap pistols.

Just as Miss Marcucci was passing their note to the teller, another bank employee started screaming. Someone else hit the burglar alarm and soon police came swarming in.

The students told police they planned the stunt after a "character day" celebration at the college.

Bank manager Scott O'Leary, whose bank has been held up by real robbers twice in the past year, said "as far as humor is concerned, the reaction of the bank employees was very poor."

An FBI spokesman said the Federal bank robbery charge under which the six were held was the only one that could be used. Federal law does not recognize attempted bank robbery as a lesser charge, he said.

Boats Collect Bay Debris

Floating debris was being collected from bay waters off Marin shores today at the start of a two-day sweep to reduce menace to small craft.

There were two Marin County collection stations at Sausalito and Pt. San Quentin, with a dozen others serving the overall clean-up which extended all the way from the Golden Gate to Stockton and Sacramento.

Final disposition of the debris was at the Army engineers' big incinerator at Sausalito to which collections from all 14 deposit centers were trucked.

All private boats in the bay area had been invited by Col. John S. Hartnett, San Francisco district army engineer, to join in the sweep designed to make bay waters safer at the start of the small craft season. The ban on open burning was said to have greatly increased the debris menace.

Marin Ranks Sixth In Building Permits

Marin County was in sixth place in March in value of building permits issued among the nine Bay Area counties.

Marin building permits totaled $4,572,000, compared to $1,903,000 worth of permits issued in February. Santa Clara County was the top building spot in March with $21,853,000 worth of permits. Low county was Napa, $642,000.

Of the $4,572,000 total in permits for Marin, $3,286,000 was for 193 dwelling units. The total for March, 1959, was 276 dwelling permits for a total of $3,513,000.

San Rafael, with $1,851,000 worth of construction, and Mill Valley, $256,000 were top county builders. Low city was Ross, $60,000.

Sergeant Fined

S/Sgt. Elbert A. Blodgett, 26, of 78th Organization Maintenance Squadron, Hamilton Air Force Base, must pay $150 fine and remain on nine months probation for his first drunken driving offense.

Judge Leonard A. Thomas of Marin Municipal Court sentenced Blodgett yesterday for driving while intoxicated on Highway 101 last Sunday. During probation, he may drive only for military duty.

Teacher To Be Army Instructor

Robert M. Brooks, industrial arts instructor at Sir Francis Drake High School, has been accepted by the Army dependent schools to teach in Europe next year.

Germany will probably be the destination, Brooks said, but the exact location will not be determined until later this year.

Charles M. Doll, another Drake industrial arts instructor, taught last year in Germany under the same program.

Brooks expects to leave sometime in August. He will be accompanied by his wfie, Genevieve.

Novato Kiwanians 'Adopt' Servicemen

A Hamilton Air Force Base unit, to be selected by base officials, was officially "adopted" this week by the Novato Kiwanis Club.

A proposal for adoption of Air Force units by the city's service clubs and chambers of commerce during Armed Forces Week, was made by Capt. Kenneth H. Kronlund, base project officer.

Under the plan, members of the adopted unit will attend the regular weekly meeting of their parent club. Club members will visit the base to observe the unit at work and at leisure.

Paradise Property Owners Set Meet

Directors of the Paradise Property Owners Assn. have set May 16 at 8 p.m. in the Bel Aire School multi-purpose room for their annual meeting to elect officers.

Dr. Fennimore Cady was appointed chairman of the nominating committee. Serving with him are Thomas W. Dorst and Edward J. Haynes.

Directors considered joining the Tiburon Peninsula Coordinating Council but tabled action until they could consider the council's constitution and by-laws, according to chairman A. S. Giesecke.

Tomales School Sets Open House

Tomales High School will hold open house Monday beginning at 7:15 p.m. it was announced today by Miss Annie Rook, teacher.

WIRE NEWS BRIEFS From Everywhere

Tension Grips Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — A group of American residents here planned to guard their homes from possible terrorist attacks as pre-election tension grew in Laos.

U.S. Ambassador Horace Smith ordered all official American personnel to be off the streets from 11 p.m. today until after tomorrow's general election.

Radio Hanoi of Communist North Viet Nam has been charging American interference in the Laotian elections. There were fears here the pro-Communist rebels may take action against Americans during the weekend.

Storm Hits Philippines

MANILA (AP) — An out-of-season tropical storm named Karen cut across the central Philippines and first reports today said at least one person was dead and a score were missing.

Students Demonstrate

TOKYO (AP) — A thousand Japanese students, shouting opposition to the new U.S.-Japanese security treaty, demonstrated in front of the Diet, Japan's Parliament, today.

The protest rally was called by Zengakuren, the radical left-wing students federation, and the League of Communists, which have been disowned as too militant by the Japanese Communist party.

Authorities sent 5,000 police to hold off the students at the request of the heads of both houses of the Diet.

Care Plan Opposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Democratic compromise plan to offer hospitalization or higher cash payments to the aged under the social security program has run into administration opposition.

Health Secretary Arthur S. Flemming rejected the latest Democratic attempt to ram a medical care program through Congress this session. He told a closed session of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday it would mean raising social security taxes by 2.3 to 11 per cent.

Flemming told newsmen that the administration opposes adding even voluntary hospital care to the social security program.

Verwoerd Recovering

JOHANNESBURG (UPI) — Prime Minister Hendrik Verwoerd, shot twice in the head two weeks ago, is now sitting up in a chair and eating semi-solid foods at Pretoria general hospital.

The prime minister is inquiring into state matters and is being informed of "a certain amount" of official business, his secretary, Fred Barnard said. Within a week he is expected to be doing more government work.

New Missile Success

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Air Force is packing a new missile shooting iron today after blasting an Atlas ICBM from a revolutionary horizontal concrete firing hangar.

And the Navy successfully tested yesterday a new method of launching that turns any ocean, lake or stream into a missile launching pad.

The Air Force, after the Atlas test yesterday at nearby Vandenberg Air Force Base, announced the new horizontal firing method is operational or combat ready.

Rebel Chief Caught

MARACAIBO, Venezuela (UPI) —Rebel Gen. Jesus M. Castro de Leon, captured yesterday in southwestern Venezuela, left here under guard last night for an unannounced destination.

General Castro was flown here from San Cristobal, center of his 30-hour revolt, and taken aboard the destroyer General Moran, which sailed at once.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Tiros I weather satellite has failed in an attempt to photograph the moon, but officials say it is providing important information about storms.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said yesterday the Ft. Monmouth, N.J., ground station recently directed the satellite to take a moon picture, but the television transmission was marred by radio static.

The U.S. Weather Bureau announced that Tiros was more successful in providing data about storms.

Lutherans United

MINNEAPOLIS Minn (AP) — The newly unified American Lutheran Church today chartered formal ties with interdenominational Christianity on the world scene—but not on the national scene.

The church planned to affiliate with the World Council of Churches, but not with the National Council of Churches.

Neither of the three merging bodies, the Evangelical Lutheran Church, the American Lutheran Church, and the United Evangelical Lutheran Church have belonged to the National Council in the past. All three groups have been members of the World Council.

Factory Jobs Up

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Manufacturing employment was up last month in the San Francisco and Los Angeles areas, according to the state Department of Employment.

The total of 198,400 workers in the Bay Area was 4,700 above March, 1959. In the Los Angeles metropolitan area, manufacturing employment last month was 777 000—17,100 higher than the previous year.

Ceylon Regime Falls

COLOMBO, Ceylon (AP) — The Ceylon government of Prime Minister Dudley Senanayake fell today and plunged the nation into another political crisis.

Gov. Gen. Sir Oliver Goonetilleke dissolved Parliament and ordered new elections July 20.

Bishop To Conduct Communion Rite At Marin Church

Bishop James A. Pike of the Episcopal Diocese of California will be the celebrant and preacher at a Communion service to be held in St. Stephen's Church, Belvedere, at 11:30 on Wednesday.

The Communion service is being held for women in Marin County in connection with a joint meeting of St. Stephen's Guild and St. Luke's Church Guild of San Francisco.

Assisting Bishop Pike in the celebration will be Rev. Carl N. Tamblyn, rector of St. Luke's Parish, San Francisco, and Rev. E. J. Mohr, rector of St. Stephen's Parish.

Brown Postpones Clemency Hearings

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—Gov. Edmund G. Brown yesterday postponed to May 5 executive clemency hearings for two Los Angeles men scheduled to be executed in San Quentin Prison next month.

The hearings for James Eugene Hooten, 37, and Charles Earl Brubaker, 40, had previously been scheduled for Monday.

Hooten was convicted of fatally wounding Los Angeles Police Officer Thomas Scebbi June 20, 1958. Brubacker was convicted of the 1958 double murder of Mrs. Irene Morey, a Los Angeles divorcee, and her 9-year old son, Craig.

Man Gets Out Of Jail, Goes Right Back

San Rafael machinist William Fletcher Spurgin, 27, who bailed out of jail for $315 Wednesday on a charge of beating a woman, was back in jail yesterday in lieu of $5,250 bail.

When he showed up in court yesterday on the battery complaint, San Rafael police immediately escorted him into jail the second time—this one on felony check charges.

Officer Earl Christensen said Spurgin is suspected of passing a series of bad checks in town, several of them at the Villa Rafael Motel at 1606 Lincoln avenue.

Spurgin gave his address as 805 Fourth street. The first arrest Wednesday morning came on a complaint by Doris Palmer Fall of 845 Fifth avenue. She complained he arrived at her apartment about 3 a.m. Wednesday and proceeded to beat her.

Castro Levels 'Fifth Column' Charge At U.S.

HAVANA (AP)—Cuba's Fidel Castro accused the Eisenhower administration today of trying to set up a "fifth column" in Cuba.

He charged that recent remarks by President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Christian A. Herter were part of a "well prepared and premediated plan" to create an internal front.

In a television speech, Castro declared that statements by Eisenhower and Herter were "all part of a preconceived intent to create a fifth column to encourage a counter-revolutionary struggle against the Cuban government."

He also accused the United States of trying to organize some sort of action against Cuba within the Organization of American States.

Castro rejected Eisenhower's charge that he betrayed the Cuban revolution.

"If we had done that," he said, "the American president would have called us loyal friends."

In a recent letter to the Chilean Students Federation, Eisenhower warned against communism and said democratic ideas of the Cuban revolution were being betrayed. The Chilean students replied that they felt a true revolutionary process is developing in Cuba.

Castro pointed to actions by his government, some of which have hurt American investments here. If they had not been carried out, he declared, "that would have been a betrayal of the Cuban revolution and its people."

"If we had not done this, Eisenhower would have called up friends of democracy and might have given us the same embrace he gave Francisco Franco of Spain."

New Coin Laundry Open In Hub City

Marin County's first "Speed Wash" coin-operated laundry unit has just opened in San Anselmo at 1612 Sir Francis Drake boulevard under the name of San Anselmo Speed Wash.

A second is projected for Novato, to open in late spring or early summer. Both will be operated by a California corporation, M. & H. Coin-Operated Laundries, Inc., which has opened more than 60 throughout northern California, while nationwide the operation includes between 4,000 and 5,000 units.

With 20 washers and six dryers, operating 24 hours every day, Speed Wash specializes in an unusually rapid short-cycle operation allowing washing and drying within 30 minutes. There are automatic coin changers and soap venders.

JOHN V. YOUNGBLOOD
New marketing setup

Marinite Picked As Marketing Operation Chief

The marketing organizations of Bastian-Morley Co. and its subsidiary, the H. C. Little Burner Co., of San Rafael, will be integrated under the direction of John V. Youngblood at La Porte, Ind., it was announced today by Harry B. Carbon, president of Bastian-Morley.

He said the move was designed to "put into action the modern marketing concept under which all marketing policies are determined in terms of the desires of the customers."

Youngblood, of 94 Forbes avenue, San Rafael, will move to Indiana to take over the operation. There will be no change in the two organizational field sales structures. Both will expand gas heater, gas fired and electric water heater, boiler and incinerators lines.

Powell Tax Fraud Jury Deadlocked

NEW YORK (AP) — The jury trying Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. for income tax fraud reported yesterday that it was deadlocked and believed its views "could not possibly be changed."

Judge Frederick van Pelt Bryan dismissed the jurors.

Novato Man In Accident Still Missing

Shock due to an automobile accident may be responsible for the continued absence of Robert T. Orband of 2 Diablo court, Novato, his wife said today in reporting that efforts to ascertain his whereabouts since the mishap last Tuesday have been unavailing.

Orband, 29, is a bakery truck driver and salesman for a Vallejo bakery. His truck overturned after it was forced off the road Tuesday afternoon and Mrs. Orband said she fears that a head injury may have left him dazed and unable to coordinate his subsequent actions properly.

A distinguishing feature, according to his wife, is a scar in the middle of the forehead at the line of his hair which is light brown. Eyes are brown rather than hazel as earlier reported, Mrs. Orband said.

Corte Madera To Delay Job Test

An examination for superintendent of public works for the Town of Corte Madera has been postponed from April 30 to May 7 because of a lack of applicants, Town Manager Arthur H. Brandow reported.

Brandow on Monday night will ask the town council to increase the salary range for the position. If this is done, he plans to readvertise for applicants.

The job now pays $426 and $518 per month.

One applicant has filed to date, and one town employee will be a candidate for promotion to the position. He is George Paraspolo, who is now acting superintendent of public works and holds the permanent post of town gardener.

Applicants must be between 25 and 50, be high school graduates or the certified equivalent, and have three years of experience in heavy construction or public works.

Today Believed To Be Shakespeare's Birthday

By U. P. International

STRATFORD UPON AVON, England (UPI)—The records have long since disappeared and nobody can say for sure, but it seems probable that today is the 396th birthday of William Shakespeare.

The celebration lasts all day. Shakespeare has become Stratford's major industry. What beer is to Milwaukee, steel to Pittsburgh and automobiles to Detroit—so is the Bard of Avon to Stratford. The flags of the nations are unfurled in the central streets, there is a floral procession from his birthplace to his tomb, there are endless speeches and toasts.

Tourist will number into the hundreds of thousands before the summer season ends. The first of them already are crowding into Stratford by rail and automobile exclaiming to each other about the rolling countryside of Warwickshire where the green miracle of the British springtime has occurred again.

Everything here is geard to Shakespeare. His picture peers from store windows, the house where he was born still stands and so does the one in which he died. There is a Shakespeare Museum, a Shakespeare statue and the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre where "The Merchant of Venice" is currently a smash hit.

All this is an old story to the residents of Stratford. Just as a New Yorker seldom looks up at the Empire State Building, so do the local residents rarely go inside Shakespeare's birthplace. They simply take it for granted that somehow one of their own boys turned into the greatest writer of all time.

Was he? If you think he was not, stay away from the Black Swan, the Red Horse Hotel and the White Swan when the ale taps begin to flow and visitors from America, France, Scandinavia, India and almost any country you can name gather to talk about their hero. Advocates of Homer, Dante, and Tolstoy get short shrift in the Stratford pubs.

The other evening a German tourist was saying that if Shakespeare had written nothing but Hamlet, he still would be the world's greatest writer. He soared on to say that Hamlet's speech in Act III, Scene 1 was the greatest passage, prose or poetry, ever put on paper. That is the one in which Shakespeare looks us all in the eye and poses a basic inquiry — "To be or not to be: That is the question"—is life worth living or would it be better to commit suicide?

There was a slight murmur of dissent from a few Macbeth fans, but most of the audience went along with the speaker. All this fuss probably would have amused the home town boy who went up to London at the age of 18, dashed off plays to meet the deadlines of his theater and apparently never worried about his position with posterity.

Shakespeare wanted to do two things—get rich and retire to Stratford—and he did them both.

And he doesn't want to be bothered now, because carved in large letters on his gravestone at the chancel of the Church of the Holy Trinity is this warning:

"Bless be ye man yt spares thes stones
"And curst be he yt moves my bones."

THIS IS ONLY a small part of the Sunnyside Nursery's growing grounds located at the foot of White's Hill near Fairfax—more specifically, it's the northwest corner of the grounds. In their entirety the grounds cover eight acres. And in those acres you can find both familiar and rare plants destined for Marin's fine gardens.

AN UNUSUAL FARM

Here's Where Those Plants Get Their 'Start In Life'

Drive about two miles beyond Fairfax on Sir Francis Drake boulevard, and there, hidden from view by creekside trees, you encounter what is probably the most continuously productive eight acres in all of Marin County.

This is the acreage devoted to growing nursery stock to supply the customers of Sunnyside Nursery in San Anselmo — the largest such "farm" in Marin.

Donald C. Perry started the operation about 12 years ago. And since that time, he estimates, it has produced finished plants at the rate of about 100,000 per year.

This adds up to a total of well over a million.

Most of the "crop" is consumed right here in Marin County. But some does go to other nurseries scattered about the Bay Area.

There is nothing left to chance by Perry and his aides. The soil mixture is prepared to a scientific formula developed at the University of California. And it is carefully treated to eliminate all chance of weed seeds, pests, and diseases.

A regular feeding program is carried out under the supervision of an expert who visits the nursery once a month to check both soil and feeding.

Twice a year the growing grounds are gone over from stem to stern by state and county horticultural inspectors. A clean report results in the granting of the "pinto tag," — a device which permits Sunnyside Nursery to deliver its plants almost anywhere in this state without further inspection.

Plants requiring shade for optimum growth are protected by an acre of lath houses. On the other hand, the sun-lovers get plenty of exposure to their favorite element. It is this careful regard to plant preferences in growing conditions that prepare them for their future places in Marin gardens.

Every garden planting need from potted geraniums to specimen shade trees is groomed at the growing grounds for eventual display at the retail nursery in San Anselmo.

Many a fine plant you now admire in Marin's fine gardens got its start in life in the eight-acre Sunnyside "farm" at the foot of White's Hill.

OWNER DON PERRY looks over some of the plants kept in one of the lath houses which occupy an acre of the grounds. There the shade-loving plants flourish. Photos are by Independent-Journal staff photographer Dick Steinheimer.

The Road To A Successful Garden

Continuous, Loving Care Is A Must

By CLAIRE TILDEN
Landscape architect

Beautiful gardens are not accidents. They're the products of continuous and loving care.

In Marin our gardens are outdoors extensions of the rooms of our houses. As such, the outdoor areas deserve the same meticulous attention as the interiors.

Every day people are moving to the country — people who are new to California. Many are appalled by their undeveloped property. They turn to the landscape architect for assistance.

For a nominal fee he will aid you with a consultation service or draw you a master plan. In either case, he will help plan a garden for your individual needs. Whether or not you expect to do the work yourself, he can save you making many costly mistakes.

HIS CHOICE OF materials is important in that they are suggested to do a specific job. He will endeavor to consider your budget and to plan a maintenance program within the scope of your ability. If you do him justice in the execution of his ideas, he will be around one day to take pictures which he will want to publish.

Perhaps you will rely on a landscape designer or contractor to aid you. He, too, will guide you on costs, suitable materials for construction, and appropriate plantings. He is prepared to execute all of your garden plans, or a section at a time.

Substitutions, especially in plants, can often be most disappointing. Each plant has a personality all its own, and it has been suggested because it can fulfill a definite need.

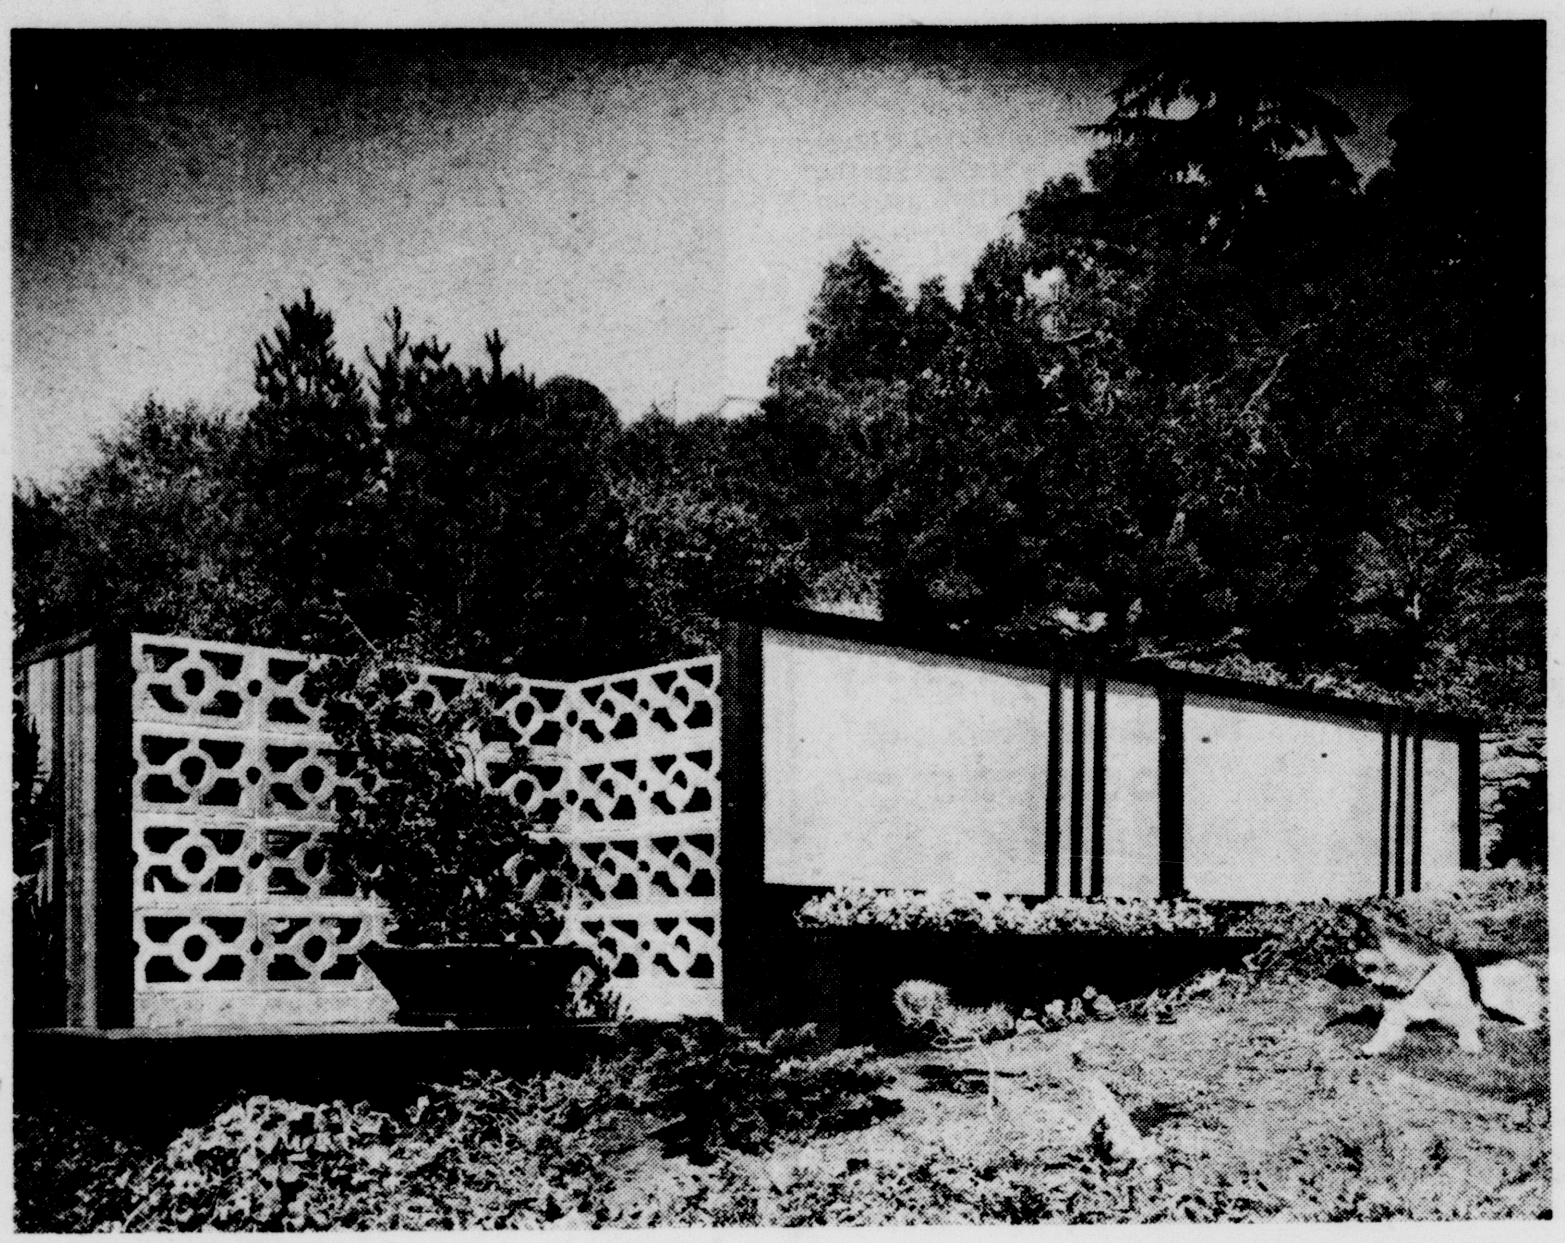
If you do not want the above mentioned services, do not overlook the advantages of consulting with your local nurseryman. He can suggest the proper plants for the varied climatic conditions of Marin. His nursery is stocked with plants that grow here, and he is in business to help you.

Now that we have discussed the planning stages, we can move on to the type and style of garden that will be suitable.

THE CURRENT trend is toward low maintenance gardens which, happily, are most appropriate for homes of contemporary design.

Basic ideas include the use of many forms of paving, ornamental rock or gravel and planting materials of broadleaf evergreens and conifers. Usually the front of the home is devoted to the public, and is elegant in its simplicity. Elsewhere the areas are for living outdoors, and must be functional as well as attractive.

Almost every home in Marin has some form of outdoor sitting area. This part of the garden must represent on opportunity for relaxation and fun. It may be an intimate corner or a spacious area, but it must reflect pleasing design and good taste in its arrangement.



Today the emphasis is upon uncluttered paving, built-in seats, ground covers and flowering evergreen shrubs. Demand is down on fish pools, wishing wells, elaborate masonry barbecues and large beds devoted to the raising of cut flowers. This should not, however, be construed as meaning that smaller concentrations of flowers are "out."

Here are some tips to a better relationship between client and worker:

Your landscape architect, landscape contractor or nurseryman starts you in the right direction. But he can't be responsible for the ensuing maintenance. Learn what will be necessary to sustain your initial investment, and make every effort to fulfill the promise of your new garden. If a problem develops, discuss it pleasantly and give your adviser an opportunity to see if he can help you. Remember that these men are human beings, and they will make some mistakes. They are frantically busy in the spring, and have to depend upon their assist ants to help meet demands.

THE BOSS IS only one man. He cannot be everywhere at once.

The life of the average landscape contractor is not an easy one.

From 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. are his producing hours when he earns his living. After that he goes on appointments, purchases tomorrow's materials, and cleans up his truck and equipment. His evenings are spent estimating, drawing, bookkeeping, paying and sending bills, and making innumerable telephone calls. You can see that his dinner hour is sacred. Try to respect it.

And, as a final tip, never, never call a contractor early in the morning when he has a crew of men and expensive equipment standing idle.

GOLDEN REPLICA OF SHRINE TO HIGHLIGHT GARDEN SHOW

Japan's "Great Buddha" of Kamakura is providing the theme for the Oriental displays of "From Kew to Kyoto," the 1960 California Spring Garden and Home Show opening next Saturday for a nine-day run at Oakland Exposition Building.

Howard Gilkey, show designer, has sculptured a huge golden replica of the famous Dai Butsu shrine for the show, towering 30 feet among nine waterfalls into an orchid-framed lagoon. The central waterfall plunges from a bronze "Lotus Bowl" placed beneath the idol's folded hands.

Framing the Dai Butsu shrine will be a wealth of orchids and other exotic tropical plants.

In contrast will be the "Kew Gardens" landscapings at the opposite end of the Exposition Building arena, with emphasis upon formal rose gardens.

THE SKILLFUL HANDLING of a difficult garden entrance is illustrated here in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Zulch of Sausalito as planned and executed by landscape architect Scott Tilden. Rock planter, shrubs, and pipe railing form a focal point so that plain concrete wall recedes and no longer dominates the area.

Covers That Bloom

A ground cover that blooms can be just the thing to brighten your parkway, or to convert that hard-to-landscape patch of ground into a patch of color.

Out of bloom it is just what every good ground cover should be — an evergreen blanket. In bloom it offer its bonus of color.

We checked a recent list of ground covers which the California Assn. of Nurserymen sent our way. On it, were a bumper crop of flower-bearing plants that fit our needs.

Some are modest in their bloom habit. Close matting Carpet Bugle falls in this class, as does the "wild" strawberry, though the latter's creamy blossoms are accented sharply against the green foliage. We can't argue with modesty, however, since both do a good job of providing both bloom and cover.

If the opposite of modesty —we balk at the word immodesty—is to your liking, you'll find that either the brilliance of Gazania or Ice Plant fills the bill. The bright yellow and/or orange, daisy-like blooms of the former have filled many a parkway in California, opening their faces to the sun each morning and shutting themselves up again at night. Ice Plant, in its most common form, is a ground hugger for bare banks that dazzles from a distance, nearly blinds you close at hand.

The most useful of all blooming ground covers—and most popular, too, come in-between these extremes of modesty. Here is the group that contains such familiar names as Lantana, Periwinkle, Ivy Geranium and Saint Johns Wort. And to them we have to add the new prostrate form of Glossy Abelia, one of the most exciting new flowering ground covers to come our way in a long while.

The new Lantanas show a good variety of exciting colors too, all of them a far cry from the limited choice the family offered some years back.

IN THE PATIO GARDEN of Mr. and Mrs. John Arnt of San Rafael, a two-level shade garden, plastic panels form the screening and provide a dramatic background for stepped planters. Claire and Scott Tilden were the landscape architects. (Photo by Ken Molino)

Those Worries Of Waste Space Aren't Necessary

The futility of weeding waste areas has always been a sore point with gardeners.

But, unless you can ignore the ragged edges you will hoe or pull or poison—or spend time worrying about it if you don't.

Now, as any nurseryman will tell you, there is really no need to worry about waste space in the garden. You have at your disposal the plant material to cover waste areas large or small. And once you've done this your worries are gone. As the planting takes over, weeds diminish and finally disappear or nearly so. They are replaced with plants that please the eye and pose no problem to you.

We can think of one planting of Rock Rose that illustrates the point perfectly. Before its owner planted it, he had a hillside strip of waste space that presented an unsightly backdrop to his garden. Today, the whole is planted to Rock Roses that have completely filled in to discourage weeds and ease the strain on the eye.

You could do the same with Common Rosemary, Lavender or Bush Germander. Santa Cruz Pyracantha, the as-yet-little-known Firethorn, is another example of an eye-catcher that makes an eyesore waste area something worth admiring.

ONE OF THE REASONS the chrysanthemum is so popular with Marin gardeners is that it is a plant that lends itself to training and special effects. Mr. and Mrs. Claude G. Bessellieu of 3815 Redwood highway, San Rafael, demonstrate that here with a "mum" they were training to grow over a "tree" composed of an old umbrella frame. The Bessellieus are extensive and enthusiastic growers of flowers. But "mums" are especially popular with them, and they are active members of the Chrysanthemum Society of Marin.

'Mums' Have Loyal Following In Marin

The chrysanthemum was probably first grown in China.

And in Japan, where many of its varieties were developed, the "mum" became so popular that it was designated the national flower.

But nowhere will you find a climate which is better fitted for mum culture than right here in Marin County. There is but one drawback. Early winter rains are sometimes unkind to late blooms that are exposed.

Pot culture offers a most satisfactory answer to this. The flexibility of location makes it possible to shelter the plants from those early rains.

AND IT ALSO makes it possible to achieve a variety of effects through changes in display and positioning.

In recent years the hybridizers of chrysanthemums have developed many new colors and types of blooms, thus adding to the popularity of this plant in Marin and elsewhere.

The result of this popularity in Marin has been the formation of the Chrysanthemum Society of Marin, an active and devoted group of "mum" enthusiasts who meet regularly on the second Monday of each month at the Bank of San Rafael, Fourth and B streets, San Rafael, at 8 p.m. to discuss their favorite topic.

A regular event sponsored by the society is its annual chrysanthemum show.

The 1960 show—the 12th annual such event—has been scheduled for Oct. 22 and 23 at the bank.

Theme of this year's show will be "Hawaiian Echoes." Theme flowers will be the Paradise and Moon Stone varieties.

THE SHOW IS open to all "mum" growers who wish to exhibit in competition or otherwise. And the public is always invited.

Meetings of the society are open to all gardeners interested in growing "mums." If you would like to join their ranks, here are a few tips that veteran growers are passing on to you on pot culture of their favorite plants:

Pots or containers which average the size of a gallon can work very well. Soil suitable to mum culture can be provided much better than in the open ground.

The Cascade type mum growers have created a very showy and unique effect of a flower covered waterfall. A tree type is now available which can be grown something on the order of the very popular tree rose. Certain types are also being tried as hanging basket specimens.

Outstanding blooms can be obtained from the exhibition type of mum in this area. When grown in pots in the open, many varieties will develop 12-inch blooms. Spiders, incurves and reflex types make up this group.

APRIL AND MAY have proven to be the best months to choose and plant mums in Marin County. The long days and warmer nights permit steady growth for good stems and plant structure. The local nurserymen stock a good variety of new rooted plants for growers during these months.

Many growers propagate by taking new tips about three inches long and rooting them in sand. After good root formation is shown on cutting they are transplanted to small pots for a hardening process or they may be planted direct to the ground or container which will be their home until after blooming.

When plants indicate that they have accepted their new surroundings and act like they are happy, the grower can then begin to form the plant by pinching the tips and allowing several branches to form from the plant. This will allow more blooms per plant but will also cut down the size. To allow only one stem to develop the largest bloom can be obtained. Three productive stems from one plant is more practiced by the home gardener. All lateral growth is kept pinched off if the size of the bloom is important. This way plant food is channeled either one, two or three ways.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS are always hungry. After they are well established in their permanent containers, food along with good watering procedure will give you excellent results. From July until buds begin to show color a faithful fertilizing proceedure should be followed. A good commercial liquid fertilizer should be used at about 10 day intervals. Growers should also be alert to any pests which show up. The sooner you lick them the better your reward for your work.

Soil preparation is very important if the best results are to be obtained from your investment. A mixture which has proven very satisfactory in this area is five parts good soil, three parts of good barnyard and two parts Vita-Peat, leaf mold or peat moss. Some bone meal can be added to the mixture with good results.

DWARF CITRUS— A DELIGHT TO THE GARDENER

Any way you look at it, dwarf citrus is a gardener's delight.

Its colorful fruit—so wonderfully out of proportion to the size of the tree—is an asset in the ornamental garden or the patio. Its blossoms are often tantalizingly fragrant and its clean, glossy foliage is always pleasant. What more could you ask?

Dwarf citrus is adaptable to either ground or container planting, too, which adds to its usefulness in the home garden. In the ground, most varieties will evenutally grow to eight feet high with an equal spread, but they take years to do it. In tubs—and members of the California Assn. of Nurserymen suggest you give considerable thought to this method of growing them—they are much more compact.

GOLDEN GROOM...
Great for Gardens...Lawns too!

GOLDEN GROOM—an exciting new product for gardens fresh from the Douglas fir forests of California. This scientifically ground fir bark, pre-treated with nitrogen, does nature's work for you in your garden in many wonderful ways.

CONDITIONS SOIL—loosens up adobe and clay-like soils—gives added body to sandy soil. Makes digging easy and roots grow like mad.

CUTS WATER BILL—as a top dressing mulch Golden Groom insulates roots and conserves soil moisture. Your garden thrives with less water—less work.

COMBATS WEEDS—2 inches of Golden Groom spread over planting beds, flower garden and plant containers, smothers out weeds.

FORTIFIED WITH NITROGEN

Golden Groom is pre-treated with organic nitrogen to trigger the decomposition of the fir bark.

A Place To Put Those Garden Tools

Then You'll Have Room In Your Garage For Car

If a rising tide of rakes, shovels, hoses, lawnmowers and fertilizer sacks threatens to evict your car from its place in the garage, you can build this 32-square-foot storage house and give all those garden items a spot of their own.

Designed by architect Walter Widmeyer for his own home, this garden house is a combination of practicality, simplicity, and style. And the construction materials don't cost much more than a new power mower — about $125 to $140.

The garden house can be built in the yard, garden, or next to a patio or walkway. If you have a swimming pool, it can double as a dressing room It is a simple construction project, since panels of waterproof, vertically grooved Texture One-Eleven fir plywood function as combination sheathing-siding.

Inside, there is a place to hang garden tools and hose. Wide three-quarter inch fir plywood shelves hold assorted boxes and bottles of fertilizer and spray. One shelf serves as a potting bench. Even the door has narrow shelves for storage of smaller items. There is plenty of room on the floor of the unit for the barbecue brazier, lawn mower, and large bulky articles, such as garden chairs and fertilizer bags.

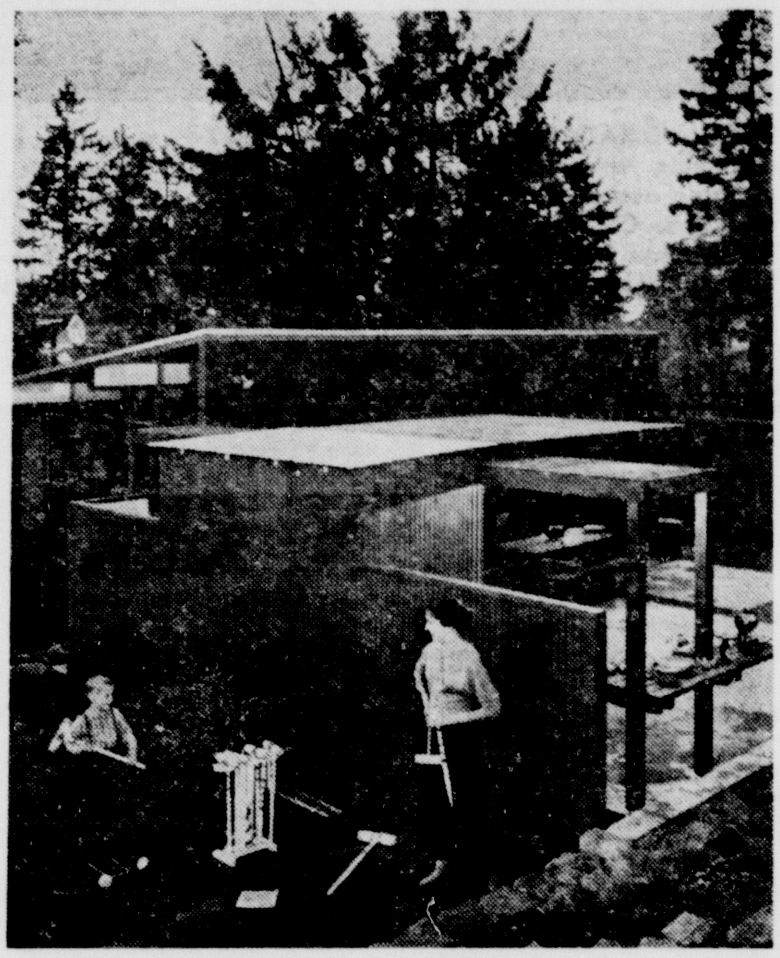
Outside, a handy built-in table provides a work and serving area for patio suppers. Decorative screens flank small plant beds on both ends of the garden house. The screens also make the unit look larger, and insure privacy on the patio.

The roof of the garden house is plastic panels.

A cantilevered lath overhang decorates the front of the unit. This is achieved with half-inch battens nailed to two by six beams. A canvas could be stretched over the lath to provide shelter in case of a quick shower.

For a free construction plan for the Garden House, write Douglas Fir Plywood Assn., Tacoma 2, Wash.

THE HANDY, BUILT-IN table of this garden house provides a work and serving base for patio suppers or lunches. Overhang has lath top and can be covered for rain protection. For details on how to obtain a free construction plan, read the article on this page.



THIS REAR VIEW of the garden house shows how screens assure privacy — and magnify the size of the structure. Note the clean, straight lines.

THERE'S PLENTY of room inside for garden tools and supplies. And that, of course, is the primary function of the structure. Shelves are located at the right of the tools. There's a place for everything, and with everything in its place, the gardener saves valuable time. He also releases valuable garage space for its real purpose . . . housing the family car.

BONSAI, the growth and shaping of miniature trees and plants, is an Oriental art that has become exceedingly popular in the United States. There is a large and enthusiastic following in Marin. They explain that bonsai permits them to combine their enthusiasm for gardening with their artistic talents. The result are tiny gems such as this dwarf tree shown in its holder on a table. TRY THE NEW HYBRID HYDRANGEAS

For a shrub that puts out bigger and better blooms, hydrangeas can't be beat.

If you fail to share such enthusiasm for hydrangeas, the California Assn. of Nurserymen says you're probably gardening with older shrubs. You simply couldn't have encountered some of the newer hybrids with their glorious colors. These voluptuous beauties come in shades of scarlet, pink, red, rose and pure white. And they are always to be found in the lovely shades of blue which attract so much attention.

If pruned heavily in early spring, the large growing types can be maintained at four or five feet. When pruned to the ground, they make a dense, compact three-foot shrub.

Monthly applications of iron sulfate during the blooming period, will intensify the color of the blooms.

Garden In Your Kitchen Can Be A Good Provider

Does the aromatic freshness of garden herbs accent your cooking? Are fresh-picked vegetables featured at your table? If you answer "no" to these, then you need a kitchen garden.

Kitchen gardens are commonplace in France, where their contribution to the good life is legendary. And any serious gourmet—or anyone who aspires to culinary success — should consider planting such a garden in his back yard.

A check with any nurseryman reveals that growing a kitchen garden is as simple as growing annual flowers. Many of your favorite garden herbs and vegetables are available as seedling plants, while those that aren't come easily from seed.

If your space is really limited, the nurseryman suggests you start with a basic few and add their enjoyment to your life. Start your kitchen garden with half a dozen herbs and an equal number of salad greens and other vegetables.

Sage, Thyme, Savory and Rosemary take up little more space than a potted geranium and often not as much. They are available as seedlings. A packet of parsley seed, soaked overnight in tepid water to encourage germination, will come on easily in a few weeks.

Lettuce of several varieties is a good starting point for gardener-chefs. You'll notice the difference in your salads right off. Broccoli, Cauliflower and Celery are also to be found as small plant in nursery flats. And it takes only a few tomato plants to keep the average family happy right through summer.

From seed will come the likes of string beans and summer squashes—two or three hills of squash is enough for most families; four or five will feed your neighbors, too, which isn't a bad idea.

The Natives Are Friendly— Some Thrive On Neglect

You don't need a guide book to tell you that the natives are friendly in California.

But it takes a knowing gardener to tell you just how nice they can be around the home. Native plants, that is.

In the first place, California's natives come in colors, sizes and shapes to satisfy the most exacting landscaper. Secondly, their culture is so easy that what you don't do for them is more important than what you do.

Taking the second point first, hear this warning from the California Assn. of Nurserymen: The association says the nicesty thing you can do for most natives is to neglect them. Being natives, they are not used to year-round watering and don't like it. Plant them now and water to establish the new plants. Then slack off.

There are extremes to which you can go with neglect—or with attention, if you prefer. The eye-catching, yellow - flowered Fremontia, which lends its stiff tree-like form and warm tones to dry hillsides up and down the state is most susceptible to over attention. You can kill it with a minimum of kindness. Ignore it completely and it will thrive.

Tree Anemone, on the other hand, will submit to a considerable amount of summer watering and can be used in close where its attractive blooms and narrow, evergreen foliage blend with other colors in late spring. The flowers are white with prominent yellow stamens and very fragrant.

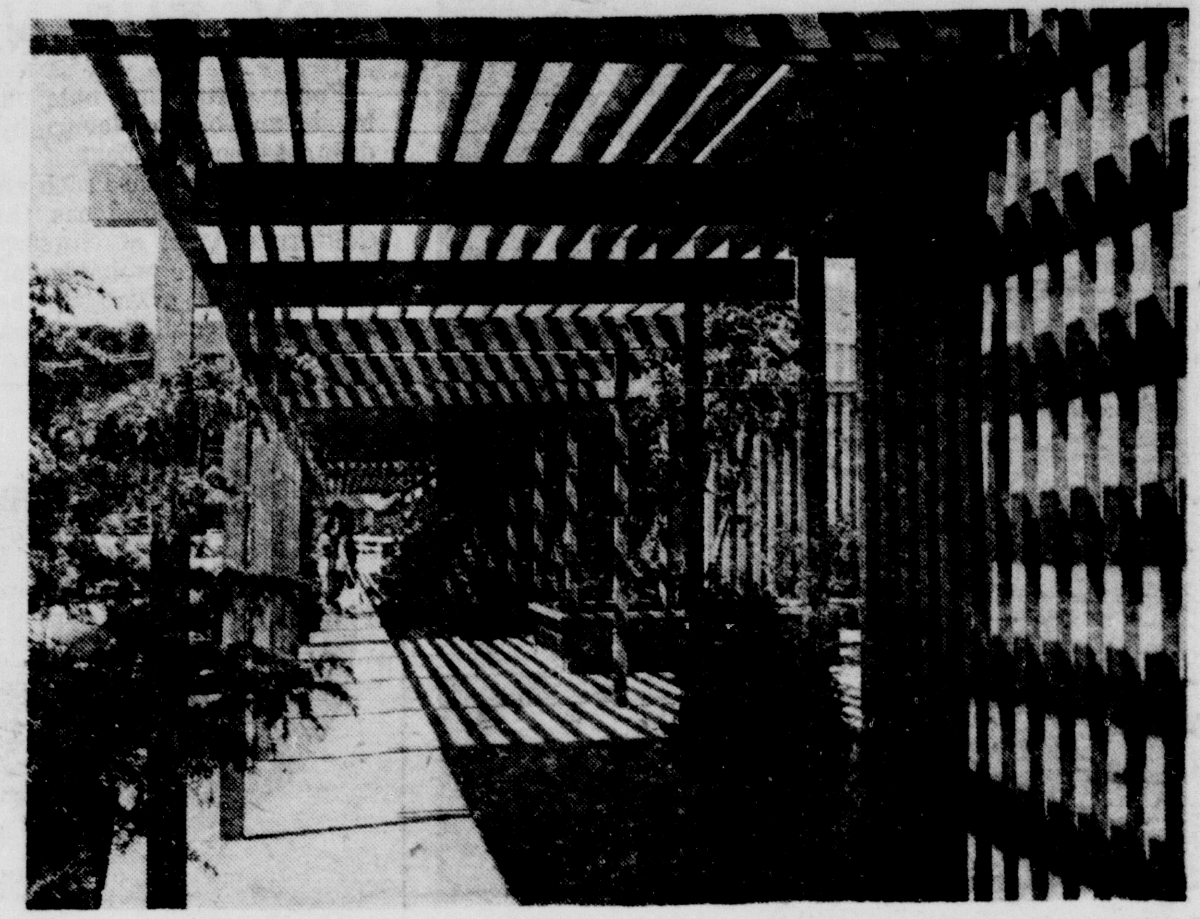
Some 'Unusuals' You Should Think About

If you have an eye for the unusual in the garden, you have plenty to choose from in California. Nurserymen can show you a carload of plants that are both different and desirable.

Just for a starter, have you tried the Shrimp Plant? You can get a lot of mileage out of this near ever-blooming little evergreen. The flower bracts resemble nothing so much as shrimps — lovely bronzed shrimps and shadings of cream that catch the sunlight and reflect it in warm-toned radiance. If you don't enjoy this one in your garden, don't say we didn't tell you about it.

So-called Flowering Maple, not a maple at all, but a dwarfish evergreen shrub, will earn its share of double-takes whenever and wherever it's planted. Give it a semi-shaded spot with adequate water and enjoy its summer-long show of orange-to-red, bell-shaped flowers. It will show some color most of the year in mild winter areas such as Marin. And its maplelike foliage is nice to look at in the off season. Flowering Maple is an old favorite for pot culture with those who know it.

There's nothing unusual about Glossy Abelia, but you'll stop them cold with the new prostrate form of this familiar shrub. Spreading Abelia comes highly recommended for parkways or other problem spots that need an easy cover. Clean, glossy foliage and small white flowers in summer are your reward.



THE NEW EGGER AND SON nurseries building in Mill Valley has a cool and restful, yet modern look. Shaded walkways, landscaped patios and the use of always handsome redwood contribute to its appeal. Professionals in the nursery field hail it as one of the finest on the West Coast.

Nurseryman In Mill Valley Practices What He Preaches

Physician heal thyself.

This old proverb has been carried out to the last landscaped inch by Egger and Son, with nurseries in Kentfield and Mill Valley. Suppliers for some of the most unusual gardens in Marin, owner Jim Egger decided to re-do his own commercial establishment in Mill Valley.

He called in an architect, Michael Wornum of Mill Valley.

He phoned one of Marin's top builders, Ed Burgar.

Three months and some $50,000 later you wouldn't have recognized the old Egger nursery at the corner of Sycamore and La Goma in Mill Valley.

In its place was a modern, functional, and restful redwood building with shaded walkways, landscaped patios, benches, paved parking area and 10,000 square feet of filtered sunlight lath houses.

"And happily the investment has increased business," Egger says. "When the bills for the landscaping, building and what have you came in, we did a double take. But the customers liked it. We certainly find it more convenient. And the black side of the books looks mighty pleasant."

The move to modernization has received enthusiastic praise from architects and professionals in the nursery field as well as an increased tempo at the cash register.

"The future of the nursery industry in Northern California lies in the foresight and planning of establishments of this kind," adds Jack Schneider, president of the California Assn. of Nurserymen.

Egger is active in the field of outdoor living, conservation and planning in Marin, a past director of the Marin Conservation League, and acted as manager of the Marin Art and Garden Fair for four years.

The firm also maintains another large nursery at the corner of Wolfe Grade and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard in Kentfield. A low rambling adobe building is the central motif at that location, serving as a center-piece that ties in three acres of greenhouse, lath-house and planting area.

A case of practicing what you preach.

Down to the last green thumb.

THE INTERIOR of the new Egger and Son nurseries building in Mill Valley is as attractive as the exterior of the structure. A feature is 10,000 square feet of filtered sunlight lath houses. (Independent-Journal photos)

Annuals Are Basic Ingredient In Summer Garden

Planning your summer garden without the use of annuals is like painting a picture without enough colors. You get the picture, but unless your talent runs deep, your picture is usually incomplete.

Annuals are the basic ingredients which the gardener needs to mix his color palette. They provide hues and tones which no other plant material can supply. They brighten the garden picture and gladden the gardener's heart.

Happily, annuals do all this with an ease that belies their worth. To say all things worth having are hard to come by is to overlook annual flowers completely. You need only drop in on a neighborhood nurseryman, pick up a flat or two of seedling plants and head for home with a big head start on the summer garden. Most seedlings planted now will start showing color before summer comes and reach their height by the time the last school bell has rung.

Plan, then, how you will use this easy-to-come-by color. Do you want it in separate beds for cutting? Or will you fit it into a perennial border, along a path, in containers for portability?

The use of annuals for spot color has often been overlooked. Don't be shy about fitting a few plants here and there in pocket-size beds. A few groupings of white stock may be just what you need as a front for that back ground of blue delphinium. Low blue mounds of ageratum or lobelia mak a good foreground for the stately backdrop of perennial phlox. Portulaca and/or verbena in and around a rose garden make for eye-catching combinations of color. And annuals in combination with other annuals give you many opportunities for working up a masterpiece.

You can make a big splash with a bed of asters or zinnias, a border of petunias or marigolds, an edging of alyssum. And if you would be really resorceful, plant containers full of annuals for color on deck or patio—or as the case might be to sink in the ground where another planting is going out of bloom.

THESE BEFORE AND after pictures show a large indoor plant prior to and after receiving a pruning.

Prune Large Indoor Plants Same As Outdoor Shrubs

Large house plants in clay pots normally put on more healthy growth than me be desirable either from the standpoint of good "plantology" or good looks. It is usually wise to prune and shape such plants shortly after each period of rapid growth.

Just as you would encourage fresh new growth by removing some of the largest, oldest stems from an outdoor shrub, so you should thin houseplants that have too many stems rising from the soil. Leave enough of the old growth to give the plant the height you want—yet remove enough so that the root system throws its strength into the remaining new, virile shoots.

The taller a plant grows, the more stem it needs for the sake of beauty. In other words when a plant is low and bushy it matches its clay pot environment best if it does have leaves growing close to the soil—close to the rim of the pot. As it increases in height, however, some of its lower leaves must be removed to retain the proper relationship between pot and plant. With very large specmiens—it may be necessary to remove some of the branches and side-shoots low on the stems.

It is imperative, of course, in the interest of plant health, to remove dead leaves, shoots, and twigs and destroy them. Also, you should remove overthick growth in the "head" or main leafy body of the plant. When you do, light is better able to reach the remaining leaves, and the plant is better off for it.

Some pruning of indoor plants should be done with regular pruning shears, or a heavy pair of kitchen shears, or a very sharp knife. All cuts must be clean, and close to the stem. If it is intended to control the length of a stem or a branch, make the cut a little beyond a bud or a node that points in the direction you want the new growth to take, since a plant will normally branch and continue its growth from this bud or node.

Some plants are characterized by a definite brittleness right at a leaf joint or stem division. When bent sharply at these points they snap. Plants of this sort are best pruned by snap-breaking at these natural locations.

Porous clay pots are fine for propagation of household plants. Injurious salts contained in many soils can escape through the walls of the clay pot, preventing a concentration of salts from souring the soil and killing the plant. Too, you never have to worry about over-watering. Excess moisture will find its way through the pot and evaporate.

Shaping, pruning, thinning, cutting back and proper planting are all beneficial to the plant, and when carefully done will make nearly any plant more beautiful.

Blue Hydrangeas

An acid soil will turn some (but not all) hydrangeas to lovely shades of blue and keep blue ones the way they are. Not all gardeners go for the blue shades, however, and who's to blame them. The several shades of pink in which new hydrangeas come are just what the doctor ordered to chase the blues. Try them and you'll see what we mean.

Some Favorite Plants Of The Landscapers

Do professional landscapers have favorite plants?

The answer is definitely yes, as anyone who reads the home magazines can readily see. Moreover, in California the landscapers show remarkably similiar likes, regardless of what part of the state they work in.

The reason for this is obviously that certain plants have what it takes to create striking effects in modern garden design. And this is not to say they are more prevalent than other plants, which they definitely a r e not. Nurserymen sell far more camellias than, say, New Zealand Flax. But the latter tends to show up in a good many newly planned gardens. It is a designers favorite for accent and striking effect.

If a mind-picture of New Zealand Flax escapes you, thumb through a book or magazine of garden design. You'll know it for its sword-like leaves, flaring up cone-like from the narrow base. You won't turn many pages, either, before you spot a bed or border of Blue Fescue, those mounds of meadow grass that look like so many porcupines in the garden. They are striking when inset in a patio bed.

Golden Bamboo is ever a favorite for its feathery grace in the garden. Landscapers use it in tubs and boxes for deck and patio, as single specimens in a border or in a row to screen off unwanted views or mark a boundary. The unrelated Heavenly Bamboo is always present also. You see it in tubs now and then, but more often in borders where its lacy network of canes and leaves contrasts against a fence or wall.

Tree Ferns would also place high on the list of landscape favorites. So would Twisted Juniper, which stands out so grotesquely a g a i n s t fences and walls. You can spend some hours thumbing through pictures to see how these other l a n d s c a p e favorites might fit your own garden.

HERE ARE THE working plans for the Carousel, garden and patio bench as designed by Marin landscape architects Katy and Paul Steinmetz. It will add much to the entertainment features of your garden. And it is easily built.

THIS IS WHAT your bench will look like when it is completed. It is a sturdy piece of outdoor furniture. And it does not easliy tip over. For some variations of the Carousel, also designed by Katy and Paul Steinmetz, look on the facing page. Perhaps one of those variations will be more suitable to your needs.

HANDSOME AND USEFUL

Build Your Own Garden Bench

In today's gardens and patios, which see so much entertaining, benches are a handsome, useful addition.

They are especially useful if (1) they don't tip over easily, and (2) they are sturdy yet light enough to move around to provide seating where needed.

A broad base insures proper balance and non-tipping, according to Marin landscape architects Katy and Paul Steinmetz, who designed these benches. (The designs are also adaptable for single chairs.)

The landscape architects also give these tips for bench making in the home workshop:

Make the seats low enough to permit addition of colorful cushions or pads. These are easily taken indoors, while the benches themselves may be left out and don't take up valuable storage space.

Use redwood, clear heart select grade, the best dry lumber available.

To insure weatherability, use a good quality stain and galvanized or a l u m i n u m screws and bolts to prevent rust and consequent "bleeding."

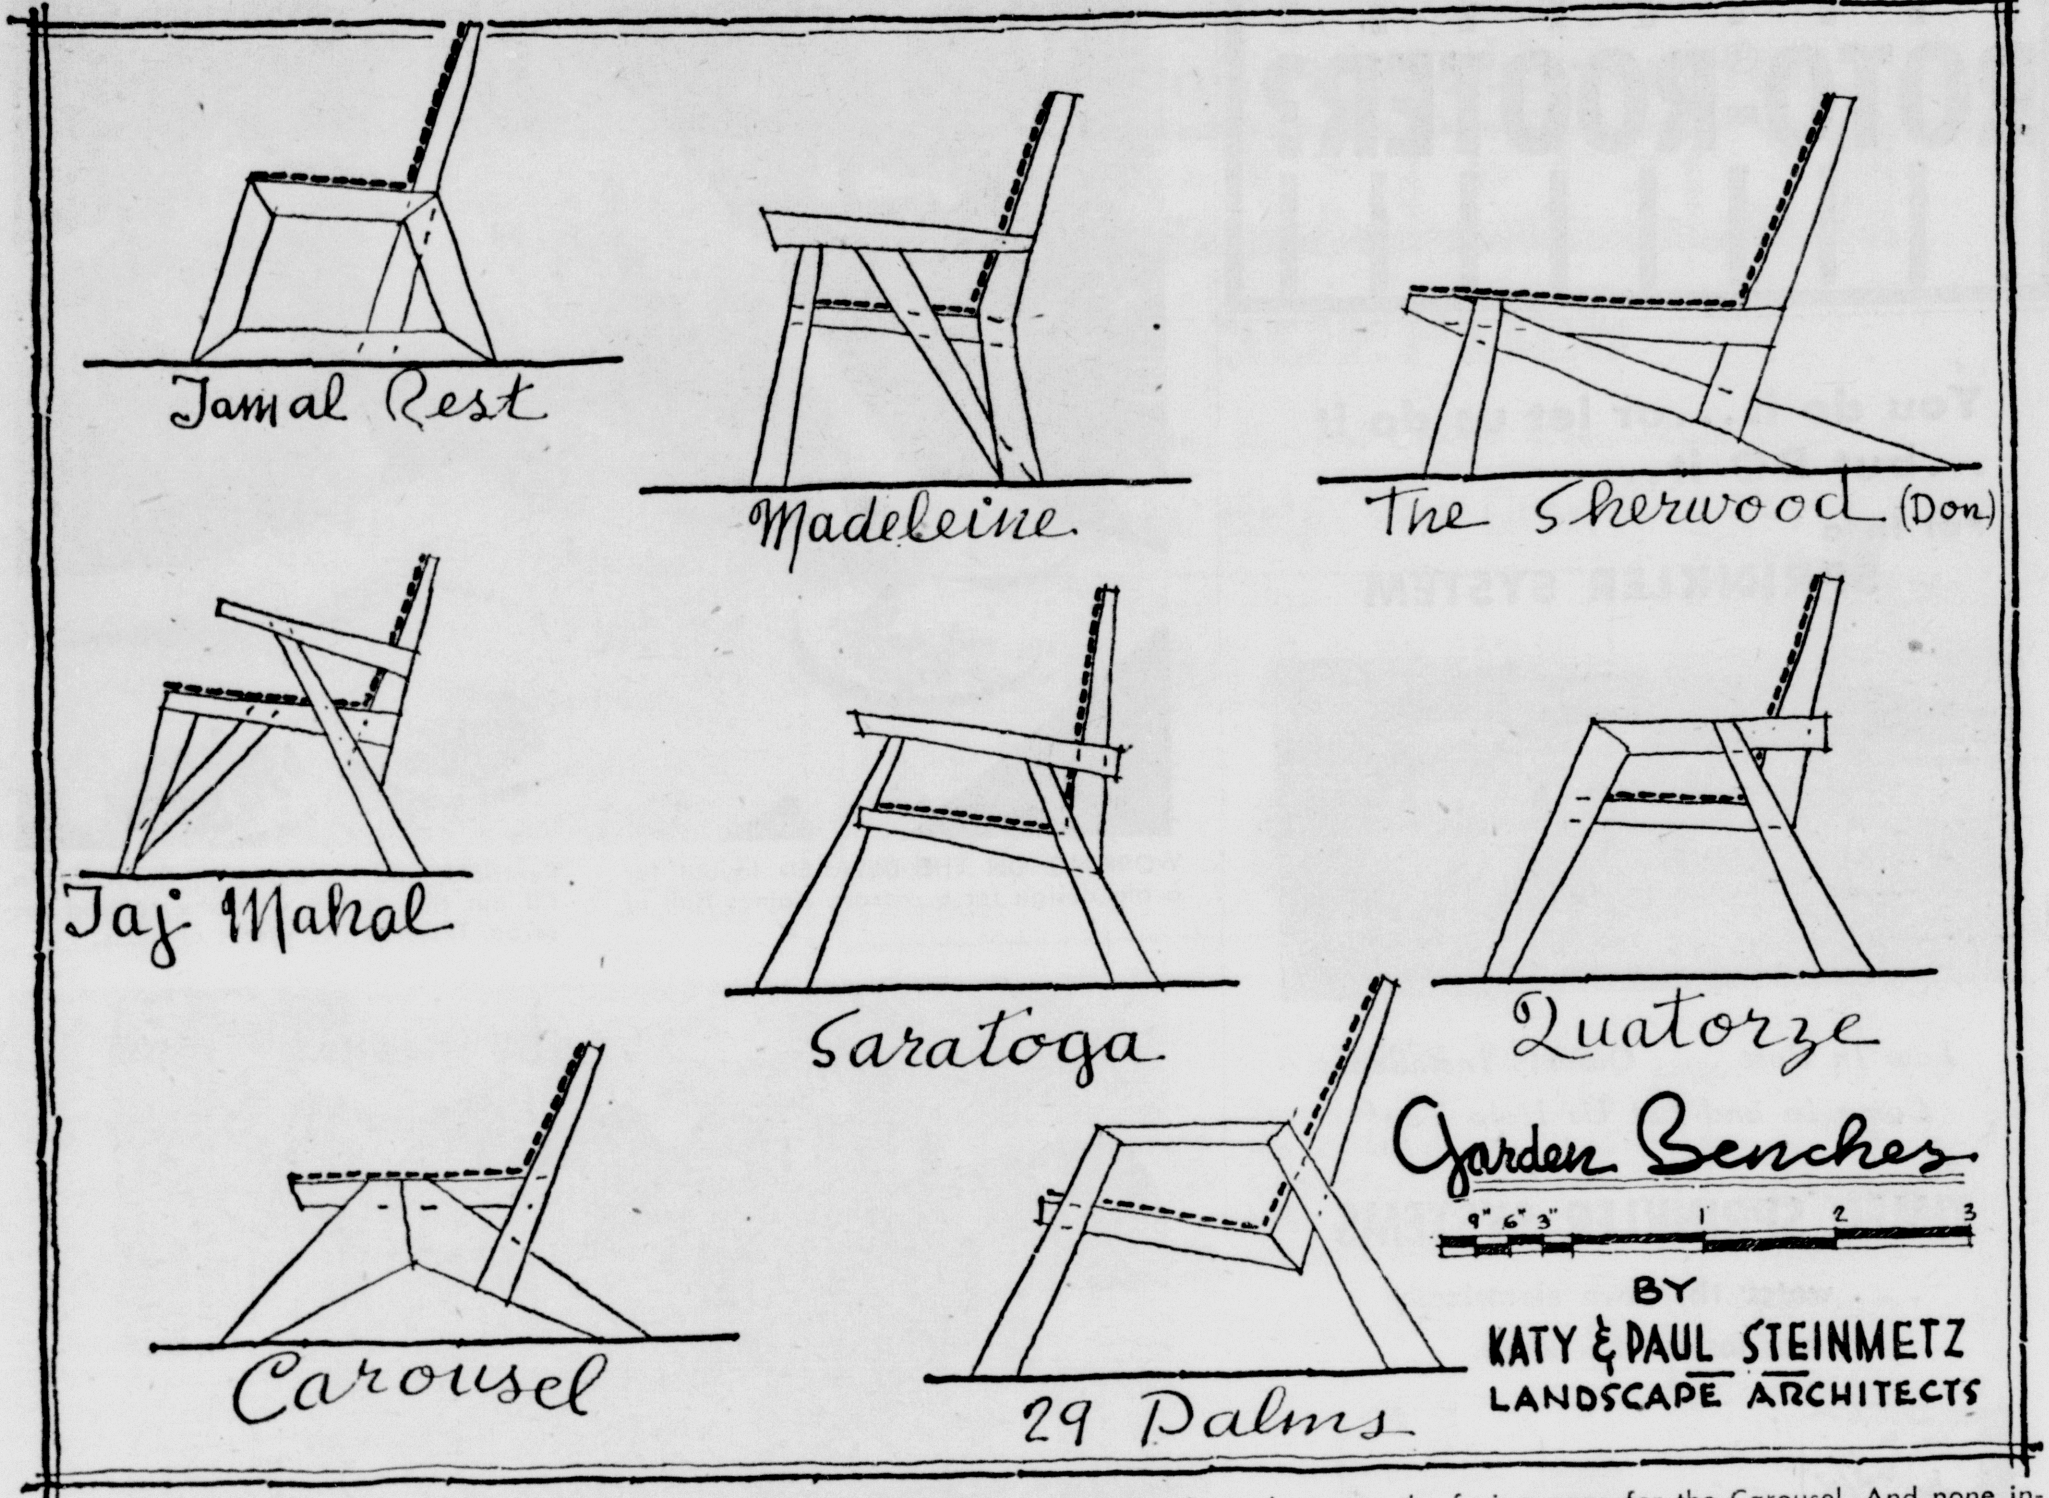
Look Them Over And Choose The Bench You Like



HERE ARE A NUMBER of different types of garden benches. Look them over carefully and you are certain to find one whose design catches your eye and fits your needs. All can be built generally along the same work plans as those shown on the facing page for the Carousel. And none involves intricate carpentry or great expense. A bench is a virtual necessity for today's garden where the owner and guests can enjoy many pleasant outdoor hours.

WORKING ON THE DETAILED layout for a big design for a mosaic, Haines Hall of Kentfield, and his assistant, Carol Coffin, fill out the design with the colored tesserae. Tesserae are pieces of glass.

THIS FINISHED MOSAIC is a huge six foot-nine inch and five-foot four-inch piece done for the London Lodge in Oakland's Jack London Square by Patterson and Hall advertising agency, the first firm to engage in the so-called art contracting of murals, mosaics, collages, and frescos for residential and commercial structures and exteriors. Haines Hall, who executed the design, is to the left. He was assisted by Carol Coffin.

MURALS, MOSIACS

Art For The Garden Wall

Have you heard about the newest things for garden and patio walls, barbecues, foyers and fireplaces?

Well, it's the use of mosaics and murals.

With the emphasis on outdoor living, Haines Hall of 405 Goodhill road, Kentfield, partner in the largest advertising art company in the West, has turned his considerable talents to the creation of "living" walls and decorations for outdoor living.

Hall's modern home in Kent Woodlands, designed by Hilmer and Callister, is filled with art, as befits an artist.

His office on Bush street in San Francisco, where the firm of Patterson and Hall handles such national accounts as Standard Oil, Lucky Lager, Southern Pacific and General Motors is becoming increasingly jammed with wildly colored glass mosaic bits, sketches of garden wall murals, collages and plans for more and more architectural art.

The firm has just finished a seven by 5½-foot mosaic depicting the Oakland waterfront during the 1890s for the patio of an establishment on the now famed Jack London Square.

Hall, a quiet, contented artist with a distinguished record of awards, says this of architecture, building and art:

"They are a real pleasure to do — a challenge I think that architects, if they can be assured prompt delivery, will work them into the landscaping and house plans more and more in the future."

Still Not Too Late For Glads

Gladiolus are, beyond a doubt, the most useful of all garden bulbs. You could have planted them in December. You can still plant them in June. And all for a glorious round of bloom in 1960.

Add that up and you'll find it totals some six months of bloom from glads—provided, of course, that you make successive plantings of the bulbs. And that in turn adds up to a lot of color any way you look at it.

So if you haven't planted already, it's time to get going with glads. Plant some now and continue setting them out at two or three week intervals right through spring and even into early summer and don't be shy with them. Glads put on their best show when planted about four inches apart.

TO ACCENT the beauty of a garden or planted area, construct a walk of concrete slabs. Either precast or cast-in-place, the concrete slabs can be arranged in sweeping curved patterns to give a new deep dimension to boxy or cramped yards.

A Concrete Slab Walk Provides Lasting Beauty

A concrete walk, curved to fit the planted areas in your yard, can enhance the beauty of a garden and protect a stroller from muddy feet.

The concrete walk, composed of either precast or cast-in place concrete slabs, has many purposes. It can serve as a border to accent and frame a carefully planted garden or it can be used as a boundary at the edge of a thick lawn.

Basically, the garden walk provides a bridge or transition from grassy areas to a planting of bright flowers and shrubs.

A sweeping, free-form patterned walk is the answer for making a boxy, cramped yard look more interesting. Concrete slabs, too, may be arranged in sloping or stepped positions to lead from one grade level to another.

Rectangular concrete slabs either white or colored can be purchased precast from a concrete products manufacturer, depending upon the desired decorative effect.

If a uniform curve or any other pattern is desired in the walk, it would be best to have the concrete slabs cast in place with wooden forms outlining the pattern.

Temporary divider strips may be placed between the slab forms prior to pouring the concrete. Once the concrete sets, the divider strips can be removed to allow for gravel or natural grass divisions.

When installing a concrete garden walk, whether it be precast or cast-in-place, the slabs should be placed on a bed of sand to provide proper drainage for water which readily collects in planted areas.

JUST POINT your finger at any Marinite and you are more than likely to find that you have pointed to a "green thumb" enthusiast. For Marin's fine climate and soil are ideal for gardening. And Marin residents take full advantage of those conditions. One such gardening enthusiast is Mrs. Leonard Delmas of 46 Berens drive, Kentfield. Housewife, mother of three daughters, she still has time for flowers. Here she admires some Parrot Tulips, Red Tulips and Yellow Tulips. Red Coralbelles are in the background. Color photo is by Dick Steinheimer, Independent-Journal photographer.

Indoor Gardening In The Summer

Indoor gardening should not be a winter pastime only.

Many of the so-called indoor plants can grace the shaded deck or lanai with you in midsummer. Check in at the neighborhood nursery and see its selection of such material as ferns, philodendrons and other foliage plants. When you've enjoyed them outside during summer, move them in for fun indoors after cool weather comes again.

Your Hoe Can Also Serve As A Rake

Make a hoe do the work of a rake, too by welding a steel blade to one end of the rake. Any flat piece of steel or iron, slightly narrower than the length of the hoe teeth, will do when sharpened at one end. Great for weeding!

Many, Many Other Items Too Numerous To Mention

Here's An Easy To Build Bin To Hold Compost Heap

Taking proper care of a compost heap can be a frustrating chore.

Layering material properly is difficult with loose compost, since the edges of the pile tend to fray, and the area devoted to compost always seems to be growing, because of the pile's tendency to spread.

And then, when you need some well-rotted compost you have to burrow into the heap. What a mess!

One four by eight-foot panel of one-quarter-inch exterior-type fir plywood and four pieces of two by two-inch lumber can solve the problem. Following simple directions, you can make the compost bin shown here.

The rails permit even layering of material and the opening at the bottom allows easy access to the ripe, useful stuff under the pile. You can water your compost as much as you like without injury to the plywood, which is made with waterproof glue.

You can paint the bin a brighter color to contrast with its surroundings, or in green or brown to blend with its background.

A free plan showing exactly how to build the compost bin is available from the Douglas Fir Plywood Assn., Tacoma 2, Wash.

Color Splash Of Cascades Catches Eye

Can you name a more appealing sight in any garden than a blooming plant that cascades its color over the edge of a wall or spills it over the rim of a suspended container?

Name it and you can have it. To us there is no sight more lovely.

For this alone it would be worth seeking a house with one or more retainer walls to landscape. And if you garden on the level, it's well worth installing some raised planters just to see the contents tumbling down. Hanging baskets are to be planted whatever the contour of your land.

Like any gardener with a bug for some particular phase of gardening, we have special favorites among trailing plants.

The little - used Ground Morning Glory is near the top of our list of trailing perennials. It is well behaved despite its name and sends its gray-green foliage tumbling over a wall to show the inch-wide blue flowers all summer into fall. Use it in full sun and water when you get around to it.

In pots, hanging baskets or atop a wall, the Italian Bellflower spews its myriad of star-shaped little blooms of white or blue. Give it more water than Ground Morning Glory and perhaps a little more shade for most appeal.

The Australian Bluebell has much to recommend it. Gardeners who have not grown it are sure to wonder what took them so long to start. Masses of small blue bells grace this trailer through summer. Excellent for retaining walls, fine for planters and pots, it takes some shade as it is grown away for the coast.

A few dozen annual trailing lobelia will go far to make life worth living. Use them either in baskets, planters or raised beds.

SOHNER CALENDAR

MAY

"Sticky drip" is a sign of Aphis and other sucking insects in Birch and Oak trees and on garden shrubbery. Immediate spraying can save your trees and shrubs from mutilation by these insects.

Poison Oak spray is most resultful if applied when shrub is in "full leaf." Sohner Tree Service—active members of the National Arborist Association for twenty years—is completely equipped for all types of spray work.

JUNE

Elm trees should be sprayed for protection against both the adult and larvae of the Elm Leaf Beetle. As dry weather is favorable to beetle development, protection is particularly important this year.

Aphis spray can still be effective. If "Sticky drip" shows around your trees, arrange at once for spray service.

JULY

Oak Pit Scale may have hatched by July. Scale insects are best controlled when in the young crawler stage. As development period varies, a constant check must be maintained to determine correct time to spray.

This is the most serious and destructive Oak pest! Sohner experts will inspect and spray if necessary.

AUGUST

At this time, spraying Oaks for Lecanium Scale is advised. Twigs infested with this pest are covered with soft brown, down-covered scales, which excrete a sticky 'honey dew' substance; and trees and shrubs become covered with a dirty, sooty fungus.

Professional spray service will assure you of complete treatment, at reasonable cost.

THE VIEW FROM THE front door of the Fred Palmer residence in Belvedere takes the eye into a lovely garden setting. Belvedere's Beautiful Gardens

This Year's House Tour To Include Some Of That Community's Finest

Marin County is justly famed for its fine gardens.

And no one locale within the county is more renown for such beauty than Belvedere.

It is no wonder, then,e that the annual house and garden tour sponsored by the St. Stephen's Church Guild of Belvedere is a big event annually.

It affords participants an opportunity to visit not only fine homes but also some wonderful gardens.

THE TENTH annual tour, "Sophisticated Suburbia," has been scheduled for Thursday, May 12. This year six view homes — all with fine gardens — will be visited, and the tour will be followed by a tea at the newly remodeled San Francisco Yacht Club. Hours for the tour are 1 to 5 p.m. Tea will be served from 3 to 5.

A fleet of station wagons will provide shuttle service around the island.

Each of the six gardens featured is different from the others.

The Robert A. Davies home on the lagoon, for instance, stresses minimum garden upkeep and a boat deck integrated with the garden. It was created by Robert Haag.

The second garden on the tour is that of the Richard O. Pollard home, built on three levels on the lagoon and also featuring mostly dock and minimum garden plantings.

The third garden on the tour is that of Mrs. James Lewis, where Herman E. Hein has provided a secluded and intimate garden featuring native shrubs and trees.

THE FOURTH garden to be visited is that of Mr. and Mrs. Chester C. Vargas Jr., which was designed by the owners. It is a tropical paradise surrounding a pool and featuring lush hibiscus and bougainvillea.

The fifth garden on the tour, designed by W. T. Tobler of West Marin Nurseries for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Horowitz, is entirely different because of its natural hillside planting and integrated waterfalls.

The sixth garden on the tour reflects a lot of work on the part of the owners, Mr. and Mrs. MacBoyle Lewis. It is surrounded by olive trees and other plants native to California. The tiered beds provide color at the different seasons of the year and as the house itself is on a plateau it provides a spacious expanse of colorful planting.

Pictured also on the following pages is the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Vayron H. Montgorery, where the landscaping was done by William Miles of Egger's Nursery. Mrs. Montgomery is general chairman of the Belvedere house tour. Also shown is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Palmer, whose garden was designed by Herman E. Hein. Mrs. Palmer is a past president of the St. Stephen's Guild.

EACH YEAR this benefit affair brings over 1,000 women to view the beauty of spectacular Belvedere, which has shown a great transition from the 1880s to the contemporary homes of today. Each home will be decorated with flowers from many beautiful Belvedere gardens.

Tickets for this benefit affair may be obtained from Mrs. T. L. Wark, 18 Teal road, Belvedere, GEneva 5-0707, or Mrs. George Stephens at her Keil Cove home, Tiburon, GEneva 5-4912.

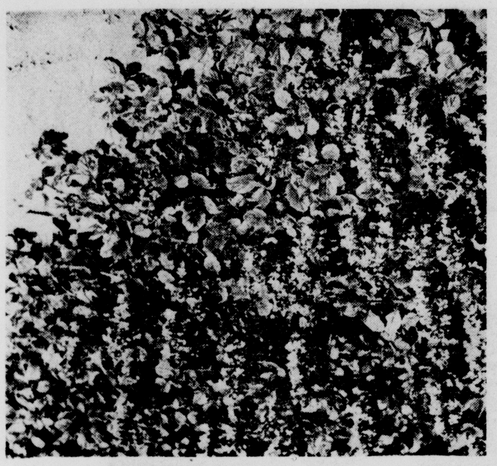
Belvedere Garden Gates Swing Open

THIS STUNNING EXAMPLE of flowers along a walkway can be seen in the garden at the Chester Vargas home in Belvedere. It will be one of the beautiful peninsula gardens to be visited May 12 by participants in the 10th annual St. Stephen's Guild of Belvedere house tour.

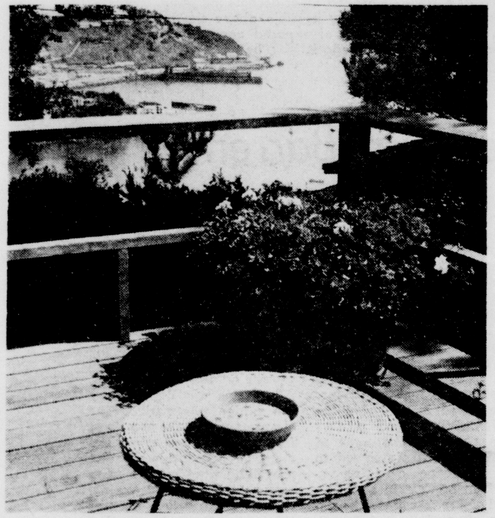
IN CHARGE of planning for the "Sophisticated Suburbia" house tour to be conducted by the St. Stephen's Guild of Belvedere on May 12 are Mrs. Edwin Weed, guild president, and Mrs. Vayron H. Montgomery, general chairman. They're shown at the entrance of the Montgomery home before settling down to a busy day of preparation for the big event.



A GOOD GROUND COVERING for Marin is blue Ajuga, used here most effectively by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Palmer to cover a steep bank at their Belvedere home. Participants in this year's Belvedere tour are certain to pick up valuable ideas for their own homes and yards.

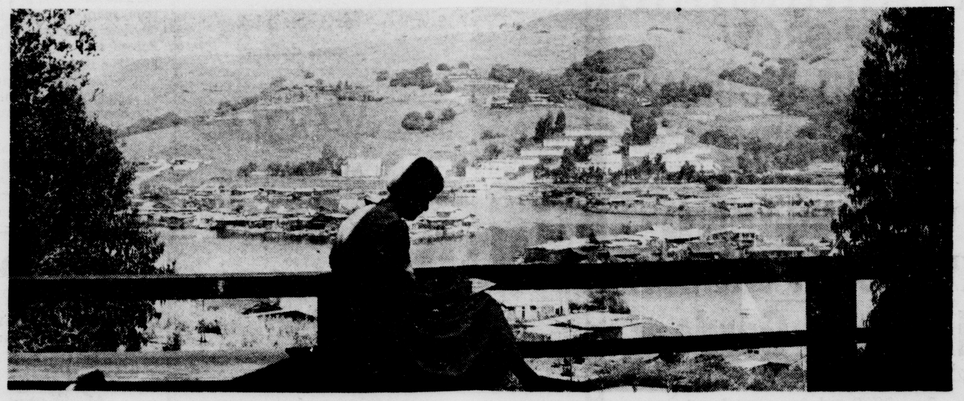
RELAXING IN HER lovely natural garden is Mrs Joel Horowitz of Belvedere. You, too, can enjoy it if you participate in the "Sophisticated Suburbia" house tour to be conducted by St. Stephen's Guild May 12. Landscaping here was by W. T. Tobler of the West End Nursery.

THESE FLOWERS are in the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Fred E. Palmer of Belvedere. Mrs. Palmer is past president of St. Stephen's Guild, sponsors of the house and garden tour. It will mark the tenth annual staging of the popular event.

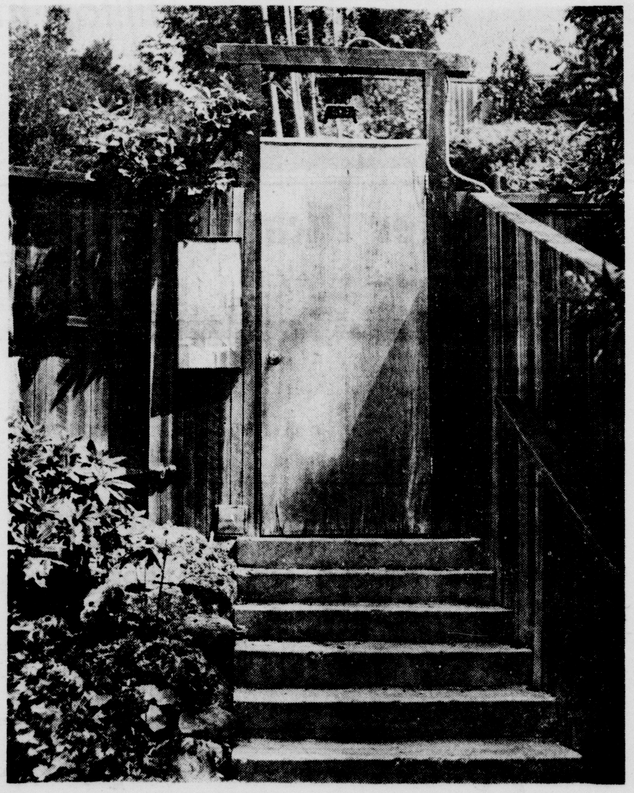


DECKS ARE AN IMPORTANT part of the outdoor landscape for Belvedere homes. And from the deck of Mr .and Mrs. MacBoyle Lewis' home high on top of the island you get this impressive view of Belvedere Cove. Note potted geranium. The Lewis garden will be shown May 12.

A BANK OF ICE PLANT is part of the garden of Mr. and Mrs. MacBoyle Lewis, another beauty spot to be visited on the May 12 house tour. Sausalito and the bay can be seen in the distance, thus combining eye-catching scenery with lovely surroundings.



SHOWN SKETCHING from the deck of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Horowitz, which will be included in the May 12 house tour, is mural artist Mrs. Richard F. Wolbert. Belvedere's beauty is certain to bring out the best in any artist. But you don't have to be artistic to enjoy a tour of the fine homes and gardens.



THE CHARMING EXIT from the garden of the Chester Vargas is certain to catch a lot of eyes of participants in the "Sophisticated Suburbia" house and garden tour. All photos on these pages are by Dick Steinheimer, Independent-Journal staff photographer.

Landscapers Turn Barren Hilltop Into A Showplace

An outstanding example of a created garden is at the Carlos R. Freitas home on the highest point in the hills within San Rafael. Located at 87 Oakmont avenue, with the Bay Area stretched out in panorama beneath it, the beauty of the home and its garden make this an exceptional showplace.

At the time of its purchase by the Freitases, the location was a rocky hilltop. A few oaks were the only features. The soil was barren, dry hardpan. Landscape Architects Royston, Hanamoto and Mayes were called in to design the garden. When their plans were accepted, the work of construction was assigned to the landscape contracting firm of Cagwin and Dorward of San Anselmo. The artistry of gardening followed.

First, the usable native rocks were segregated and the rest hauled away. Then, with tons of soil trucked in from the Freitas ranch, Cagwin and Dorward began the construction of an entire hillside. This rebuilding gave the hilltop a greater surface area and good, rich soil. Native plantings were introduced on the new hillside to blend with growth on the lower slopes. All of this was done before the garden was started. The elevation makes the area frost free and this and other elements were considered. The prevailing wind made a wind screen necessary and the native oaks furnished part of this screen. Ground cover that would blend with the oaks was used and the native stone was utilized to add to the naturalness of the setting.

Structures Can Enhance Looks Of Your Garden

As every gardener knows, there is more to gardening than the growing of plants. For without the proper setting, even the most exotic plant material can be wasted.

It behooves the gardener, therefore to get himself a design for gardening—an overall plan or goal which he can work toward over the years and find satisfaction in achieving a little at a time.

One of the surest ways to enhance a garden is to make use of structural forms. Structure in the garden is often just the thing to make up for nature's shortcomings—or the shortcomings of those who planned your garden to begin with.

Such structure can be as simple or as elaborate as you wish. The California Assn. of Nurserymen claims that merely adding a redwood border around flowerbeds will enhance the effect of flowers. On the elaborate side, possible projects to include in your design are an enlarged patio, a spacious deck or a garden pool.

Sun decks have proved most effective in adding dimension to hillside gardens. A deck increases the usable space of sloping lots, decreases the problem of landscape on an irregular contour. At the same time, decks should not be considered the exclusive property of hillside home owners. We've seen them used to good effect on level homesites —especially in older homes that have their first floor several feet off the ground. A deck with a few tubbed plants will tie house and garden together.

In more modern homes, the transition from house to garden is often abrupt despite the fact that both are on the same level. Here, a roomy, landscaped patio can end this abruptness and lend new pleasure to living.

The possibilities are countless as any landscape expert can tell you. The important thing is that you choose a plan for gardening — then work and plant toward it.

THE GLADIOLUS is hard to match for grace and color in flower arrangements. And testing programs have made the glad practically foolproof for the home gardener. Here are the two 1960 All-America glad selections, the Landmark at top in the arrangement, and the Little Pansy at the bottom. Landmark is the first gladiolus of Canadian origin to win such recognition. It is huge, tall, cream-colored. Little Pansy is petitie and charming — a rich, velvety deep blue.

Boundary Line Is Important

The boundary line is an all-important factor in today's garden.

Not — as in bygone days — because it defines the property on which you live. Rather, it provides privacy, and in this day of high density housing, privacy can be a precious commodity.

It is a matter of interest to ever gardener, then, that he choose the plant material which can best provide the privacy he needs. If space is strictly limited, so is his choice. If his garden is of reasonable size, the nurserymen offer him a wide choice of boundary shrubs and trees.

Except in unusual cases, the greatest need for privacy comes in the back yard where the gardener will spend the greater part of his spare time. Front yard boundaries are really better for modest height — perhaps no more than Boxwood, Dwarf Juniper or Dwarf Myrtle which will define the limits of property and discourage cross traffic from dogs and people alike. A city street is often better for a sweeping view, unbroken by countless high hedges.

In back, however, the gardener is less concerned with overall effect of a neighborhood than he is with his own retreat. Here he will want to protect the outdoor living area, hide an unattractive clutter in the neighbor's yard or provide himself with a sanctuary from encroachment.

Nurserymen are well equipped to show you plant material to fit every boundary need —whatever the size of your garden. They can suggest columnar and clipable shrubs for the small garden such as Privet and Eugenia or some of the Pittosporums. Where space is less cramped, you can choose from the Pittosporums again, from Cotoneasters or any number of fine shrubs and small trees, formal or otherwise.

Strawberry Tree Really A Shrub But A Good One

You can't help noticing the Strawberry Tree when you see it in fall and winter.

Its deep green, bronze-stemmed foliage alone would warrant a spot in your garden, but really outstanding are the small white, urn-shaped flowers and the red or yellow fruits that come from them. It is noteworthy, too, that both blooms and fruit can be found on the tree in various stages of development at the same time.

Strawberry Tree, despite its name, is merely a shrub and a good one. With patience and careful thinning out below, it can be trained to a small tree of from 12 to 20 feet in height. A row of them unpruned along the property line makes a colorful and unusual screen which demands no attention but attracts plenty.

Strawberry Tree derives its name from the showy round fruits which hang in clusters through fall and into January. Fruit is either yellow or red.

The ease with which Strawberry Tree fits into garden situations makes it a shrub of first importance in California.

If your garden has space to spare, or if you live on a hillside that lends itself to a natural look, try the Strawberry Tree's first cousin—the striking, rust trunked Madrone of our foothills.

Some Plants Go Together In Garden

Discovery of two or more plants that go well together is always a happy event for the gardener.

For while many plants mix, there are some that seem made for each others company. And these can make the big difference between any garden and a very special garden.

One combination that we've always liked for the rear of a sunny border is the tall spikes of blue Delphinium with those of the fiery Red Hot Pokers. They are all the more striking when planted against the defining background of a fence or wall.

Daffodils of any color are the better for a cover planting of blue violas and white Carpet-Of-Snow Alyssum. The giant yellow trumpets of King Alfred are especially enhanced when blooming on stems that push up through this combination. Also with bulbs, try pansies as a base planting for tulips.

Along a walk or in the front of a foundation border, a combination of gray-white Dusty Miller and coppery-red Fiberous Begonias always appeals to us. For variation, try Dusty Miller on one side of a walk, the Begonias on the other.

We love the sight of Dogwood in bloom over a carpet of Bleeding Heart as we so often see it in foothill canyons of the Mother Lode, but we've had little luck duplicating it in our garden.

AN EXAMPLE of what can be done with a steep bank is the home of Colonel and Mrs. C. B. Overacker of Reed Ranch Road in the exclusive Reedlands area. The bank is planted with blue blooming ceanosis; rosemary trails on the stone walls blue in bloom also, and blue morning glory is intermingled with it. When in bloom this bank is a beautiful mass of color and completely obscures the original raw wall. Landscape architect was Mrs. Overacker's cousin, Mrs. Mildred Macpherson of Encinita. The Overacker home was built by the William H. McDevitt Construction Co. (Photo by Steve Allen)

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENER'S

The Marin Gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ The long-stemmed, long lasting, many hued Transvaal Daisies are to be found in bloom at nurseries these days. Plant them with the crowns exposed to prevent rot. Good drainage is essential.

✔ Divide tall bearded iris after they go out of bloom.

✔ Potted geraniums are happier for more, rather than less, water. Don't let the pots dry out. Contrary to popular opinion, geraniums don't really like drought, but need good drainage.

✔ Set out chrysanthemums this month and start them on their way to the fall blooming period. Watering, feeding, pinching back to prevent spindly growth are the three requisites to chrysanthemum culture.

Geraniums For Splash Of Color

Showiest of the many fine show-offs in California gardens are the Geraniums.

Can you think of any other family that makes a bigger splash in the sea of color that Californians grow? Or, over a longer period and with less trouble to the gardener?

The common Zonal Geraniums, so named for the varied zones of light and dark in their leaf patterns, are journeymen color bearers and have been to generations of Californians. The testimony to their usefulness has come in recent years with the development of new and better varieties—varieties in which the color has tended to be softened . . . better for blending in the landscape.

These zonals are easiest of all the geraniums to grow. Small plants set out this spring from nursery pots will give good growth and bloom this summer. And after cutting back each winter, they will continue blooming for years.

Zonals are favorite pot plants, too. Buy them in pots from your nurserymen and keep them in pots for color on decks. As the plants grow, they should be moved up to larger pots for continued growth and added bloom.

The Ivy Geraniums are the most colorful of all trailing plants. Used as ground covers, they fill vast areas with their cheerfulness. On a wall, they cascade masses of bloom as though a reservoir of color had spilled over the top.

Most delicate — and most varied in color—are the Martha Washington Geraniums. Botanically, all the geraniums mentioned here are in the Pelargonium family.

AN ATTRACTIVE TERRACE and walk leading up to a sheltered entrance enhances the streamlined beauty of this modern house. The walk is made of concrete slabs set between durable wooden dividers. Alternating sections of colored gravel lead away from the walk into a terrace. Adjoining fireplace wall and planter are of slump block, a new type of concrete masonry. Designs on concrete walk slabs such as the wavy lines here can also serve to beautify a garden sidewalk.

New Wrinkle In Walks: Designs On Cement Slabs

All it takes to construct an eye-catching walk or terrace are concrete and imagination.

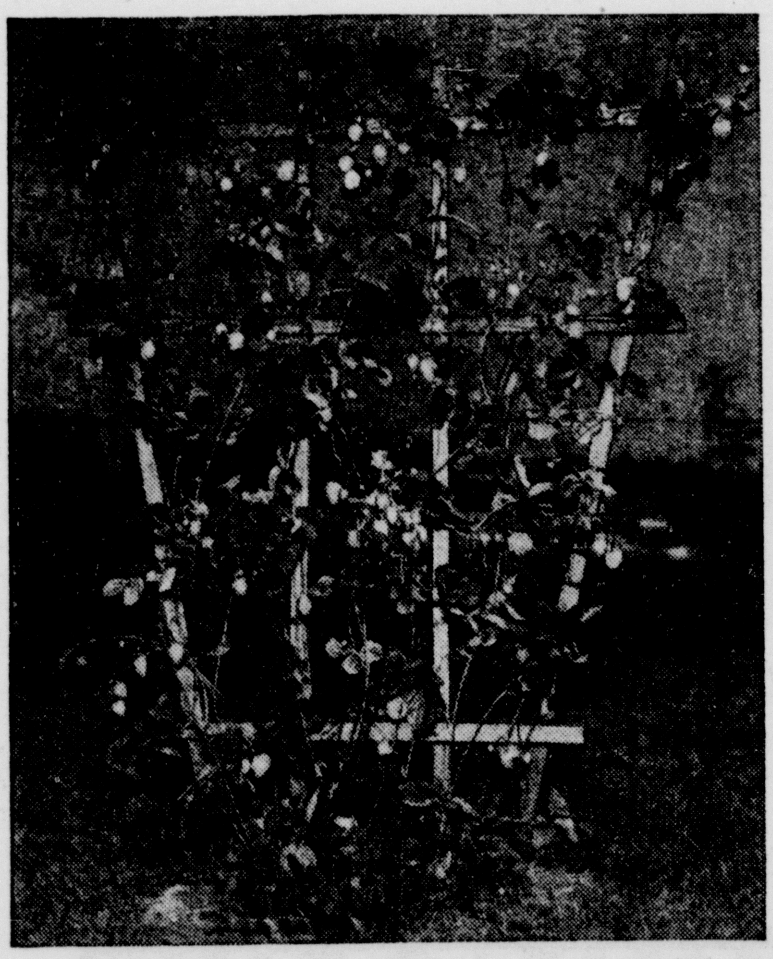
The concrete slabs can be purchased precast, or cast in place in your yard.

By using slabs of various colors in striking combinations or by arranging them into designs or patterns, you can create a distinctive and functional walk or terrace that will emphasize the beauty of your house, yard or garden.

A new wrinkle is a random recessed design on the face of the slab. To produce the unusual wavy lines, concrete is poured over wrinkled newspaper or waxed paper lining the bottom of the forms. After the concrete sets, the forms are removed, the paper is peeled away from the bottom surface and the slabs are reversed, revealing rough recessed patterns.

A checkered design is achieved by alternating slabs of different colors between two-by-four-inch dividers of durable wood, such as redwood. The checkerboard motif can extend from a walk into a terrace of alternating sections of concrete or colored gravel and grass.

The planter and fireplace walls adjoining the walk and terrace are of slump block, a rugged and decorative type of concrete masonry.



SONJANA, the strawberry that climbs, is one of the new "imports" to U.S. gardens. Successful in Europe, it is now being introduced to this country by William Penn Nursery Co. of West Grove, Pa. The berries are described as middle size, firm and meaty -- and tasty -- and the plant can be trained upwards so that the gardener is able to pick berries that have never touched the ground.

Watering Tip For Gardeners

In watering, do not leave basins around your plants to hold water.

This often causes the soil level to be raised or lowered, and harms the plant. It can also cause the plant to drown if drainage is poor.

After proper gardening, adequate watering is the secret of a successful garden.

Rocky Yard Answer

Development of wood patio decks has been a life saver to the home owner with the rocky yard which wouldn't grow lawn. Decks of rugged, all-weather woods like Douglas fir can be built to cover any desired area in any shape.

Plants Important To Rock Gardening, Natural Or Artificial

Rock gardening in its classic sense is akin to sculpturing. It is an artificial relief, created from ground up with varying degrees of artistic success by enthusiastic gardeners.

In California, rock gardening more often denotes making the best use of naturally rugged terrain. The Californian, especially in coastal and foothill gardens, is often confronted with a rocky hillside or a newly cut embankment to landscape. And this he proceeds to do with a proper choice of plant material.

Nurserymen suggest that gardeners who lack the natural terrain to do their rock gardening on, can have fun and challenge by building—as in the classic sense—an artificial mound of earth and stone.

In either case, plant material can be much the same, what you plant depending mainly on how easily the area can be watered. Rock gardens of limited water supply are best handled with natives and other drought resistant plants. Keep them low to tie in with the terrain.

In any situation, we find the dwarf conifers ideal rock garden subjects. They stand attention or lack of it and always blend beautifully with rocks. Nurserymen offer a selection of these—dwarf Junipers and the shrubby Mugho Pine being among the most useful.

Look, too, for such durable and compact growers as Lavender or Rosemary. Annuals can play an important role, also. Alyssum is especially good for naturalizing effects around rocks. Lobelia in season and Dwarf Marigold add color and cover in their turn.

We'd not overlook succulents by any means. Many hobbyists build their rock gardens around succulents. Nor can the importance of bulbs be ignored, though you'll have to wait until fall to plant most of them.

CHERRY TIME is a new cactus-flowered zinnia. It has shades of cherry, rose-red, spirea red and magenta rose, all in heaviest saturation, and is a good cut flower carried on plants that stand two and a half to three feet. Blooms often measures five inches across. (Bodger photo)

Rock Roses Are Rough And Ready

You see the rock roses in the lonliest places—along the dusty roadfront of a country home, or on a barren, hot hillside that doesn't know what water is for over half the year. Yet these rough and ready shrubs seem to thrive where the going is tough.

Rock roses have truly earned their place in this land of little rain. Your garden can use them if it has areas of neglect, unfriendly soil or a lazy owner. They ask only sun and perfect drainage. And while they will tolerate some shade, they won't stand for soggy conditions at their feet.

This leaves any number of possible uses for rock roses. Until you've seen them, you can't know just how well they convert a disheveled slope into a sea of pink or white blooms. Plant them along the sun-baked west or south wall of your house and enjoy their perennial fresh look in the face of heat. Try them at the seaside or in the foothills. They thrive under all conditions.

You won't mistake Rock Roses for a regal Rhododendron, for theirs is a proletarian beauty that is enhanced by contrast to the surroundings.

WHILE AWAITING THE next generation of Stanley children this little wagon is serving temporarily as a holder of plants in the Edward J. Stanley Jr. garden at Ross. When the time comes for it to return to service, the sideboards will be put back into place.

A Garden Piece That Has Another Use — And A History

By DON KEOWN

In the garden behind the Edward J. Stanley Jr. home at Ross there is a plant-holder which must qualify as one of the most unusual such pieces in Marin County.

It's a toy wagon. But, more than that, it's a wagon with a history dating back to 1896.

It was then, Stanley recalls, that his grandfather, Edward Hallihan, a blacksmith, forged the axles in the Union Iron Works in San Francisco. And his father, Edward J. Stanley, a professor of mechanical engineering at Stanford University, built the body of a solid oak trimmed with brass. It was present for little Edward Jr.

Still a prized possession of Edward J. Stanley Jr. is a photograph taken in 1896 showing him and his baby brother, Herbert, Seated on the new wagon.

RECENTLY there was a family reunion gathering of the Stanleys in Ross. Among those attending was Herbert M. Stanley, now a geologist residing in Dallas, Tex.

In a playful mood, the two brothers posed seated on the same wagon upon which they had been pictured 64 years ago.

"Of course, we had put on quite a bit of weight along with the years," Edward Stanley Jr. smiles. "But that wagon is as strong today as it was in 1896."

The wagon has now served three generations of Stanleys as a plaything. And it was last used by Edward Jr.'s grandchildren. Now the last of those grandchildren is 14 "and at the age where he is more interested in hot rods than in toy wagons," the grandfather says. So the wagon is seeing temporary service as a plantholder in the Stanley garden, awaiting the next generation of children.

Stanley says the wagon is certain to serve not just one but several more future generations.

The wagon brings back many memories to Stanley, who retired after 38 years as a Bank of America executive and is now with the American Building Maintenance.

He can recall back in 1906 when this very wagon was used by his family to transport to the safety of the Potrero Hills what few possessions they could salvage from the Stanley home after the great earthquake and fire had struck.

"We loaded it up with everything we could possibly get on it, and then pulled it up into the hills," he says. "Everything else was left behind to the flames."

HE CAN ALSO recall many parades, shows and celebrations in which the little wagon had a role.

No wonder the wagon came in for considerable attention when the Stanley clan gathered for that recent reunion.

It must seem almost like a member of the family.

THE LITTLE WOODEN WAGON which his grandfather and father had built for him was brand new back in 1896 when Edward J. Stanley Jr. and his baby brother, Herbert, posed proudly, seated upon it.

SIXTY-FOUR YEARS LATER at a family reunion in Ross, Edward J. Jr. and Herbert M. Stanley again posed on that wagon. In the interim it had served well three generations of children as a toy.

Tips on Purchase and Home Care of Your Wardrobe

By BERT BROWN, Marin Cleaners of San Rafael and Bel Air

"Why Did My Bright, White Dress Turn Brown?"

You have been made the victim of the new fluorescent "brightener" that is being used by manufacturers so much these days. Not only are fluorescent brightening agents used to make white, whiter, but they are used to make all colors more vivid. Almost any textile article today may contain a brightener. The unfortunate effect of these fluorescent dyes is that they do not always hold up under ordinary use. When these brighteners are used in summer wear or draperies which are exposed to the sun, the fluorescent dyes may bring about a discoloration. Bright whites may turn yellow or brown on relatively short exposure to sunlight.

Often the drycleaner is blamed for this color change in the garments. Actually, the fault lies with the textile manufacturer who, in an endeavor to please his customers with whiter whites or brighter bright colors, used fluorescent dyes that were not color-fast to light.

In washing or cleaning fabrics at home, when they have been dyed with the artificial brighteners, beware of common bleaching agents. They will yellow or brown the fabrics the same as the sunlight will do. When fabrics are yellowed or browned in this manner, the damage is permanent and the stain cannot be removed.

THE PRESERVATION of oak trees has paid a large dividend of beauty in Greenbrae, as shown in the Philip Russell Quick home at 100 Los Serros. The Schultz Co., Greenbrae developers, have made every effort to save and maintain these natural features. This area, with the garden encircling the central oak, suggests years of careful tending in a comparatively new garden. Flowering shrubs selected for year 'round color make this a constant beauty spot.

HERE IS HOW

Extra Patio Tables Are Easy To Make

What patio ever has enough serving tables?

This question is usually asked as a glass which has been balanced on a guest's knee goes crashing to the patio flagstones.

If this is a familiar situation at your barbecue parties, you will welcome a patio table idea developed by designer Thomas Jensen. It is economical, sturdy, and can be left out in all kinds of weather. And, it's probably the world's simplest do-it-yourself project.

The base of the table is one or two 8 by 16-inch or 12 by 12-inch clay flue lining tiles. You can obtain these inexpensive tiles from almost any ready-mix cement firm or concrete block supplier. The tiles can be painted any color. Then, cover them with square or rectangular pieces of exterior-type (waterproof) fir plywood.

If you want a small table, cover one 12 by 12-inch tile with an 18 by 18-inch square of fir plywood. If you want a larger unit, put down two 8 by 16-inch tiles and cover them with a 24 by 48-piece of plywood. No fastening is required — just set the plywood on the tile. Nail a strip of wood molding around the edges of the plywood for decorative purposes.

These tables are easily moved, but can be left outside indefinitely. For an extra smooth surface, specify medium density overlaid fir plywood. This type has a resin fiber surface which makes an excellent paint base. Regardless of the plywood grade you select, make sure you obtain exterior-type. This can be identified by the grade-trademark EXT-DFPA.

When the outdoor season is over, move the tables into the den or family room. They will withstand a lot of punishment from the children, but are hard to tip over.

A PAIR of flue-lining tiles and a sheet of exterior-type plywood is all you need for this simple, attractive patio table. Just apply a coat of paint to the tiles and the lumber rim and you have a handsome piece of outdoor furniture for your garden, patio or other use.

IN NEXT WEEK'S MAGAZINE—

A HAPPY MARIN FAMILY huddles around a map planning a vacation trip and looking forward to a vacation to be spent together. This is the typical Marin family, closely-knit and sharing their pleasures and projects. But there is another side not depicted in this picture. This is the family which is not happy. Their problems can be of many different kinds. And sometimes they seem insurmountable. But there is a Marin agency — the Family Service Agency of Marin County — which is willing to tackle these seemingly insolvable problems. And often it does solve them, and an unhappy family becomes a happy one. You will read about the Family Service Agency in next week's Marin Magazine. The following day — May 1 — the annual observance of Mental Health Week will begin. The Family Service Agency plays a major role in the fight for better mental health in this county.

MARIN ET CETERA

Even A Bird-Brain Will Finally Get Idea When He's Not Wanted

IF THERE WAS EVER a dope, it is this character who's been hanging around our place the last four years.

This spring he's more wacky than ever — and decidedly unhappy. His mentis is completely non compos, also disorganized.

Even for a bird-brain sparrow.

Our dining room window is the only one in Marin County with an outlook like unto that from a grass shack in Kealakakua, Hawaii, overlooking what appears to be a threadbare hula skirt hanging from the clothesline.

Bird-brain has nesting problems.

From sun-up until mid-day he builts frantically.

AT NOON HE pulls down a sloppy mess of wisp and straw from our eaves and starts all over again.

His afternoon schedule is a repitition of the same.

This has been going on for three weeks.

Ever since we bought this place we've encouraged the presence of bird life. By shooing away the neighbors' cats and throwing stones at predatory hawks we've managed to keep the yard a sort of sanctuary for sparrows, robins, bluejays and migrants on tour.

THEY ARE VERY friendly and enjoy our company, chirp noisily for food and follow us around the yard. They won't eat out of our hands but come almost that close when we call them.

Their daily presence in our patio lends it a decorative touch.

This we could do without but we haven't discovered yet how to prevent it and not hurt their feelings.

Old "bird-brain" seems to be the leader and the tamest of the lot. Many of them are undoubtedly his offspring from previous years and accept his word as law. He claims the biggest cracker crumbs as tribute and scolds my wife if she fails to observe protocol.

His markings are a little different from the rest—rust-brown coat, gray chest and vest, black crown, face, beak and cravat.

His current choice of mates is less easy to identify in mixed company—mottled brown and gray without distinctive pattern.

I don't think she's too much interested in this nesting project. She's either hard to please or plain hard to get.

EVERY TIME she flies under the eaves to look over his work he flutters his wings and describes the attractions of setting up housekeeping. He's got a good line but it hasn't seemed to be effective.

She answers with a few nasty cracks, then flits away for a date with a worm.

Women!

All I've got to say is that she better not carry it too far. I've noticed another slick little chick in dove gray who's been casing the inside of our carport and making soft noises to bird-brain about the superior accommodations and company. Tch-tch!

And I think the old boy is weakening.

CAN'T SAY that I blame him, and far be it from me to interfere in the love life of a sparrow, but—

I sure hate to think of washing the Plymouth every day through the mating season.

MILL VALLEYAN NOW

Kentuckian Writes Of Land He Loves

By BRUCE COLEMAN

Kentuckian Wendell Berry lives in Cascade Canyon, Mill Valley, and writes about his home place, County Henry.

He is 25, lanky, and when he says, "I get up and start work when I get my courage up, and I quit when I wear out," you have had a good taste of his easy drawl and outlook on life.

Berry is the author of "Nathan Coulter," his first book, a novel published Thursday. It is a book "about a place like the place I grew up in," Berry says. It's about the land.

Berry is from a tobacco farm at New Castle Ken., and his family on both sides are farmers. Looking out at the eucalyptus trees at the Dick O'Hanlon place at 628 Throckmorton avenue where he and his wife rent a small house, Berry says, "A eucalyptus tree is far different from a white oak or a hickory of Kentucky."

The six-foot-four-inch writer said he has worked in all phases of tobacco raising from breaking ground to curing and pressing. It is a complicated art, he said, and it is still practically all hand work except for the plowing.

He speaks about his home country this way. "I associate people with it. I associate everything I know with it. I like to be on it. I like to be outside. The way to tell you my feelings about my love of the land is to write a book about it."

Berry teaches a course, "The Writing of Fiction" two days a week at the creative writing center at Stanford. He and his wife, Tanya, and daughter Mary, almost 2, will return to Kentucky in June when the semester ends. "If I get some money," Barry says, "we might go to Europe. Otherwise I will stay and farm awhile."

He finished work on "Nathan Coulter" at the end of 1959 and started work on another book in January. It, too, will be a novel about the same place and will have some of the same characters, Berry said.

WENDELL BERRY
Tobacco country man

Berry first began writing seriously at the University of Kentucky where he received his bachelor and master degrees in English. He later taught a year at Georgetown College in Kentucky.

He started out with a few sketches, he said In 1958 an editor of Houghton Mifflin took part of the book to Boston and Berry was given an option on it. Following this he got a fellowship to the Stanford Writing Center and studied in 1958-59 under Wallace Stegner and Richard Scoweroft. Much of his book was written in California since with the fellowship, he had more free time.

Tanya, the niece of Ann and Dick O'Hanlon, is the daughter of Clifford Amy, professor of art at the University of Kentucky. He did the drawing for the jacket cover of Berry's book.

Tanya says she has always considered her husband more of a poet than a prose writer. He has written a book of poems and has had poems published in the Sausalito magazine, Contact, and in the quarterly, Prairie Schooner.

Berry says of writing, "I dread is every morning when I start but it excites me as soon as I begin." About Kentucky he says—"Rolling country, river and creek country, limestone, blue grass, fine pasture country."

'Nathan Coulter' Fine Novel, Critic Says

NATHAN COULTER by Wendell Berry, Houghton Mifflin, 204 pages, $3.50. Reviewed by Kenneth Lamott.

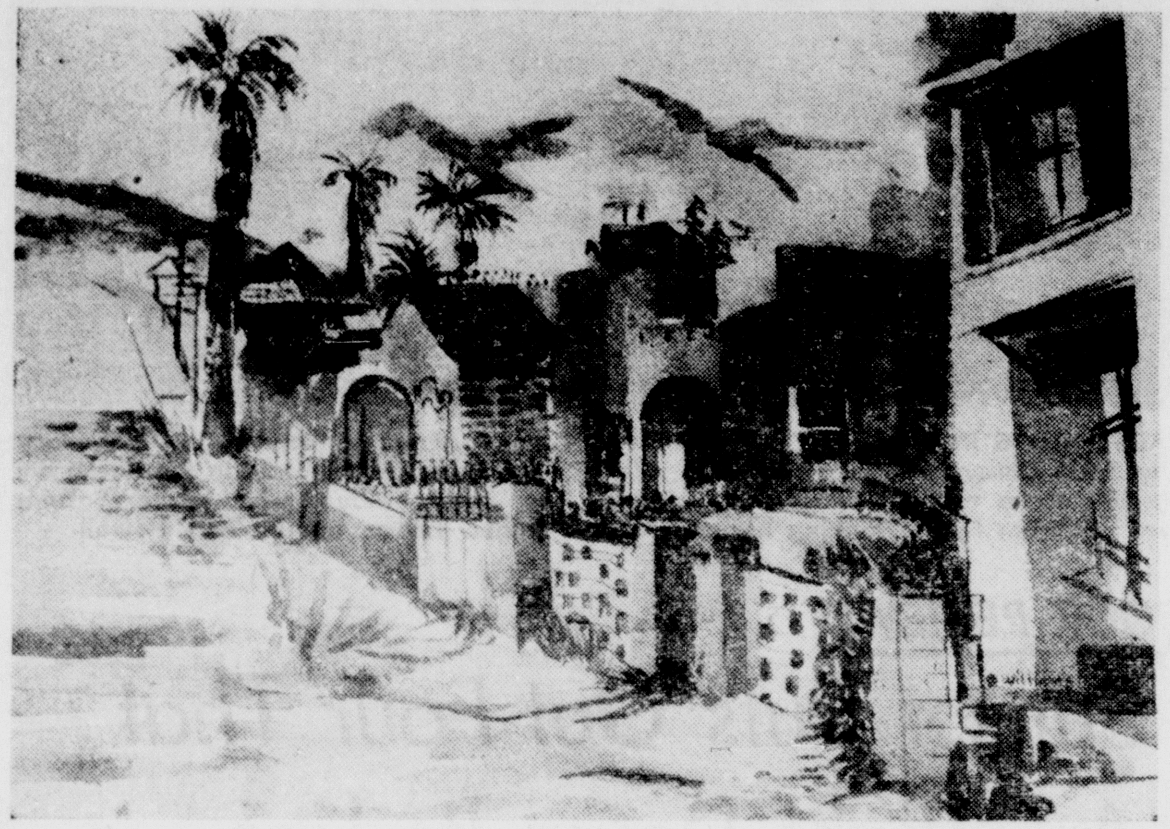
In clear, direct, and evocative prose, Wendell Berry has written in "Nathan Coulter", a novel of a boy's growing up in the tobacco country of Kentucky. It is a fine book.

The great English novelist, E. M. Forster, once wrote that an understanding of life comes less from the knowledge of good and of evil than from the knowledge of good and evil. This is the sort of understanding Mr. Berry has. Nathan and his brother, his father and Uncle Burley, his mother and Mandy Loyd are cruel-and-tender, loving-and-hating, creating-and-destroying, innocent-and-guilty, all at the same time. They are, in other words, human beings.

Mr. Berry writes about his country and its people with great skill and with a love that never turns into sentimentality. "Nathan Coulter" is a book about a boy's acceptance of the world as it really is, with all its absurdities and contradictions. It is also a world that can be outrageously and wonderfully funny.

Somebody has said that the sign of a good book is that when you finish it you feel like calling up the author immediately. "Nathan Coulter" is that sort of book, and it's good to know that Wendell Berry of Mill Valley is within easy phoning distance.

Arts And Entertainment



THESE WATERCOLORS, "Masts" at top and "Ensenada" below, are by Dorothy Williams. An exhibit of her paintings and work by another Marin artist, Mary Ann Fries, opens with a preview showing tomorrow at the Torrance Gallery in San Anselmo.

Gallery Staff Members To Show Art

The Torrance Gallery of San Anselmo will open a show of art work by two members of its own staff with a preview tomorrow from 3 to 6 p. m.

The artists are:

Mary Ann Fries (Mrs. William Fries) of San Rafael, mother of six children. She studied at Philadelphia's Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, then won a Cressan Scholarship to continue her studies in Europe. She is much in demand by parents of Marin for her life-like portraits of children, a favorite subject. She is a member of the Marin Society of Artists and has exhibited at the Frances Young Gallery in the Marin Art and Garden Center at Ross.

Dorothy Williams (Mrs. Robert E. Williams) of Kentfield. A graduate of College of Marin, she is primarily a watercolor artist. She has studied at the California School of Fine Arts in San Francisco and has exhibited at the Frances Young Gallery and the Dick Ford Gallery in Mill Valley. She is also a member of the Marin Society of Artists and the Friday Nite Art Group. She is also talented in ceramics.

Visitors are welcome at the gallery daily from 9:30 a. m. to 5:45 p. m.

"JOAN" is the title of this painting by Mary Ann Fries of San Rafael. Her portraits of children and young people are especially popular. This painting will be included in the show opening tomorrow at the Torrance Gallery.

Guild Orchestra To Appear With Basso, Choral Groups

Symphony Guild of Marin officers are hailing their final concert of the current series, scheduled for next Friday at 8:30 at Marin Catholic High School, as the most ambitious undertaking in the eight-year history of the Guild Orchestra.

The choral music of Moussorgsky's opera "Boris Godounoff" will be highlighted.

Members of three Marin choral groups — the Winifred Baker Chorale directed by Winifred Baker, the Marin Chorale led by Dr. John Milton Kelly, and the Mill Valley Light Opera Co. directed by Cary Smith—will join with guest soloist Roderick Risto and the orchestra.

Basso Risto recently sang roles with the Cosmopolitan Opera Company in San Francisco. Rated the most promising male singer in Southern California, he will sing at the forthcoming Carmel Bach Festival under the direction of Sandor Salgo who will also be conducting the orchestra and combined chorus Friday.

RODERICK RISTO
He'll be guest soloist

Salgo will also conduct the orchestra in the Verdi overture, "La Forza del Destino" and in Strauss' tone poem, "Don Juan."

Handy One For Student Of Politics

POLITICS 1960 edited by Francis M. Carney and H. Frank Way Jr., Wadsworth Publishing Co., 266 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Bill Hendricks.

For any student or even a casual observer of the fall madness this book is a handy piece to have beside his easy chair.

The basic issues and processes by which candidates are born, brought through a national political convention and finally elected are delineated here by top writers and students in the field peculiar to America—the two party system.

We liked particularly the Mark Sullivan piece — "The Nomination of Warren Gamaliel Harding." And those who are interested in who might be the 1960 nominee of the two parties might do well to read "The Nine Tests for the Presidential Hopeful" by Sidney Hyman.

Gold Rush Yarn Set In Panama

DANGEROUS CLIMATE by Diana Gaines, Doubleday and Co., 284 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown .

A historical novel that is neither much better nor much worse—nor much different in other respects — from most such work.

This one is laid in the Gold Rush days, but it never reaches the California gold fields. Most of the story takes place in Panama City where the adventurers congregated, awaiting ships to take them on to awaiting riches. This gives the author a colorful background.

Otherwise, there is the usual heavy emphasis upon sex. The usual brawling. The usual hero, the usual villain, and the usual struggle for the heart of the heroine.

It will provide you with a diverting, if not rewarding, evening.

Who-Dun-It Doesn't Jell

HOW I MADE A MILLION DOLLARS by A. Frank TAYLOR, Pageant Press, 234 pages, $3. Reviewed by Don Keown.

There is no more enjoyable and well-constructed "who-dun-it" with good character-reading than a well-plotted ization. This one, however, misses the target.

The successful mystery must be so believable and yet gripping that the reader feels he is an actual participant in the excitement. No such feeling results from this one. The plot is not sharply honed. And except for the two "leads," the characters are not clearly drawn.

The "veddy veddy" British detective and the well-stacked stenographer who assists him in the solution of the murder have possibilities. But the rest of the cast simply doesn't come alive. The result is something well short of a first-rate mystery.

Ross Players Feature Husband-Wife Teams

Two husband - and - wife teams will be included in the cast when the Ross Valley Players open their new production, "Sabrina Fair," next Thursday night in the Marin Art and Garden Center at Ross.

The play will continue on Thursdays, Fridays, and Saturdays for four weekends.

Playing the feminine lead will be Tykie Casey.

Her unsuccessful suitor, David Larrabee, will be played by her husband, David Casey. The Caseys reside in Larkspur.

Another husband and wife team which will appear in the cast is Fred and Carol Brylka of San Rafael. Fred plays Linus Larrabee Jr., also romantically involved with Sabrina. Carol plays Gretchen, ex-wife of David Larrabee. But the plot does call for her to go sailing once with Linus, played by her husband.

The play is a comedy dealing with "the idle rich."

John King is the director.

Others in the cast include Al Spalding, Ralph Alden, Iolanda Diner, Dora Blunden, Marv Silberberg, Sue Steinmetz, Dick Webster, Joanne Dunn, Harry Mack and Marjean Hedden.

A number of organizations have already signed up to sponsor performances of the play. Included are Marin County Humane Society Auxiliary, Thursday's opening performance; American Assn. of University Women, May 6; the Faxfairs, May 13; and the Church of the Nativity of Marin, May 20.

CABINS AND VACATION HOMES by the Sunset editorial staffs, Lane Book Co., 128 pages, $1.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

These four books all lie within fields which the Sunset staffs are well equipped to handle. The results are informative, well-written and excellently illustrated books certain to be of help to those interested in any of the four subjects covered.

The book on rose growing is an updated version of an earlier publication in the field, with the newer rose varieties, insecticides, fungicides and fertilizers now covered. How-to-buy and how-to-plant tips are, of course, included, along with "how-to" drawings, and photos in both color and black and white. John Paul Edwards, consulting rosarian, American Rose Society, is the guiding light.

"Garden Work Centers," includes plans for lathhouses, greenhouses, tool storage sheds, compost bins, potting areas, etc. There are 400 photos, drawings and plans as illustrations. The ideas are designed for both small and large gardens.

"Sunset Lawn and Ground Cover Book," is the second such Sunset book, the first, published in 1955, now being regarded as outdated because of the many changes in this field. Planting, watering, mowing, pest control, fertilizing, weeding and renovating are some of the subjects covered. A special chart shows which fungicides work on which lawn diseases.

Easily built cabins and vacation houses are currently enjoying quite a boom in the West as noted in your April 9 Marin Magazine. Sunset has asembled a number of intriguing construction ideas along with 250 photographs and 252 plans and drawings. There is also advice on the acquisition of land, site improvement, interior arrangements, care and maintenance, etc. An extremely practical book for one considering such a project.

If this edition of your Marin Magazine has served only to whet your appetite for gardening and the outdoors, then there is no better source for more detailed and specific information than books written by the experts on the Sunset staffs.

Of mighty warriors, knaves and kings.

Be still, wind! Mournful is your sigh
As you twist ghostlike through the rain,
And broken hearts intensify
Their anguish, in your sorrowing.

Be still, wind! Play your anxious game,
And promises you may rescind.
— But spare me the legerdemain
Of hiding sorrow in the wind!

BOTH DOUBLE AND single reed players can be seen here. John Leonis, foreground, plays the bassoon. Loren Donaldson and Heidi Hubbell are the oboeists. Barbara Woelz plays the English horn and Judy Curry the clarinet.

Teen-Age Orchestra Performs Tomorrow

Marin's musically talented teen-agers have been hard at work these past few months preparing for the Marin Youth Orchestra's annual spring concert, which will be held tomorrow at Marin Catholic High School in Greenbrae at 7:30 p.m.

This year the orchestra will be joined by the Tamalpais High School Choir, and the combined groups will perform the "Sacred Service" by Ernest Bloch, dedicating the work to the composer's daughter, Lucienne Bloch Dimitroff. Equally important is the premiere performance of "Overture to a Carnival" by Dr. Leonard Ratner of Stanford University, a composition written specifically for this orchestra, commissioned by the Symphony Guild of Marin and sponsored by Miracle Music and Marin Music Co.

Although both groups have undertaken a sizeable task in producing such works, it is not the first challenge either has accepted and met. At Christmas the Youth Orchestra joined with the Leona Norman School of Ballet to perform Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker Ballet," a difficult and exacting production with which the young people won enthusiastic acclaim from capacity audiences. Also this year the orchestra presented a concert at Redwood High School, and again won high praise for its musicianship and its high standards which conductor Hugo Rinaldi has has carefully adhered to since the orchestra's formation several years ago.

The Tamalpais High School Choir, directed by Robert Greenwood, has had a slightly different type of challenge. From some 250 auditioning choirs, Tam's group was one of 40 choirs chosen from California and Nevada to perform at Squaw Valley for the opening of the Winter Olympics. To take the entire 60 voice chorus was a real feat, for the expenses amounted to something over $700. Undaunted, the choir members themselves undertook the task of fund-raising, and made and sold over 1,200 candy wreaths to pay their own expenses. They were virtually the only group with 100 per cent attendance.

Director Greenwood feels that young people should know and appreciate the music of their times, and to this end has done much contemporary music during the past few years at Tam. The group's latest production was "Brigadoon," and before this they had done "Paint Your Wagon," "Down in the Valley," and "The Telephone."

In a different vein, they introduced the "Ceremony of Carols" four years ago. The sacred service will again be heard on June 2 at the choir's own program at Tam.

Greenwood explained that the service will be sung in English since the prose is so moving, although the group could sing the Hebrew text as well. Soloists in the Bloch work will be Joe Reade, cantor, Sita Dimitroff, the composer's granddaughter, alto soloist, and Lisa Mibach, soprano soloist.

UTTER CONCENTRATION is demonstrated here by violinist Lynn Danforth, left, and Paul McSweeney as the Youth Orchestra rehearsed for tomorrow's big concert. Photos are by Ken Reichard.

Also on the program tomorrow will be the "Pastorale Suite" by Lars-Eric Larssen and two works featuring instrumental soloists — the "Fourth Brandenburg Concerto" by Bach, performed by flutists Wendy Eisler and Pat Hurtado with violinist Robert Talmage, and the first movement of the Tschaikowsky "Violin Concerto" played by concertmaster Tom Reynolds.

For both orchestra and chorus, tomorrow's appearance will climax long hours of rehearsal.

But, their conductors say, a good turnout tomorrow will be ample reward for their young charges for their special efforts for one of their big events of the year.

Symphony Guild members are admitted free, and tickets for non-members may be obtained at the box office.
